Dear Sirs,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, for what she considered a terrible felon on her finger nail. The pain was most intense; but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone by in a few minutes.

Yours very respectfully,

Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I have frequently used it for Bowel Complaint, and I have never known it to fail in affecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarrhœa, summer complaint, and disorders of a similar character. I have also found it a never failing remedy for Colds, and for affections of the head. N. H. DOWN'S VEGETABLE BALSAMIC ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ!

Waterbury, Vt., Nov. 14th, 1859.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that may be relied upon, and is recommended to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.
Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When all others have proved ineffectual, the ELIXIR alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS,
COLDS,
CATARRH,
ASTHMA,
CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and ever since, in its primitive and improved state, proved an extraordinary result that it became, at once, a great Panacea. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases to which flesh is heir, originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

Above

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging Doctor's fees.

Literature.

How I won my Victoria Cross.

CONCLUDED.

Dr. Neil soon found there was little for him to do; in fact I had scarcely been stunned for the time by the shock; and, after strongly representing that quiet, he took his departure. Now quiet is a thing I am never fond of, and after an hour and I felt quite well enough to join the mess, though I was still a little dizzy. Here I was much considered indeed, especially by Black and Legge, who, with Captain White adjourned to my room after mess to have a quiet rubber. My bad luck still followed me, and whoever was my partner I contrived to lose steadily.

Presently Stoneleigh came in. He had evidently not supposed that I should be at seeing my card-parties.

"Will you cut in?" asked Black, to tender him, for he well knew he would not.

"I never touch cards, for I am convinced they cause more mischief than anything else except drink," he said with a glance at our glasses of brandy and water. "I am sure Derring," he continued "you would be far better without either to-night and they are no friends of yours who encourage you in them. I came for a quiet chat with you, but I must postpone it for a more favourable opportunity."

"What a lecturer!" said Legge with a sneer.

I was not in a very peaceful mood. I was annoyed at my accident, at my consequent loss of the race and stakes (only fifty rupees by-the-by), and still more at having victimized my backers, Alice among them. Then I was irritated by my continued bad luck with the cards; and though I had not drank much, what little I had taken had excited my shaken nerves. So at this declination, as I considered it, and at the affront to my guests, I must own I lost my temper.

"I can't say much for your politeness to-night, Stoneleigh," I said "but I know what is the matter with you. You would gladly have had my fall, to make mud from your head in Alice Selby's lap, and her dear soft little hands bathing your forehead. If I lost the race, however, I gained the prize," and as I spoke I drew from my breast the pansy glove. "You are jealous, man," I added tauntingly.

"It is false! utterly false!" he shouted.

I had never before seen him let his passion get the better of him, but now he was flushed, and I could perceive that each vein on his brow was swollen.

I have since thought that the very feeling I ascribed to him must have made my words rankle. Nothing but the sting of truth could have so aroused my fractious shaft.

He strode towards me with such a menacing air that I started from my seat, fully expecting him to attack me. But with a mighty effort he seemed to gain the mastery over himself, and, stopping short he said:

"No, I will not follow your example by bringing up the name of a lady I respect before men, who do not know what is due to her sex; it is conduct of which no true gentleman would be guilty," and with these few words he left the room.

"So the saint has not quite subdued the natural man," said Legge. "What a tirade! You cannot let such an insult pass unnoticed, Fred."

"Nor would I if I could," I rejoined. "Will you take him a message from me, Legge?"

"Willingly," he replied; and sitting down I wrote a short note asking for satisfaction, and bidding him name a friend with whom Legge might make the necessary arrangements. When he had gone upon his errand I sat puffing away at my cigar in silence, and Black probably seeing that I was in no mood for conversation, occupied himself in the same manner.

Legge was not long away.

"Well, who has he named?—Temple?" asked Black.

"No one," replied Legge. "When he had read your letter he said he would write a reply at once. I suggested that it was not quite regular; but he said in his cool way, that I might either go or wait for his answer, whichever I preferred. So, as there is no good quarrelling with him now, I staid for it. Here it is—perhaps it is an apology."

"No, he will neither apologize nor fight," I replied, as I glanced over the few lines Legge to me:

"The laws of both God and man forbid me to accede to your request. I will not commit either murder or suicide. If you had appealed to me calmly I might have borne that I spoke hastily and to a certain extent unjustly; but by sending me a challenge, you have rendered an apology quite an impossibility on my part. In no circumstances, would I have retracted my words, without a previous apology from you for your own expressions.

"HENRY STONELEIGH."

"Why, it is blank!" exclaimed Legge.

"Either coward or gentleman," I replied. "In fact, I will post him for a coward if he does not fight me!"

As I was coming off parade the next morning I ran against Captain Reid, who was walking arm-in-arm with Temple one of our Lieutenants.

"What is this I hear, Fred?" said Reid; "they tell me you have sent Stoneleigh a challenge. What is it all about?"

"He told me," I replied, "that an assertion of mine was false, and that my conduct was not that of a gentleman. He made apologies, or quel me."

"But even according to Black's account, which would not be the first time Stoneleigh, you must allow I could not pocket it quietly," said Reid.

"If I did," I replied, "it was in consequence of his insulting my guests and myself. He says (between gentlemen could stand, and then he thinks to escape the consequences by 'talking of the laws of God and man.' If he will fight I will post him as a coward!"

"Remember the Temple; if you could only bring yourself to withdraw. No one would believe it of him. I challenge (with his pistol) in his place, I would go off but it wants more pluck to refuse than to accept such a challenge; and, in the moral courage, we have seen him under fire often enough to doubt him. Think better of it, Derring."

As he finished speaking he turned off towards his own quarters, and Reid, taking my arm drew me on.

"Now my dear chap," he said, "I have something more to say to you on the subject. I can't frame any honest reconciliation with Stoneleigh though I think it would be your wisest course, but I must protest against your not pursuing a quarrel with which my sister-in-law's name is coupled up. If she very thoughtless and wrong of you to make her the subject of your disputes; such, her guardian, I have a right to call upon you not to give him the opportunity to do this."

In vain I remonstrated: he persisted in his request, and I was obliged to promise not to take no further step. At the same time I stated forcibly that I should call Stoneleigh dead; and Black and Legge, with one or two others, followed my example. Even of those who still spoke to him more than one seemed to look upon him rather chily. For several weeks he and I never spoke except on matters of duty, taking care to avoid each other as much as possible on other occasions. At the Mess there was little fear of my meeting him, for he now hardly ever set foot within their doors.

I found that there was such a change in Alice's manner to me, that I asked her if I had offended her, and she at once took me to task for taking such an unwarrantable liberty with her name. I told her how sorry I was that I had caused her any annoyance; and I argued (what I would dare confess not to no one but her) that I had spoken thoughtlessly, in a moment of irritation, for which I begged her forgiveness. With her usual gentleness she gave it at once, and ceased to treat me with coldness; but our old pleasant intimacy was not altogether restored. I fancied, too, that there was another change—that her spirits were not quite so good as they used to be.

This state of things continued for nearly a month, when, one fine morning, there was stirring news. A native, who could be relied upon, came in to tell us that the—— Native Infantry (one of the few remaining armed), after killing some of their officers, while others escaped, had descended en masse taking with them the regimental colors and money-chest. They had divided them selves into a body for no great distance from us. This was just within the radius to which we were ordered to confine our operations, if possible, but, having been lured by a few followers of a reputed friendly rajah, we had not hitherto interfered with it. One of our captains had been a guest of the rajah, and he said that all the works were undoubted, that we should find no great difficulty in taking it. He was classed with the color: I for nearly an hour, and then he came out with a smile on his face.

"He will try it," he said.

The next evening we were encamped close to the fort, ready to escalade it just before day-break. I was sitting in my tent, after mess, thinking of home, when I was startled by the sound of "God save the Queen" coming from the fort; for the mutineers had decamped with their band and instruments, and as this, as in other instances the loyal strains were still used by the dastardly rebels. My heart bounded with indignation, and I would gladly have advanced to the attack that moment.

The sound had not died away, when a orderly entered the tent.

"The order-book, sir, and a letter from Mr. Stoneleigh," he said, handing them to me.

My company I saw was to be in reserve; and next I glanced to the order for the assault. To my surprise three Stoneleigh's name to "command the scaling party." What could be his motive? He had never hitherto volunteered for such an enterprise, and now he was at the head of the Lieutenants, in the hope of promotion could hardly urge him on, when he must so soon get it in the natural course.

As soon as the orderly left me, I eagerly opened his note, and read:

"MY DEAR DERING—I will call you so once more, since perhaps we may never meet again that I have volunteered to lead the storming party. You and others have doubted my courage, because I acted according to my conscience; but I will prove that BOTH MAY BE CALLED friend is no coward.

"Yours,

"H. STONELEIGH."

This made me very uncomfortable. I remembered how many good qualities and kindness to me he had manifested in most disagreeable circumstances, and I felt more than ever grieved that I had treated him as I had done. By arousing him of cowardice, which I had never really believed, I had driven him to the very desperation I dreaded. Legge, a murderer! The idea was horrible, the more disturbed, I felt, I could not rest there with my hands before me.

I half resolved to go to Stoneleigh. But again I thought, what good could I do by that? I was too late to undo the past. At last I made up my mind, and, leaving my tent, I took my way to the colonel's. He looked surprised at seeing me so late, and when I delivered my errand he politely to join the scaling party—he sent me with a peremptory refusal. I protested that this unnecessary. One officer was enough, he said, and he would have no superfluous risk of life. Then I grew desperate. I told him all—how I had provoked Stoneleigh, I had challenged him for refusing, and how over-anxious on this occasion I was for the good name of that of a gentleman. He made apologies, or quel me."

"But even according to Black's account, which would not be the first time Stoneleigh, you must allow I could not pocket it quietly," said Reid.

"If I did," I replied, "it was in consequence of his insulting my guests and myself. He says (between gentlemen could stand, and then he thinks to escape the consequences by 'talking of the laws of God and man.' If he will fight I will post him as a coward!"

"Remember the Temple; if you could only bring yourself to withdraw. No one would believe it of him. I challenge (with his pistol) in his place, I would go off the colonel for leave to volunteer," I interposed; and we had quite time for a hearty grasp of the hand before Armstrong himself gave the word for our advance.

I had been under fire before, but it was the light of the battle-field could no quite characterize it; and as my every sense was on the alert to the different sounds of the night. Each instant I expected the deadly flash of bullets; but it came not. When it was possible that my friends might have supposed I had been killed, and, as I afterwards learned, they did not attempt to bring off my body. Where the ditch was passable, I was among the foremost; where it was not, I was one of the first to spring down into it. The ladders were set, and up we climbed, I being first on one, and Stoneleigh on another. I had not advanced many paces on the ramparts when we met. Our swords were flashing in the moonlight. After the first cut and thrust, I was aware that Stoneleigh was not before me. I looked round, and saw him engaged with a native officer, who was evidently trying to take him prisoner. I sprang to his assistance, and cut down the

THE COUNTY.

CONVENTION STARTED.

Much to our surprise, we were informed on Friday last that the desperate efforts of certain mal-contents to bring out a candidate in opposition to Col. Haultain had culminated in the selection of Mr. Charles Perry, who had consented to run.

WHO BROUGHT HIM OUT?

Messrs. Hutton, Stapleton, John J. Hall, Stetkens, &c., &c., enjoy the honor, we believe, of having brought forward Mr. Perry, who, we are glad to learn, has received no countenance whatever from those influential leading Conservatives that, previously, offered their support to Col. Haultain.

WHERE GARDINER IS AT?

Upon the announcement being made of opposition, the Attorney-General West was at once communicated with respecting it, and he promptly telegraphed his disapprobation of it. Thus the leader of the Conservative party in Upper Canada, and those most influential in that interest in the County, are friendly to the Colonel's return; and the Colonel is, also, the nominee of the Reform Convention. Who, therefore, owns Mr. Perry? He can only be the property of the mal-contents aforesaid.

THE ADDRESS.

On Monday morning an address, pro forma, was presented to the Electors of the County of Peterborough by their "obedient servant" Charles Perry, which appears elsewhere. A curious document is this same address. Mr. Perry, it appears, entirely agrees with Col. Haultain, politically; and, therefore, so far as measures are concerned, he says, in effect —The Colonel is sound; but (and what could be more desirable for his opponent?) he takes issue with the Colonel purely on personal grounds; in consolation, however, he oils the trailing bumper of his despatch with: "I hold him(the Colonel) in high and honorable esteem."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Mr. Perry, evidently, does not quarrel with the Colonel's judgment and as a man—he "holds him in high and honorable esteem." In both mind and heart, therefore, the Colonel seems to be perfectly satisfactory to His Worship, who, notwithstanding, opposes him. What does it mean? Is Mr. Perry entitled with a less omitted standard of excellence than the County will be—and does he imagine himself to be the embodiment of that superlative excellence? No; Mr. Perry could not so mistake either himself or the County. What, then, does it mean? On the surface he really seems to argue in favor of the Colonel's election—and for the simple reason that he has nothing whatever which he can straightforwardly urge against it.

THE CANVASS.

Owing to the absence of the Col., who went to Quebec on business connected with the Harvey road, in which business we are happy to say, he was entirely successful, the commencement of his canvass was delayed a day or two, but on his return on Monday last, the work began, and on Tuesday night, a large meeting of his friends resulted in the formation of, we venture to say, the most influential election committee ever formed in the County of Peterborough, who will vigorously prosecute the work. Col. Haultain has also arranged for meeting the electors at various points in the County as will be seen from the notice in another column.

The canvass, so far as the Col. is concerned, will be conducted in a fair and open manner, and in such a way that morality and propriety will have due respect; and we warn Mr. Perry not to count upon any want of legitimate effort on the part of the Colonels friends, as should he do so, he may enjoy the mortification of having reckoned without his host.

THE ISSUE.

The people are called upon to decide which of the two candidates is best deserving of the confidence of the county. Mr. Perry throws down the gauntlet to the Colonel on personal grounds, and has the affirmative to support. The Colonel has announced a meeting in the Town Hall on Saturday at 3 p. m., perhaps we shall then hear something definite from Mr. Perry.

Meantime, we may remark that there are many vile falsehoods respecting the Colonel current among a few who are either weak enough to believe or mean enough to circulate them, and which, like ostrea and chicken, will all come home to roost at the proper time. We may, also, say, that there is a degree of apathy on the part of some old friends of the Reform cause on account of the Colonel's course at the last election. To such we would say: never condemn a man unheard, and particularly when by condemning him you injure yourselves. The Colonel is as much entitled to your support as ever and there should be no question whatsoever in the mind of every true man as to the course before him. Mr. Perry, as a man, is not to be compared to Col. Haultain, who is an honor to any constituency.

To the friends of sobriety, morality, integrity and cultivated ability, we present the name of Col. Haultain, in the confidence that he will receive such a hearty, cordial support as will drive his opponent from the field.

The following gentlemen compose Colonel Haultain's

BIBLE SOCIETY DEPUTATION.

A large number of the friends of the British and Foreign Bible Society, assembled in the Canada Presbyterian Church, on the evening of Thursday last, to hear an address from the Rev. Mr. Gill, deputed to this Province by the Parent Society.

The choir was completed by R. Donaldson, Esq., who, after the opening exercises were over had called upon S. Robertson, Esq., the popular agent of the Upper Canada Branch Society, who spoke briefly of the subject of [illegible] and the principal part of the evening kept the audience deeply interested and highly entertained. The Rev. gentleman, it was said came "to convey the deep interest of [illegible] operations, and to draw us if possible into closer connection with the Elected Society." He dwelt, however, rather upon the general doings of the society and its deep interest in the world at large, but we are sure that few left the meeting without feeling that the connection between the branch here and the Parent Society was drawn closer and strengthened. Much was said to encourage all in the good work and to excite christians to devote thankfulness to Almighty God, for the abundant prosperity which seems to attend the Society.

A vote of thanks to Rev. Mr. Gill for his very able address was moved by Rev. Mr. Gilmour, and seconded by Rev. Mr. Boyce, which was carried unanimously; as was also a vote of thanks to the Parent Society for sending out the deputation, moved by Rev. Mr. Clement, and seconded by Rev. Mr. Roberts.

After prayer by Mr. Gilmour, and the benediction, one of the pleasantest meetings we ever attended in Peterborough terminated.

LADIES' SCHOOL.

The inhabitants of our busy Town and County will be glad to learn, by advertisement in to-days issue, that a want very much needed and felt for some time is about being supplied in a first class Ladies' Academy, under the management of Dr. and Mrs. Crowle, who, from their past experience and high literary attainments, will, we doubt not, make the School all that can be desired by their patrons.

The Doctor and his lady were engaged in general education of the highest order in England for many years prior to their emigration to Canada, and having testimonials at the end of seven years residence in the Province, will doubtless give the community full confidence in the academy and its effective management. We are glad they have selected our thriving Town as their future residence, and we most earnestly advise the respectable families of our frontier Towns to send their children here in preference to large and crowded cities such as Montreal and Toronto, where the epidemic diseases incidental to youth are all known to be more malignant and fatal than in healthy provincial Towns. We heartily wish the Doctor every success in his undertaking, and hope our more worthy and respectable inhabitants will appreciate his efforts, and give him that support which he so richly merits.

The following address was presented to him lately, unanimously signed by the Trustees and those among whom he was laboring:—

To E. T. Crowle, A. M., S. R. C. P.

SIR,—You have had charge of the Martha Grammar School now upwards of six years, and as the results of your excellent teaching are so very satisfactory, we, members of the Board of Trustees and supporters of the School, take this opportunity of expressing our confidence in your efficiency as a Teacher and ability in conducting a Grammar School. In your profession, as well as your private life, your conduct during our acquaintance has been such as to be above reproach; and so long as you continue in the praise-worthy course marked out and steadily followed by you, both as a Teacher and a citizen, we trust the day may be far distant when you will be severed from us, or when occasion may arise for us to desire the Markham Grammar School placed under the management of another.

Our estimation of your ability as a Teacher having been sustained by the opinion of all the Inspectors of Grammar Schools, also by examiners and visitors who have attended the different examinations, it shall ever be our endeavour to further the interests of the Grammar School, (of which Markham may well be proud, by sustaining you in your efforts to conduct it as heretofore. . . . . .

We cannot conclude this expression of the appreciation of your usefulness amongst us, without at least alluding to the merits and qualifications of Mrs. Crowle. Her teaching, though altogether independent of the Grammar School, has been of marked benefit to those who have availed themselves of the privileges extended to them. Though well qualified to instruct in various branches, she particularly excels as a teacher of music.

Accept, then, for yourself and Mrs. Crowle our best wishes for your welfare, and believe us it is our earnest desire that your merits may be rewarded.

Markham, June, 1864.

The adjoining testimonial from the Hon. David Reesor, will speak for itself:—

MARKHAM, November 12, 1863.

MY DEAR SIR,—I regret very much that you talk of leaving this place. I admit that you have a strong argument in favor of a change of residence, when you refer to the advantages to your family that are available in a population town or city, but which are partially out of the reach of residents of a rural village like Markham.

Should you determine to leave, I shall be happy at any time to bear testimony to the satisfactory and very efficient manner in which you, as Head Master, have conducted the Grammar School of this place, ever since your residence amongst us, a period of almost six years, as I have, during all that time, sent from one to three scholars to your school, and may, therefore, fairly venture an opinion as to your success as a teacher.

Should it prove of any service to your future position, I shall also take much pleasure in adding a word in behalf of Mrs Crowle, whom between to French, Music, and Drawing, have proved her to be a most efficient teacher, while her truly lady-like and amiable disposition, endears her to her pupils.

Hoping you may yet consent to remain a fifth longer in Markham,

I am, &c.,
(Hon.) DAVID REESOR, M. L. C.

Among the arrivals from England per steamer "Bulgarian" was Colonel Fletcher Lambe. The general object of Colonel Fletcher Lambe's visit to Canada, we have been informed, is to take charge as the Canadian agent of the English Company's operations. He is [illegible] under whose direction many other [illegible] have been established in this country, and his presence will spread over a district of immense extent. The settlement of a small and man in Hastings is a nothing indication of the English Company's proceedings.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE PETERBORO' BRASS BAND.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—If you would be so kind as to allow me the use of a small space in your valuable paper. I would like to give an explanation which, at least, concerns a portion of the community. I presume you are aware that the Peterborough Orangemen engaged the services of the Band, under the leadership of Mr. William Philip, to play for them on the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, (the 12th of July, 1863.) Since that time Mr. Philip and other members of the Band have not ceased to assert that the Orangemen have failed to pay them for their services. Not being satisfied with making this unfounded complaint in Peterboro and vicinity, Mr. Philip thought proper to write to the District Master of Port Hope, stating that he could not play for them on the coming 12th without security for his pay, as the Orangemen of Peterborough did not pay them for last years services. Now Sir, I think such a statement is very unjust as well as untrue. The facts of the case are these: the Orangemen contemplated engaging the services of the Peterboro Brass Band, and accordingly sent a deputation of the members to wait on the Band, who were then assembled in their Band Room. After some conversation regarding their terms, they stated there were fifteen of them, and that the least they would take would be two dollars each, which would be 30 dollars. The deputation reported accordingly and the terms were accepted, and the Band engaged on these terms. But on the morning of the 12th, instead of 15 they only turned out 10 members, which, at two dollars each, would make 20 dollars. They have been paid some 21 or 22 dollars, for which receipts can be produced, besides they were furnished with their dinner and other refreshments which were not agreed to be furnished. If it can be shown that the Band has any just claim against the Orangemen of Peterboro, I have no doubt it will be settled forthwith, as the Orangemen are in the habit of paying for their music.

I remain, Dear Sir,
Yours &c.,
J. SMITH.
Dis. Secretary.

KINMOUNT, Aug. 5th, 1864.

SIR,—As this section of country is now receiving a considerable share of public attention, concerning the exportation of its products, it will not be uninteresting to some of your readers to know what efforts are made to develope its intellectual resources. That such efforts are being made was fully demonstrated in this place last Tuesday. About ten a. m. of that day, the scholars of the common school, dressed in neat attire, were subjected in the presence of some of their parents and friends to the first public examination ever held here since Kinmount became the abode of the white man. The examination over and the unqualified approval of the teacher having been expressed, the juveniles marched to a previously selected spot in the adjacent woods, the two foremost carrying the significant motto "Knowledge is Power," and all singing the appropriate stanzas of "Come, come away." Having arrived at the appointed place, the reins of authority were slackened, a privilege no sooner granted than was accepted, and for a time both old and young regaled themselves in whatever way they pleased. In a short time, however, John Hunter, Esq., was called to the chair and order having been restored, the company was agreeably entertained with singing and recitations by the juniors and with speeches by the seniors. But in the midst of all these an interruption was made by the imposing spectacle the tables presented, for by this time they were loaded with the necessaries and luxuries of life, provided by the matrons and maidens, who formed no insignificant part in the business of the day. The chairman having yielded to the temptation, all present followed both his precept and example and partook of that "which cheers but not inebriates." After justice had been done in this respect and some more speeches had been made, bearing more or less on the important subject of education, prizes were awarded to the most deserving of the scholars. The lengthened shadows then bespoke the hour for separation, and after having made the forest resound with their hearty cheers for the respected teacher, Mr. Clarke, and having discharged the standard complements of such occasions, the meeting dispersed, each one feeling happy to meet, sorry to part, but hoping to meet again.

AN OBSERVER.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—As a rate-payer of this Town, I claim the privilege of protesting against what appears to me a piece of folly and extravagance: I mean the widening of the sidewalks on the Northern end of George Street. The present sidewalk is very good, and affords sufficient accomodation; no one complains of it; and while we have so little public money to spend, and are taxed so heavily for it, we do not think that money be judiciously expended. There are many streets in Town as thickly built upon as the North end of George Street which have never been graded, and which, owing to their natural roughness, are almost impassible. We would just say to the interested Councillors who are directing the public expenditure that the poor man is entitled to the same consideration as the rich, and that if he does not get it he will make his grievance known at the next election.

ECONOMY.

Peterborough, Aug. 15th, 1864.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

MINNOTA, Minnesota, }
Aug. 1st, 1864. }

SIR,—You will excuse, I trust, my intrusion upon your notice, but as I have been an occasional reader of your excellent paper, which I receive at short intervals from some friends of mine residing in the vicinity of your city, I thought probably a short contribution from me might not be unacceptable, and at the same time by a partial return for the pleasure I have derived from the perusal of your columns. In this distant and strange land, a pupil from dear old Canada is sent as an old acquaintance; or a letter from some loved one, the most welcome.

Minnesota will, doubtless, be my future home. I am connected with the Minnesota Central Railroad, formerly called the Minnesota, Portland and Cedar Valley R. R. This is a magnificent and delightful country, whether inexhaustibly fertile soil; the grandest and most picturesque scenery in the world; with a purity, dryness, and healthfulness of atmosphere that is rapidly giving it the place in the physical geography of Hygeine, which has hitherto been held by Italy and Cuba; it possesses all the qualifications necessary to render it the home of a great, prosperous, happy and free people. All the [illegible] of the elements and position indicate as the imperial domain of agriculture in its highest development, of an empire in reserving on the most perfect conditions, no longer isolated and rustic, but elevated to the rank of a glorious art by the appliances of science and mechanism—the garden of a civilization in which commerce shall be slave instead of mistress, to carry the influences and culture of citizen through the intricate and wide-embracing ramifications, in natural and artificial highways, to all the homes of [illegible] and rural in their virtues and [illegible] in their refinements. This is a glowing [illegible] by no means exaggerated, [illegible] I have a letter I have just received from a friend: "With a feeling upon the [illegible] the town of [illegible] Peterborough [illegible] and through the railways of [illegible] to the Rocky Mountains, there is no other State in the Union approaching Minnesota in the breadth of its commercial horizon, in the geographical range of markets, and facility and cheapness of access to every part of the country, except Pennsylvania; but it is Pennsylvania without a New York to intercept it or a Massachusetts to divert its trade. A soldier's destiny if yet to develop itself for the future of this young State as the inspiring consciousness and logical consummation of existing facts and tendencies in the physical and commercial world.

I have not time or space to follow this subject further; but if you desire it I will be happy to continue it for the benefit of your readers at some future time. Should you consider "The Rain" worthy a place in your poetical corner please forward a copy to me, at "Mandota, Minnesota."

Very respectfully yours,
JOHN BLANCHARD.

For the Examiner.

THE RAIN.

BY JOHN BLANCHARD.

Rain! Rain! Rain!
As if all the waters of all the seas,
Of the cloudy-shored earthquakes,
Had yielded to the centrifugal strain,
As the world revolved; and then,
Clouded in deluge as of old,
Thunder-troubled and lightning-scrolled,
Were drowning the pallism earth again.

Not a ray of light
From the numberless windows of Heaven falls
On the utter blackness which blinds the night;
Not a sound but the dashing against the walls
And the murmuring roofs of the vanished tears,
As the melted darkness surges down;
Or the eddying roar
Of far-off cataracts leaping o'er
Invisible cliffs into fathomless night.

My silent room,
In the midst of this shoreless waste of gloom,
With its lamp which glows,
Alone in the darkness infinite—
Like a moments bliss in a life of woes—
Is a symbol to me, as I musing write,
Of that central sphere whereon God dwelt
Ere the worlds were fashioned, or chaos felt
The electric thrill of resistless might
In the flesh which followed "Let there be light."

I somewhat see
In the lightning furrows which scorch the skies,
In the jewled mountains which earthward
reel,
What might have been when the shining keel
Of the first star ploughed Immensity;
When the billowy nebulae paused, aghast,
As the ship with its silent Helmsman passed;
And far irradiant from His eyes—
Thrilling inertias of the voids,
With systems, and senses, and asteriods—
Thought, crystalised in their falling, feet.

The roar of the rain
Sounds like the dithyrambic strain
Of the vitalized hosts ere they were born—
Ere their full life came with the primal morn;
A roar prelusive as this may be
To the Lydian music of land and sea,
Which another morrow with thirsting ear,
And a heart accordant may, kneeling, hear.

Rain on! Rain on!
The chilling darkness pervading space,
And the fay shadows within my heart,
When the desolate night at last has gone,
When the hope-crowned morning at last shall dawn,
When these dreary floods of pasting be o'er,
And Sarah shall rennest my heart once more,
Will to the abysmal depths depart,
Of their God-appointed place;
And their mystical meanings, one by one,
Be revealed in the newly risen sun.

MANDOTA, Minn., August 1st, 1864.

Burning of a Propeller on Lake Erie.

The London Free Press of the 12th inst. has the following account of the burning of the Propeller "Racine," written by Mr. T. Wright, of New York, who was a passenger on board. The loss of life occurred through a boat—loaded with passengers, endeavouring to escape—being struck by the screw and torn to pieces; fourteen persons were in the boat, and only one escaped:—

"The propeller "Racine," while on her way from Chicago to Buffalo, with a cargo of high wines and grain, caught fire when off Point-au-Pelee, at about half-past two o'clock a. m., on the morning of the 10th inst. Through the noble exertions of the Captain, Wm. H. Arthur, and the crew, most of the passengers were saved, with the exception of four passengers, who were lost by the swamping of one of the boats, also eight of the crew. After doing all that was possible, the Captain ordered the boats off. We lay around the burning steamer for about half an hour, when we descried a light to windward of us; it proved to be the propeller "Avon," Capt. Smith, bound down the lakes. We were taken on board, and everything done for us possible. After being on board until day-light, the Captain ordered a line to be taken out and attached to the vessel, and she was then towed down the lake for about thirty miles; when off Bond Eau she was run ashore and sunk in twelve feet water. After the sinking of the propeller, we started for Port-Stanley, reaching that place about ten o'clock p. m. All praise is due to the officers and crew of the "Avon."

OUTRAGES IN HAMILTON.

We are sorry to say that the past week has added to the list of crimes in this city, in two instances of more than ordinary outrage and audacity. We were in possession of the main facts connected with both of the outrages a few days ago, but refrained from publishing them, hoping that the police might the better succeed in arresting the criminals. On Friday night last, shortly after 12 o'clock, Mr. William Sanderson had locked up his establishment on King street, and was proceeding homewards, when on the corner of Wellington and Barton streets he was felled to the ground by a powerful blow on the left side of his face. He lay for a short time senseless, and when the powers of perception returned he found that his pockets had been searched. Fortunately he had no money on his person, and even his gold watch had been left the preceding day with a watchmaker to be repaired, so that the robber or robbers obtained no booty whatever. The night was very dark, and as Mr. Sanderson knows that he could not identify the person who struck him, it is feared that the scoundrel will go unchipped of justice. Even after he had fallen the ruffians struck him several times with strong clubs, and inflicted such severe injuries that Mr. Sanderson was confined to his house for some days. He is now, however, able to attend to his business, but still bears the marks of the blows he received.

Another daring instance of highway robbery occurred on Wednesday night last at about eleven o'clock in front of the Clinton House, the particulars of which are as follows: Messrs. Gilchrist & Co., timber merchants, employ a large number of salesmen during the summer season at this port, and the wages are paid weekly by Mr. John Gilchrist, a member of the firm. On the evening of the day mentioned Mr. J. Gilchrist it would appear had [illegible] in his pocketbook, out of which he paid sundry labourers $180, leaving $800 still on his person. When returning home with this money in his possession he was accosted by two men, one of whom enquired what hour it was? Mr. Gilchrist said he could not inform him, on which he was pounced upon by both men, one of whom "throttled" him and rendered him incapable of offering the assistance. The other robber rushed in plundering Mr. Gilchrist's hands behind his back, and whilst thus employed [illegible] the pocketbook containing the money, and in fact in the twinkling of an eye [illegible] "clear" away in the possession of the police to overtake the rogues, and perhaps convict the offenders. We hope the authorities will use their utmost endeavours to bring the perpetrators of these atrocious outrages to justice. It is high time that unarmed peaceable citizens should be allowed to return home from their daily avocations unmolested and without their lives being put in peril.—Spec.

A Strange Episode in the Life of a Soldier.

HE FAILS HERE, AS A PORTION—A WORD OF ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

At the first battle of Bull Run, there was a soldier by the name of Wilcox, who, like many others on that memorable occasion, straggled from his command. After walking, or rather running, for several hours, he became very much fatigued, and after taking good precaution that there were no rebels either within sound or sight, he lay down to sleep by the side of a fence, and slept surely and soundly during the night. Late in the morning, and when the sun was near midnoon he woke to find himself in a strange land, and perhaps among the interest encentre of his country. But the demand of hunger soon silenced the voice of prudence and caution. Seeing a stately mansion on a hill in the distance, surrounded by beautiful parks meadows, orchards and evergreens, artificial fountains and natural streams of clear running water, in fact everything to show that it was one of the first-class old Virginia plantations, the home of courtly elegance and refinement.

Our soldier, tired, with a weary step and fainting famishing heart, knocked at the door of the mansion. He was cordially received, for the Virginia planter was faithful among the faithful few. He remained long enough to recruit his wasted energies and get information as to the most direct road to Washington. But the memory of the young soldier was not forgotten by the planter, nor his manly bearing and genial temperament. The soldier re-enlisted in another regiment, and at the second battle of Bull Run, was severely though not dangerously wounded. He was taken to the hospital at Washington. His old Virginia friend learned of his illness. He sent to the hospital and obtained an order for permission to take him to his own home. He was removed, when through the kindness of the planter and the attentions of his daughter the young man gradually recovered. A tender regard sprung up between the young lady and the young soldier, and to cut very short the story he such cases made and provided, usually take, they were betrothed. The soldier returned to his Northern home on furlough. While here he learned of the sudden and severe indisposition of her who was soon to become his bride. He hastened to her side, and buried her corpse. The old man before many weeks had elapsed told the young man that he intended to make him his heir, that he had no children left, and no relative except those who were in rebellion, and that he should now share with him his estates. He at once gave him a deed to a considerable property in Chicago. The young man a few weeks since visited that modern miracle and Babylon combined, and found that his little Chicago fortune would realize the handsome sum of $200,000, being offered $60,000 for a single block to which he had fallen heir. But this is not all in the strange and eventful story. The old man has recently died, leaving all his fortune to this young Union soldier, which is now known to be over $500,000.

THE CROPS IN THE UNITED STATES.—We are receiving good reports from all parts of the country respecting the crops. From New England we learn that the damage to what may be called the staples of that section has not been so great as the exaggerated accounts from particularly exposed localities would lead the country to suppose. The hay crop was very large, and has been secured under circumstances universally favourable. Probably a fully three-quarters crop of potatoes will be raised, and onions—a large product of New England—promise an extra yield. In the West, of the great staples—wheat and corn—nearly an average crop will be harvested. The chinch bug has not committed half the ravages we were led to suppose, and the late copious rains have probably totally eradicated that pest for the season. In many portions of the West corn and potatoes never looked better at this season or promised a heavier yield. The fruit crop, in spite of all the terrible stories about the ravages of the canker and other worms, will probably be large. Early apples have suffered to some extent; but the winter crop is very promising. Peaches are plenty and fine, and are reaching market in large quantities. On the whole, accounts are decidedly favourable, and we have reason to be thankful that to the horrors of war is not to be added the scourge of famine.—N. Y. Herald.

A TOWN CAPTURED BY A GUERILLA.—The Owensburg, Kentucky, Monitor says:—"A few days ago a "solitary horseman," of the guerilla persuasion, appeared upon the outskirts of the city of Curdsville, on Green River, and, after a brief reconnoissance, wherein he assured himself that there were not more than thirty-five men in the place, he made a bold dash upon the city, taking its occupants completely by surprise. As there was no gunboats in the river to "shell" him or bombard the town, he proceeded leisurely to his work of Plunder. He loaded himself with dry goods from the stores, and obtained from safes, which opened at his bidding, a few hundred dollars in green backs, and then left the town. We are happy to chronicle that he did not burn the city, steal any horses, nor kill any one, though he made a villainous attempt at murder, discharging his pistol at a storekeeper who was a little dilitory about opening his safe. It is due the gentle citizens of Curdsville to say that they were unarmed. One man told the robber that he would give him bustle if supplied with implements of war whereupon the guerilla replied approving, and complimented him for his courage."

The Editor of the Montreal Pilot, Sept. 7, 1864, says:—

There is not hesitation yet take so much pleasure in recommending to our friends as Dr. Grant's Compounded Bitters. Unlike most proprietary medicines, it does not pretend to cure all the ills that flesh is heir to, but simply Dyspepsia and its attendant symptoms of derangement of the stomach. It has long been held in favour by our first medical men; some of whom are never backward in awarding much where it belongs. Its success in this city has given it a reputation surpassed by no other similar preparation. Our attention has been called to this subject by a young man in our office who had been suffering for some weeks severely from indigestion, loss of appetite, &c., having been entirely relieved in a few days by the use of these bitters; there are hundreds who will read this who need such a medicine, and would use it if they had half the confidence in it we have.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Wherever Civilization has penetrated, these Pills are in demand. The stomach, the lungs, and the intestines, are the organs most assailable by disease in all climates, and upon these, the remedial action of this medicine is rapid, thorough and invariable. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and No. 244 Strand, London, and by all druggists. If the reader of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to us, 80 Maiden Lane, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicine on hand because they can not make as much profit as on other persons' make. 25., 62½ and $1 per box.

PRINCE OF WALES.—The Prince of Wales will now, thanks to the skilful and diligent management of his father, enter into an enjoyment of an income of $240,000 a year, and a half million of ready money from the revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall. This is a nice little sum of money for an annual dividend, but with all this vast amount of money which will be under his control, it will not go so far as to relieve rheumatism, pains in the side and back, tooth ache, burns, bruises, frost-bites, &c., as a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," which is sold by all Medicine Dealers, at the low price of 25 cents per bottle.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR THROATS!—This is just the weather for getting a sore throat, hoarseness, cold in the lungs, &c., and a box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, sold for 25 cents, by all Druggists, will not only prevent such ills, but cure those already upon you.

R. W. Poole & Co., Belleville.

Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in informing you that the use of Mr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, I am fully convinced, has been the means of saving my life. I have been troubled with a severe cough, and pain in the side, which did not leave me summer or winter. In October the symptoms increased alarmingly, and so reduced was I that I could not walk but a few steps without resting to recover the pain and fatigue which an effort so exertion occasioned. At this period I commenced using the Balsam of Wild Cherry, and before I had taken half a bottle I found myself materially relieved, and after having used four bottles I was completely restored to health. I have also used the Balsam in my family ever since, and find it to be a most valuable medicine for all diseases connected with the throat and chest. In fact, I consider it the best medicine in the world for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, and Consumption, and I feel confident that no one who will give it a fair trial will be disappointed in its effects.

Yours truly,
J. ZEALEY.

ARE YOU BILIOUS?
THERE IS A WELL-KNOWN REMEDY FOR ALL

Holloway's Pills.

Be of Good Comfort! The Sick may yet be Saved!

Holloway's Ointment.

THE history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact, that ulceration, and in WEAKNESS MANY internal diseases exists, the disinfecting, searching, and healing properties of the Pills are fully equal to its subduction and cure, and that with the Ointment, they are

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history written by one man, or even derived from the experience of one nation. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the state of every country—an unimpeachable record, the like of which has never been collected in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a reliable medicine to meet the sad and calamities of the suffering portion of humanity, and one entirely free from mineral and other deleterious properties, was severely felt till this all powerful medicine was entered into the world. HOLLOWAY'S INVALUABLE PILLS have, therefore the unbounded homage of all hearts. Their excellence is to prevent as well as to cure; they attack the RADIX or root of the complaint, and thus, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the decaying energies of the system, assisting nature in her task of VITAL and PERMANENT reconstruction.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to violate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the stained or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs FROM THE BLOOD ITSELF, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by enervating a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

Is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this beautiful but effective preparation. At the two periods of life in which the female system undergoes the most important and critical change, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements can at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatsoever form disease attacks the liver, it is repelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistable curative. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organ, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a certainty which astonishes the sufferers and their friends. Let the sick whom the faculty have abandoned, resort with confidence to this powerful anti-bilious agent, and a restoration to health and activity will be the unerring result.

Dyspepsia, Diarrhœa, Weakness, &c. &c.

The terrible bodily and mental pangs which characterize Dyspepsia are at once mitigated by the Pills. Diarrhœa, constipation, headache, physical prostration, nervous tremors, hot flushes, spasms, affections of the kidneys, hemorrhoids or piles, and, in fact, all internal complaints, from whatever cause arising, give way before the salutary influence of this extraordinary remedy. As a specific for dyspepsia, and the disorders connected with it, or growing out of it, the Pills are always to be relied on when every other medicine and mode of treatment has utterly failed.

Holloway's Pills are the best Remedy known for the following diseases:

Asthma,	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints,	Indigestion,
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflamation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness,
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dropsy,	Lowness of spirits,
Diarrhœa,	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venereal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

CAUTION.

If the readers of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on other persons' make.

None are genuine unless the words "Holloway New York and London," are discernible as a Water Mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicines or vending the same knowing them to be spurious.

 Sold at the manufactory of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes, at 25 cents, 62 cents, and $1 00 each.

There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

MONEY!

To loan on Real Estate.

D. W. DUMBLE,
Solicitor, Peterborough.

TO THE ELECTORS of the COUNTY of PETERBOROUGH.

GENTLEMEN,—

The honourable demise of the late member for this County again calls upon you to exercise the privilege of choosing another to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

I have been requested by many to offer myself as a candidate at the forthcoming election, and under circumstances, which have induced me to place my services at your disposal during the present Parliament.

The persons lately proposed by our leading public men, and the combination of the political parties of the Province, call for a suspension of partizan contention, urge to cordial co-operation, and would render inappropriate remarks or explanations as to their past respective merits or demerits.

I apprehend that any man at present offering himself for the suffrage of the electors, less chiefly to confine himself to the expression of his opinions relative to the political questions entered into with a view to certain constitutional changes.

Were this combination formed under ordinary circumstances, or for ordinary purposes, the wisdom and expediency of it might justly be called in question; but considering that it was formed under circumstances fraught with danger to the United Province, and for the special object of remedying existing difficulties, it merits our highest approbation—and, I believe, must tend to raise in the public estimation the character of all concerned in it.

It has my entire approval; and should the forthcoming election result favorably to myself I am prepared to give the present Administration my cordial support in carrying out the important objects for which it has been formed.

That so good a prospect is before us of being able, peaceably to settle difficulties of no ordinary character, is matter for devout thankfulness; especially when we regard the disturbed condition of the world generally, and of this Continent, in particular; and it should be the prayer of every one who recognizes an over-ruling Providence in the affairs of men and nations, that God's blessing may be vouchsafed, in order to perfect that which has been so well begun—and permanently to establish peace and justice in this portion of the dominions of Her Majesty, our Gracious Sovereign.

There are three matters of general and abiding importance that will exist and call for special notice, whatever may be the issue of present arrangements. They are: our Militia and Defence, our Finances, and the Settlement of the Country.

As regards the first of these, my opinions have undergone no change. I have only to iterate my great dissatisfaction that matters so peculiar and complicated in their nature should have been wholly committed to the vagaries of inexperience and consequent incompetence. Whilst glad to see some steps in the right direction, I hope the time is not far distant when a system will be adopted which will afford increased and really efficient military instruction to our population, and yet be commensurate with our resources, and adapted to our circumstances.

The subject of our finances has been one of much anxiety to every thinking man, and I shall cordially support every wise measure for regulating our expenditure according to the means and resources of the Province; and also will hail with pleasure every honest effort made to carry out the wise spirit of our constitution, which requires that public disbursements should be kept strictly under Parliamentary control.

The settlement of the Province is a question that must necessarily engage much of the attention of the Member for this County. I think we have every reason to expect that a more liberal system will be adopted than has hitherto prevailed; and that by united effort on the part of all interested, we may secure better communication with the back country, and thereby ensure its more speedy settlement. I have undertaken a matter of importance in connection with this subject, which will require my presence at Quebec next week, and circumstances alone can determine the course I shall be called upon to pursue as regards the canvass of the County.

I take this opportunity of thanking very cordially those who have, without solicitation on my part, tendered me their support. I am not insensible to their good will, nor to the responsibilities that it may entail upon me.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
F. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro', August 1, 1864.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN:

An Election will take place in September or October next, when you will be called upon to choose a Member to represent the Trent Division.

Having been elected by your confidence in 1863 to fill up the unexpired time occasioned by the decease of the late Hon. E. Murney, and the resignation of the Hon. Sidney Smith, I have during the past year devoted as much of my time as it was possible for me to do in attending the two Sessions of Parliament, and also in attending to the requests of such of the constituents as have seen fit to honor me with their land and other matters, not immediately connected with Parliamentary duties.

We are almost beginning a new era in the history of the politics of our country. The present move in the formation of a Ministry who pledge themselves to bury the feuds of the past, and to work together for the general good of the country, by bringing such measures before the next Session of Parliament as will tend to a final settlement of the sectional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada, demands our serious consideration.

I may be permitted to state that I shall accord to them a fair trial, and whether in or out of Parliament, to assist by every means in my power the consummation of so desirable an object; trusting that Upper Canada may receive that which she is justly entitled to, and that both Provinces will be greatly benefitted by the change.

I have concluded from the numerous personal requests, as also by letters from many parts of the Division, to again place myself at the disposal of the Electors, and if again honored with your confidence, to discharge the trust committed to me in as satisfactory a manner as possible.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Yours &c. &c.

FASHION.

The young men now-a-days must all wear a tail,
With a whisker, a moustache, a cane and all that
With their short-tailed coats they think they look darling;
Why will they not wear to be in the fashion?

Don't talk of the girls and what they will wear,
And talk of their caps hanging on to one hair,
But there's reason for all, 'tis the reason for that
Is they don't want their beauty hid under a hat.

Their faces are fair and they want you to know it,
And those caps came in fashion on purpose to show it,
Whereas men's are rough, but I don't want to chide them,
Yet I think a moustache adorns in fashion to hide them.

So young men don't always be looking with scorn
When a new fashion comes the fair sex to adorn,
For remember while you are a laughing at them
They still can see something conspicuous in men.

Varieties.

LOAD YEAR.—It was on a cold, cold evening, I had sought my downy bed; early visions, strange, fantastic, chased each other through my head. I was in a crowded ball-room, and he leaned upon my arm, and I felt his heart within him beating wildly in alarm. Crimson blushes, deeply dyeing, all suffused his handsome face; madly did I long to clasp him in a passionate embrace. On my cheek I felt his breathing, and his whiskers touched my hair, and his bosom heaved in raptures when the music filled the air. Then I lowly bent and whispered, for my heart was warm with wine; whispered I, in trembling accents, "Dearest, say will you be mine?" Tottered then his knees beneath him, and he merely gasped once more; then all motionless, and lifeless, sank upon the waxed floor. As he fell I heard a ripping, as when cloth is torn apart; but methought it was rending of the tendons of his heart. When with care I had revived him, there he lay and feared to move; said I, "Whisper, whisper to me, tell me what's the matter, love?" Then his lips they slowly parted, and his eyes sent such a glance as with flattered accents said he, "Lore, I fear I've burst my pants!"

A KIND JUDGE.—A very learned and compassionate judge in a Western State, on passing sentence on one Jones, who had been convicted of murder concluded his remarks as follows:—"The fact is, Jones, the court did not intend to order you to be executed before next spring; but the weather is so very cold; our gaol is unfortunately in a bad condition; much of the glass in the windows is broken; the chimnies are in such a delapidated state that no fire can be made to render your apartment comfortable; besides, owing to a great number of prisoners not more than one blanket can be allowed to each, and to sleep sound and comfortable is therefore out of question. In consideration of these circumstances, and wishing to lessen your suffering as much as possible, the court, in the exercise of humanity and compassion, do hereby order you to be executed to-morrow morning, as soon after breakfast as may be convenient to the sheriff, and agreeable to you."

DONALD NOT IN A HURRY.—Many years ago, when those who were compelled to suffer death by the law, had more choice than they have now of the particular tree upon which they should be hanged. A Highlander was sentenced to death for some crime or other of which he had been found guilty. The judge, after passing sentence, said, addressing the prisoner, "Donald, it only remains for you to choose the tree, from which you are to be hanged." "Well, then," said Donald, "if her nainsel maun be hanged she be in no way particular; but if that her nainsel will just choose a gooseberry-bush" [gooseberry bush]. The judge whereupon remonstrated with him, saying, "it would not be large enough." "Och!" said Donald, "she be in no hurry; she will just wait till it grows."

"STAND BY THE FLAG!"—A gallant officer in the regiment raised not a hundred miles away, who never quailed under the fire of rebel bullets, fell an easy victim to a pair of bright eyes, whose owner wore an apron bearing the emblem of our country's flag, and who was waiting on "the boys" at a festival. The Colonel wishing to make the acquaintances of the lady remarked: "That is a pretty apron you wear, Miss." "Yes," said the maiden "this is my flag." "I have fought many a hard battle under that flag," rejoined the colonel. "Not under this flag, sir," indignantly exclaimed the beauty, as she swept away, leaving the gallant son of Mars perfectly dumbfoundered.—Catskill Recorder.

Some years ago it was the custom in New York city to fire sunrise and sunset guns from the battery on the river. An emigrant ship was slowly coming up one summer evening and a knot of Hibernians on deck were stering about in undisguised astonishment when the report was heard. "What's that?" asked one. "That," replied a sailor, contemptuously, "that's sundown; you greenhorn." "Holy Moses," exclaimed the astonished Irishman, "an' does the sun go down in this country wid a clap like that!"

"I was married," sighed a blooming dame, "but alas! I know not of my husband he be dead or alive. I heard that he was accidentally killed a few weeks ago, and I am going to ascertain whether the report be true or false." "Well, I've got a dead sure thing on my husband," remarked another lady, "for I saw him buried six weeks ago."

A very fat men who was drafted in Boston supposed he would be exempted on account of his obesity, but was accepted. He was known to be rich as well as fat, and the Board of Enrolment supposed he would furnish a substitute or commute, and asked him which he would do. To their surprise he refused both and told them "to bring on their uniform." The Board changed its mind and exempted him.

To give brilliancy to the eyes, shut them early at night, and open them early in the morning; let the mind be constantly intent on the acquisition of human knowledge, or the exercises of benevolent feelings. This will scarcely ever fail to impart to the eyes an intelligent and amiable expression.

Beauregard sends word to Richmond that Butler is all right, and Butler telegraphs to Washington that he is all right. Perfect harmony seems to exist between them on this point, and, no doubt, Jeff. Davis is as pleased about it as he was when Butler voted sixty-four times for him at the Charleston Convention.

Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of seventy five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally discussed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

N. H. DOWN'S
VEGETABLE BALSAMIC
ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE
WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt.,
Nov. 24th, 1859.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.
Late Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS,
COLDS,
CATARRH,
ASTHMA,
CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases to which flesh is heir, "originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

ADULTS

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

THE SONG OF THE BEES.

Flying out, flying in,
Circling the hive with ceaseless din,
Now abroad, now at home,
Busy through wood and field we roam.
Here in the lily-cup, there in the clover,
Gather we sweets the meadow over.
Food in our young we carefully take;
Pollen we bring, and wax we make;
A band of us shapes its tiny cell;
Another fifflows, completing it well.
Working all, working ever,
Suffering idlers among us never,
Never pausing to take our ease;
Oh, busy are we, the honey-bees!

Flying out, flying in,
Circling the hive with ceaseless din,
Now abroad, now at home,
Cheery we stay, and gaily we roam.
Never too harried to greet a brother,
With feelers crossed we talk to each other;
Never too selfish to share our stores;
Some seek them abroad, some use them indoors;
Unitedly guard we our homes from harm,
Stationing scouts to give the alarm.
So, working all, and working with will,
Providing in summer for winter chill,
Whirring and buzzing, nor caring for ease,
Oh, cheery are we, the honey-bees!

Flying out, flying in,
Circling the hive with ceaseless din,
Whether abroad, or whether at home,
Loyal we stay, and loyal we roam.
In royal apartments our queen-bee is reigning
We render our homage unmingled with feigning:
Lovely we bow as we pause by her side;
The choicest of food with her we divide.
Thus working all, and working with heart
Each striving good to the whole to impart,
Busy and cheery, we think not of ease,
And loyal are we, the honey-bees!

Flying out, flying in,
Circling the hive with ceaseless din,
Whether abroad, or whether at home,
This lesson we teach wherever we roam:
Mortals, like us, go labor answerably,
Work with thy kind, and work with them cheerily;
Duty fulfil, whereso'er thou may'st owe it;
Where honor is fitting, fail not to bestow it;
It matters not whether at home or abroad,
Be faithful to man, and be loyal to God.
Thus work thou well, and work thou ever;
The lessons we teach thee thou must not disever;
Be busy, be cheery, be loyal—for these
Are the truths thou may'st learn from the honey-bees!

MY LADY'S DREAM.

'Go away, Lucy!' exclaimed Lady Emily Stanley. 'There is no use in the world in your strewing feathers, flowers and frippery on the couch, for I tell you once for all, that I will not go to Lady Mary's soiree to night.'

'But my lady,' remonstrated her maid, 'here is the dress, the very dress you ordered of Maradon; only see how lovely it is, and such blonde! I am sure no one ever saw such a blonde!'

'Do you really mean so?' asked the young lady, turning her eyes languidly upon the tempting and elegant finery. 'But no matter I am ill, out of spirits, out of humor, and will not go; so put everything away, and bring me the "Dream of Sorrow." No—that's too melancholy; the magazine—no, that's too political, prosing as Lord Henry—that odious Lord Henry! I never saw a man in my life waltz so ungracefully. I wish some of the book selling people would publish a new something, for lately new books, with one or two exceptions, have had nothing new in them. I suppose you have not got any books, Lucy?'

'Oh, no, my lady, none that you would read, I am sure,' replied the discontented damsel, displeasing rather than arranging the assemblage, she had laid out with so little pride on the satin couch in Lady Emily's dressing room.

'How do you know whether I would read them or not? What are they?' demanded her young mistress.

Lucy stopped and holding up her pretty fingers that seemed formed expressly for the duties of a lady's toilet, counted, The Bible, Gregory's Legacy, two volumes of Clarissa Harlowe, The Vicar of Wakefield, The Housekeeper's Assistant, Shakespeare's Plays, a Dream Book, and a few songs. 'That's all I can remember, my lady.'

'A pretty mixture, to be sure,' said the young lady; 'only, Lucy, it astonishes me that a girl of your sense should have such a silly thing as a dream book in your collection. It is not only silly but wicked to be superstitious, and you must not give way to such follies.'

'No, my lady.'

'It is so absurd to place any faith in dreams.'

'Yes, my lady.'

'Now, dost you think so, Lucy?'

'Oh, I suppose your ladyship knows.'

'But what do you think, Lucy?'

'Why, indeed, my lady, I think, if I may take the liberty to say so, that they are divine inspirations—that is, sometimes. And I've known many dreams that have come out as clear as the stars in the heaven, all of themselves.'

'Silly girl!' exclaimed her young mistress. 'But I should like to see your book, just to pass out how ridiculous it is.'

'I'll fetch it directly, my lady,' said the apposit waiting woman, muttering to herself when fairly in the ante room 'Ridiculous indeed! She had a dream last night, and wants to find out its meaning, notwithstanding all she said about superstition. I never know a young lady yet that wasn't curious after prophecies, fortune telling, and the like. But never mind, its possible that I can read her dream as well as the book.'

Outwardly the Lady Emily was as like the thousand and one young ladies, who, to use a popular phrase, 'shed lustre upon the recent drawing room,' as it was possible for any young lady to be. She was pretty, accomplished, generally good natured, seldom capricious, animated, and more gentle than the most Earl's daughters, deemed to the inheritance of eleven thousand per annum.

She was, however, vulnerable, and if she be 'proof as cuirass[illegible] for [illegible] she [illegible] for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE COUNTY.

CONTINUED.

On Friday last Col. Haultain addressed a large meeting at Keene, he was well received, the feeling in Otonabee, by the way is very strong, great more favorable to him than many other parts of the County, evidently with a view to injure Col. Haultain if possible. Some of these have endeavored to tie connection with the Short estate. One we heard to the effect that he had loaned Mr. Short $500 before the assignment, and afterwards paid himself out of the estate. This in particular we are told is extremely absurd. Now, we are in possession of all the facts connected with Col. Haultain's assignorship and are in a position to say, and do say emphatically, that the above story is totally false. Col. Haultain never loaned Mr. Short one cent but did he, nor could he, have become the assignee of Mr. Short from any motive of self interest. He generously and frankly upon being requested by an old friend to do so, allowed himself to become the third trustee in the place of the Hon Andrew Jeffrey, who had declined to act. The stories which have been circulated about this estate, are really tiresome. Men who spread them seem to forget that everything connected with it is a matter open to every one interested, the assignees are all responsible men, and everything done by them with the estate may always be ascertained. It surprises us that men of any degree of sense whatever, can entertain or relish for three silly and absurd stories, which must originate either with grossly ignorant persons, who are unable to discern the truth, or with lonely, unscrupulous creatures, who stick at nothing in electioneering. In the face of all the falsehoods and misrepresentations, however, that have been abroad, we are happy to say, that the Colonel met with a pleasant reception at Keene.

THE MEETING AT PETERBOROUGH.

On Saturday afternoon, a large meeting assembled in the Town Hall, when Wm. Claxton, Esq., was called to the chair. Colonel Haultain gave a very able address, in his usual open, straight forward manner, and was warmly received. He invited any one who had aught to say against him to question him, but none came, after a considerable time had elapsed and ample opportunity had been afforded to any one who so desired to accept Col. Haultain's invitation, it was moved by Robert Nicholls, Esq., and seconded by Robert Downtown, Esq., "That the meeting pledges itself to support Col. Haultain," which motion was carried, but two persons holding up their hands against it, and one, was so heartily laughed at that he, (perhaps thinking the place too hot for him) quickly put the walls of the Hall between himself and the meeting. A vote of thanks to the excellent chairman and three right good cheers then followed, but the fun did not end here.

A SPEAKER ON THE OTHER.

An eccentric looking individual in a diminutive and rather antiquated swallow-tail, was recognized by the crowd, and loud cries of "Hall!" "Hall!" brought him to the platform. This most remarkable personage excited most uproarious mirth on the part of his hearers, harangued the laughing multitude on Mr. Perry's behalf.

THE MEETING AT NORWOOD.

This was, also, a capital meeting. The feeling is decidedly with the Col. in and about Norwood, and we are informed that he will poll a much larger vote in Asphodel than he did at his last election.

WHERE IS MR. PERRY?

Can any person inform us of the whereabouts of the Mayor? He has never met the Col. since to face at any one of his meetings. How is this, Mr. Perry? Are you afraid to stand up before Col. Haultain? And why? Would you not be compelled to agree with him as entirely as you appear to do by your address, and then recommend him to the electors of the County of Peterborough as a fit and proper person to represent them in Parliament? Yes. As we said in a former article, there is nothing whatever that Mr. Perry can straightforwardly urge against Colonel Haultain. So Mr. Worship don't hesitate yourself to open, straightforward manner to secure his election. He prefers to call his own enemy as gently and let those who follow in his train and who hesitate not to calumniate an opponent and spread falsehoods, tell theirs.

WHAT WILL THE COUNTY DO?

In plain, unvarnished English, let us ask the intelligent County of Peterborough if they have any reason to resist the claims of Col. Haultain and give Mr. Charles Perry the vacant seat in our Legislature. Col. Haultain was brought forward at the urgent and repeated solicitations of men of standing of both shades of politics. Mr. Perry, although he professes to oppose him has made public no one single ground of opposition. He may be too modest to say that he wants to bought himself, as every man has a right to do if he does it legitimately; and he certainly cannot want to benefit the County by entering it into an election contest, which, besides its expense and inconvenience at the season, generates so much that it is always to be deplored; for he supposes, by his public address, endorses Col. Haultain, and is not, we are persuaded, weak-enough to imagine that he can keep aloof to the cause of the County. He is no speaker, has no Parliamentary experience, and has no influence among those in the House; for the Attorney-General West disapproves of his opposition, and the President of the Council evidently opposes the return of Col. Haultain—and these are the two great leaders, and represent their respective followers, besides there are many other things, which we need not add, sufficient being before us. In short, there is nothing at all to recommend Mr. Perry to the County, and there is another effort from the electors a heavy augmentation of confidence in Col. Haultain. What the County will do therefore, if it does its duty to itself to its excellent and staunch friend Col. Haultain, and to the Province, will be this: It will carry Col. Haultain by PARLIAMENT with two-thirds majority which occupies so it is in favour any election.

THE RAILWAYS.

It is a fact that a line designated as a "Feeder & Convey" ran over the virtual course of both the Port Hope Lindsay and Beaverton Railway and the Midland and Peterborough Branch. The amalgamation of both in Port Hope—though a matter of great importance, in consequence was so quietly effected that few understood or knew anything about it until it was completed. Which for which spoke we will be very much mistaken if we see it to no advantage. But this is not—Feeder & Co. have, without notice or flourish of trumpets into the most important concern held by private individuals in Canada. It is the old story—Originators never get the benefit. After struggling, [illegible] have only left us to look on for a song what cost, perhaps, hundreds of thousands.

We commend the new comers, by buying up for a nominal consideration the interest lately acquired by the Bank of Upper Canada, are sole controllers of the roads. They will, of course, work the road at such low expense that the old companies. They carriage will, as we are told, pay the Bank in few years, after which, they, under the pressure of applying the profits on the bonds &c., (now owned by themselves) will produce the carriage. When we tell you that in addition to the passenger traffic which is enough to pay the running expenses—the corn, goods will carry which may at any moment fall of supplies, you can get a fair idea of the profit of the concern. Besides all this, Feeder & Co. may sleep easy comfortably inasmuch as that old demon nightmare of the low pass and the Port Hope people picking holes in the Lease of the Branch now no longer troubles them.

The effect upon Cobourg is to cause a further depreciation in the Market of the Cobourg and Peterborough bonds, stock, &c. Upon Peterborough it is hard to tell what the effect will be, further than this. The new owners are concentrating all their shops &c. at Port Hope, the head quarters of the road—for this we cannot blame them, but, we lament the fact, as, besides removing a considerable number of mechanics, it will prove a great loss to our Foundries, Hardware, Handmade and others whose business, to a considerable extent, was dependent on the Railway.

It has this further effect,—It will prevent the extension of the Chemong Branch. Whether that extension would be for the benefit of Peterborough or not is doubtful. Judging from the effect of Railways extending beyond, and leaving behind their former Termini, we would say that the extension would be injurious; but of this we are certain—that shops near the new company commands both branches, there would be no object in having two feelers about the filling of one mouth would only rob the other without giving more food to the common stomach. We hope that under the new management such a liberal policy will be pursued as will not compel the people of Peterborough, in self defence, to reconstruct the now, almost forgotten, yet only sleeping Cobourg road.

AMONG THE AMERICANS.

A more lengthened tour among the Americans, reaching over five or six States, only serves to strengthen our belief in what we advanced in our last letter. A tremendous effort is being made to unseat LINCOLN—everywhere we have gone, dissatisfaction prevails. Nor is it limited to the white race alone; the colored men, indolent by nature and not endowed with more than ordinary courage, see little hope for them but, the draft. Everyone complains that the draft is unfairly conducted; that whilst the rich man has many avenues of escape, the poor many, and, above all, the poor colored man, has not the smallest chance. A mass meeting to organize an opposition to LINCOLN was held in [illegible] on Thursday evening last. We are but a poor judge of numbers when they are an enormous go can the meeting. The LINCOLN papers say there were not over 20,000 present, whilst the opposition papers put them down at 120,000. The throng was immense, resulting in one dense mass as far as the eye could see. Perhaps we would not be doing injustice to either party if we drew a medium between the two and call them "75,000." We never saw a more excited crowd, whilst it swayed to and fro like some mighty army; nor was it at all unwarlike in its character;—cannon were being continually fired off—and the excited crowd, as it writhed hither and thither, gave vent to imprecations both loud and deep. Platforms were erected in four or five different places, and were occupied by speakers who vented their indignation at the mismanagement of the Administration in a way that carried conviction, apparently, to the heart of every hearer. They charge LINCOLN with incompetency; they style him a buffoon, who, in the most solemn moment, must vent his jest and tell his story—"That reminds me of an anecdote," says old Abe—and then, lest the business be over too serious, he must tell his story, however silly or inopportune. Each speaker, in turn, or rather, many at once—for there were a number addressed that large throng—declared LINCOLN was incompetent, that he was first raising the country, that he had drafted over two millions of men and that they were all lost in this fratricidal war but an inconsiderable number—that the land was filled with mangled men mangled in inglorious battle, and all through the mismanagement of the Administration. They declared that LINCOLN and his friends were fattening on the downfall of the country, and that the war was carried on only to enrich speculators; that battles were fought and victories won or lost as best would enable the speculators in the LINCOLN interest to add to their already enormous fortunes. It would be impossible to state in the length of a letter all that was urged, and powerfully urged, against the President; but if one could believe his detractors, he is really unfit for his position. It seems strange how their prejudices come from;—one of the speakers declared that ere three days we would hear that GRANT was retreating from Petersburg, and on Wednesday, or on Sunday evening we heard eager crowds in the streets of Albany chronicling the news that GRANT was taking away his cannon from the front of Petersburg, half was about to raise the siege—that the campaign was virtually at an end—everyone seems tired of the war—scarcely a family but has lost one of its members, nor would they care so much, they say, had the issue one. there may good. We have seen, in our life, many a dismissed people, nor thought it possible for any mass of men to fall so bitterly a national calamity as the Americans feel above. Greeley is not now the subject of abuse vented on he was but a few short months ago; he has miserably failed, and failed in most of his predictions did, after boasting of what he would do. It was an ordinary day for Greeley popularity that he would fail, it cost on that line if at such and manner.

CORRECTION.—Through a pure misunderstanding had between the writer and his informant, the name of Mr. Stetson was introduced into our editorial of last week. We were glad to learn that the gentleman named had no connection with Mr. Perry, and we regret that his name should have been incorrectly placed before the public.

☞ In the issue of last week, we mentioned that the Rev. J. S. Douglas would preach at Dummer and Burleigh, which should have read Dummer and Belmont, on the 4th, 11th and 18th of September next.

☞ We notice by the Toronto papers that two of our fellow townsmen, J. F. Donnistoun and H. H. Loucks, Esqs., passed their Law examinations at that city, the latter having also passed his examination for an Attorney. We wish them every success.

☞ The proceedings of the North Monaghan Council have been received, but too late for this issue; they will appear in our next.

☞ Col. Haultain's Central Committee will meet at their rooms over Hon. S. Smith's Law office, to-night at ½ o'clock.

Sir,—[illegible] the times [illegible] beginning [illegible] on the [illegible] Ireland [illegible] Ireland [illegible] Ireland

TO THE ELECTORS

Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,

The kind and flattering manner in which you received me when I had the honor of addressing you on the hustings in this town, in July, 1861, and the handsome support you gave me at the polls, will ever be gratefully remembered by me.

After the dissolution I have determined upon offering myself as a candidate for your suffrages, and I have only to add that I shall be pleased to meet you in the Exhibition Building, Peterborough, on Monday next, at 12 o'clock, when I shall be happy to explain my views upon the questions of the day.

I agree with Colonel Haultain that the movement towards municipal union in the Province of Canada West, whose political youth has so long been retarded by the existence of this Province, is a measure which deserves the support and confidence of every true lover of his country; consequently the question between us is one more exclusively personal in its nature; and when you by your votes will be called on to determine by whether the one candidate or the other is more worthy, in your eyes of discharging, faithfully, of your votes.

For myself, I may say that I come before you as an old Reformer, and as such I have always been considered, and I trust I have not been found wanting in the principles of the old Reform Party, which have been so long identified with and supported by the old Canadian Liberal Reform Electors who, long before the Union, advocated those principles by which we have worked successfully under the Responsible government by them obtained and their courage.

I may further say that I was loyal to the principles of the old Reform Conference, whose views I have followed; and never can deny but that the results secured by their principles have had the greatest and most beneficial effect on the welfare of the country.

During local meeting you for the last five and twenty years, at one time largely interested in the growth and trade of the County, sufficiently conversant with the wants and necessities of the large and growing country in our rear, I may safely claim an advantage, in this respect, over my opponent.

I fully recognize the immense importance of economy in the management of Governmental expenditure, and I pledged as your representative shall withstand in my place in the Legislative Assembly any attempt by any government to spend money without the consent of Parliament being first obtained.

I consider the defences of the Province a subject of the greatest importance, and one which any person entrusted with your confidence cannot over-look, provided that a due regard to economy in the organization of the proper force employed be observed.

The internal resources of this County, as vast and important, its magnificent promises of future wealth from both forests, timber and minerals, require but the aid of good communications to make us as we ought to be, one of the most thriving and prosperous communities in the Province.

On this subject I may mention that the Bobcaygeon, Beaubeare and Burleigh Roads, in connection with the projected road from the Township of Dummer, across Stony Lake through the Township of Burleigh, will receive every assistance in my power.

To those gentlemen who have professed me a hearty and cordial though unsolicited support I cannot be too grateful, and I can assure them that no effort on my part shall be wanting to promote the interest of the County as desired by them.

To my opponent I may take the liberty of saying, that I hold him in high and honorable esteem and although I have announced our contest to be personal in its nature, it is by no means with an offensive meaning towards him or his supporters.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servant,
CHARLES PERRY.

ARE YOU A SUFFERER?

A WELL TRIED REMEDY AT HAND FOR ALL!

Holloway's Pills.

Be of Good Cheer! The Afflicted may be Saved!

BY THE USE OF

Holloway's Ointment.

THE history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact that even the most desperate cases, such as confirmed and long standing ulcers of the Limbs and Body, gangrene of the Flesh and even Cancer itself, can be cured when the great and confiding of every true lover of his country, to comprehend the question between us is and must necessarily be entirely personal in its nature; and when you by your votes will be called on to determine by whether the one candidate or the other is more worthy, in your eyes of discharging, faithfully, of your votes.

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This latest history written by one man, or even dared from the experience of one nation. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the dust of every country—an indisputable enough, the like of which has never been collected in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a sterling medicine to meet the ills and necessities of the suffering portion of humanity, and one entirely free from mineral poisons, deleterious vegetables, was severely felt till this all powerful medicine was ushered into the world; HOLLOWAY'S INVALUABLE PILLS have become the unrivalled manner of all nations. Their attributes it is to purify as well as to cure; they attack the BLOOD as soon of the complaints, and then, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the drooping energies of the system, enabling nature to her task of VITAL and PERPETUAL REPURIFICATION.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the PILLS? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the refined or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs treat THE BLOOD itself, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

Is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this harmless but effective preparation. At the two epochs of life in which the female system undergoes the most important and critical changes, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements can at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatever form disease attacks the liver, it is repelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistible curative. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organs, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a celerity which astonishes the sufferers and their friends. Let the sick whom the faculty have abandoned, resort with confidence to this powerful anti-bilious agent, and a restoration to health and activity will be the unerring result.

Dyspepsia, Diarrhœa, Weakness, &c. &c.

The terrible bodily and mental pains which characterize Dyspepsia are at once mitigated by the Pills. Diarrhœa, constipation, headache, physical prostration, nervous tremors, hot flushes, spasms, affections of the kidneys, hemorrhoids or piles, and, in fact, all internal complaints, from whatever cause arising, give way before the salutary influence of this extraordinary remedy. As a specific for dyspepsia, and the disorders connected with it, or growing out of it, the Pills are always to be relied on when every other medicine and mode of treatment has utterly failed.

Holloway's Pills are the best Remedy known for the following diseases:

Asthma,	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints,	Indigestion,
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflamation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness,
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits,
Diarrhœa,	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Venal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

CAUTION.

If the readers of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on other persons' make.

None are genuine unless the words "Holloway, New York and London," are discernible as a Water Mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicines or vending the same knowing them to be spurious.

 Sold at the manufactory of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes, at 25 cents, 62 cents, and $1.00 each.

TO THE ELECTORS

PETERBOROUGH.

Gentlemen,

The impartial decision of the British government which has recently been made known, to exercise the privilege of electing another to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

I have been requested by many to offer myself as a candidate at the forthcoming election; and under circumstances which have induced me to place my services at your disposal during the present Parliament.

The course lately pursued by our leading public men, and the combination of the political parties of the Province, call for a suspension of partisan contention, yea to individual co-operation, and would render inappropriate remarks or comparisons as to their past respective merits or demerits.

I apprehend that my mode at present adopted for the exchange of the electors, has ability to confine himself to the expression of his opinions relative to the political combination entered into with a view to certain constitutional changes.

If by this combination formed under existing circumstances, or for similar purposes, the wisdom and expediency of it might justly be called in question; but considering that it was formed under circumstances fraught with danger to the United Provinces, and for the special object of remedying existing difficulties, it merits our highest approbation—and, I believe, must tend to raise in the public estimation the character of all concerned in it.

It has my entire approval; and should the forthcoming election result favorably to my wish, I am prepared to give the present Administration my cordial support in carrying out the important objects for which it has been formed.

Then as proof a prospect is before us of being able, peaceably, to settle difficulties of no ordinary character, in matter for devout thankfulness; especially when we regard the disturbed condition of the world generally, and of this Continent, in particular; and it should be the prayer of every one who recognizes an over-ruling Providence in the affairs of men and nations, that God's blessing may be vouchsafed, in order to perfect that which has been so well begun—and permanently to establish peace and justice in this portion of the dominions of Her Majesty, our Gracious Sovereign.

There are three matters of general and abiding importance that will exist and call for special notice, whatever may be the issue of present arrangements. They are: our Militia and Defences, our Finances, and the Settlement of the Country.

As regards the first of these, my opinions have undergone no change. I have only to reiterate my great dissatisfaction that matters so peculiar and complicated in their nature should have been wholly committed to the vagaries of inexperience and consequent incompetence. Whilst glad to see some steps in the right direction, I hope the time is not far distant when a system will be adopted which will afford increased and really efficient military instruction to our population, and yet be commensurate with our resources, and adapted to our circumstances.

The subject of our finances has been one of much anxiety to every thinking man, and I shall cordially support every wise measure for regulating our expenditure regarding to the means and resources of the Province; and also will hail with pleasure every honest effort made to carry out the wise spirit of our constitution, which requires that public disbursements should be kept strictly under Parliamentary control.

The settlement of the Province is a question that must necessarily engage much of the attention of the Member for this County. I think we have every reason to expect that a more liberal system will be adopted than has hitherto prevailed; and that by united effort on the part of all interested, we may secure better communication with the back country, and thereby ensure its more speedy settlement. I have undertaken a matter of importance in connection with this subject, which will require my presence at Quebec next week, and circumstances alone can determine the course I shall be called upon to pursue as regards the canvass of the County.

I take this opportunity of thanking very cordially those who have, without solicitation on my part, tendered me their support. I am not insensible to their good will, nor to the responsibilities that it may entail upon me.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
F. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro', August 2, 1864.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE

TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN:

An Election will take place in September or October next, when you will be called upon to choose a Member to represent the Trent Division.

Having been elected by your confidence in 1863 to fill up the unexpired time occasioned by the decease of the late Hon. S. Murney, and the resignation of the Hon. Sidney Smith, I have during the past year devoted as much of my time as it was possible for me to do in attending the two Sessions of Parliament, and also in attending to the requests of such of the constituents as have seen fit to honor me with their land and other matters, not immediately connected with Parliamentary duties.

We are about beginning a new era in the history of the politics of our country. The present move in the formation of a Ministry who pledge themselves to bury the feuds of the past, and to work together for the general good of the country, by bringing such measures before the next Session of Parliament as will tend to a final settlement of the sectional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada, demands our serious consideration.

I may be permitted to state that I shall accord to them a fair trial, and whether in or out of Parliament, to assist by every means in my power the consummation of so desirable an object; trusting that Upper Canada may receive that which she is justly entitled to, and that both Provinces will be greatly benefitted by the change.

I have concluded from the unanimous personal requests, as also by letters from many parts of the Division, to again place myself at the disposal of the Electors, and if again honored with your confidence, to discharge the trust committed to me in as satisfactory a manner as possible.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Yours &c. &c.

H. CALCUTT'S

Compound

Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 3 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to supply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

COPLAND'S ALE!

A LARGE QUANTITY

OF

COPLAND'S

Celebrated Sparkling Pale Ale,

CONSTANTLY ON HAND BY

LEWIS GLOVER, Sole Agent.

Peterboro, Oct. 26th, 1863.

Notice.

"To Illustrate the extravagance of the people of Boston, even in these war times," observed Dansenay——to his wife, after a recent visit to the city, "I will tell you of an incident that occurred at one of the famous oyster saloons there. I was taking a stew and a cup of very fine coffee, when I presently overheard one of the waiters call out, at the top of his voice, "one strawberry for No. 56!" "One strawberry!" exclaimed Mrs.——. "Yes, my dear, one strawberry, and what a feast it must have been, of a verity! But that is not what I was coming at. As I rose to leave he unless, my curiosity tempted me to enquire the price of a strawberry. "Fifteen cents," ordered [illegible] "and, mercy on me, what a shame our garden patch wasn't filled with strawberry beds!"

Old Judge——, who resides out for from Cincinnati, is known as one who never pays a debt, if it can be avoided. He has plenty of money, however, but a jolly, rollicking, [illegible] style of doing business, when, of course, coats friends take care of him. Not long ago he fell into the hands of a man who had his note for a sum of money, and as it was a just charge, the man filled into the old Judge's wallet, took out the amount, and put the note where the money had been.

When the Judge awoke to consciousness, as was his wont, he took out his wallet to count how much money he was out:

"How did I spend all my money?"

"You paid off that note I held," answered the friend.

"Well," muttered the Judge, quietly depositing of his wallet, "I must have been very drunk."

To Thousands Poor.—The Flobert Chronicle has a comical story about a man who had a peculiar flap, and had bought some swine, applied to a neighbor for the loan of a pig-trough, when the following conversation ensued:—

Mitheth Young, I have bought two tooth and pigth, and wish to put them in your pen till to-morrow.

Why, Mr. Fisher, my pen will not hold a twentieth part of them; what in the world are you going to do with two thousand pigs?

Understand me, mother; I don't thay two thouthand pigth, but two thouth and pigth.

I hear you! two thousand pigs for one family! the man is certainly crazy.

Mitheth Young, tell you a pain I don't mean two thouthand pigth; but two thouth and two pigth. Oh—Oh—Mr. Fisher, that's what you mean. Certainly my pen is at your service, neighbor.

A little boy, disputing with his sister on some subject, we do not now remember what, exclaimed: "It's true, for me said so; and if me says so, it's so, if it ain't so."

An Irishman was once brought before a magistrate charged with marrying six wives. The magistrate asked him how he could be so hardened a villain. "Please your worship," said Paddy, "I was trying to get a good one!"

A schoolmaster was once accosted by a post office clerk, who inquired of him why a post office resembled a bachelor's hall. "Because," replied the ready wit, "there are nothing but mails in it."

"Will you give them pennies now?" said a big secretary to a little one, after giving him a severe thumping.

"No, I won't——"

"Then I'll give you another pounding."

Moved away. Mr. told Dr. Franklin once Dr. Franklin says, take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves."

An editor speaking of the sentiment a contraband received from a drunken woman whom he was endeavoring to take to jail, says she hiccked and called him about as freely as if he had been her husband. How fellow.

As a specimen of grammar given recently here. In the copy, the short hand the future corrupts.

The proper [illegible] you "drive to destruction," now learn that she will have to walk back.

Large Loss.—An organ grinder playing at the fair of the Ladies' Aid Society suffered a loss of a girl for a voluntary [illegible].

THE undersigned, while thanking the public in general for the liberal patronage they have bestowed on him, since his commencement in business, begs to state that he continues to manufacture his celebrated
PATENT WATER-DRAWER!
AT HIGHER RATES.
You must remember that by buying one of my Water-drawers, you get your water pure, which you cannot do by a suction Pump. I warrant them NOT TO FREEZE, and to stand as long, if not longer, than any Pump; and, besides, you save over fifty per cent. I can sell them cheaper than any Pump-maker in Canada! If anything goes astray by fair play within one year from the time of purchase, I bind myself to re-place it; so you cannot be deceived. Now, any one who is in need of a Pump would do well to get one of my Water-drawers at once. I have two teams out at all times to deliver them, and persons residing at a distance will receive prompt attention by sending a letter to the undersigned.

VEGETABLE BALSAMIC
ELIXIR.
A CERTIFICATE
WORTH A MILLION.
An Old Physician's Testimony.
READ!
Waterbury, Vt., Nov. 24th, 1858.
Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit: that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.
I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, when over I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases leading to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.
I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having used it personally while the dear Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He [illegible] one of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of [illegible] first class Vegetable and perfectly safe.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When all others have proved insufficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for
COUGHS, COLDS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, CROUP,
Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.
Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.
For no more than half the disease [illegible] which [illegible] their origin [illegible] from colds, so this may be considered a [illegible] remedy for Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Tonsilitis, Sore Throat, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Asthma, Consumption, Bleeding at the Lungs, Pain in the Side, Chest and Back, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Want of Appetite, Debility, Nervousness, Low Spirits, Female Complaints, Worms, Wind Colic, &c., &c.
Much might be said of its wonderful properties and unequalled virtues, but the limited space of this advertisement will only admit of a general summary.
It is prepared with care: great pains being taken to elicit an exact proportion of each of its ingredients, in such a manner that, the combination shall be, in every respect, at once more rapid in its operation, and more effectual than any other similar medicine.

TANNER'S GERMAN OINTMENT is an article that has long been found in daily demand all the United States, and is recommended by many Physicians in their practice for the cure of Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Tetter, Barber's Itch, Chilblains, Chapped Hands, &c. (From a Minister.)
Dr. Tanner,
Dear Sir,
Your German Ointment I have used in my family for a good many years and consider it a very good article for Salt Rheum. I was advised on at one time that I was compelled to leave my pulpit, but after using it by rubbing it into my arm for a short time, my eyes began to grow stronger and got better. I am now able to read, [illegible] as for all my parts.
Respectfully yours,
Rev. Henry W. Ross.

Dr. Tanner,
If a person [illegible] his hands deep into corrosive [illegible] and [illegible] Ointment [illegible] it will [illegible] in the Market. Dr. Tanner, the Inventor, we do in our satisfaction, has made this Ointment [illegible] preventive for other [illegible]. At the present time, there are [illegible] of cases and every person, having a great many hands at the [illegible] employed to put it up. The Ointment does not contain any ingredient injurious to either man or beast.
Dr. Tanner,
Dear Sir,
I was in the summer of 1863 afflicted with the rheumatism. I was so troubled to use your system. I used your Tanner's German Ointment as you directed for about two weeks when I began to get better. I am now able to walk [illegible]. I have frequently used it for Bowel Complaint, and I have never known it to fail in effecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarrhea summer complaint, and disorders of a similar character I have also found it a never failing specific for Colds, and the affections of the head. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

Why is it that farmers [illegible] the use of so many good medicines sold at the drug stores? Simply because it hurts their business and nothing else. If a man is ill and is not [illegible] he is not profited in any way. The almighty dollar seems ready and to [illegible] from the truth. A great many run a doctor (they do not find as well as usual) and recommended doctors' bills, without with a little common sense and watchfulness it could be avoided. Doctor Tanner has been a physician for over 40 years, and in making mention of the above items from experience, has seen it in his own practice. He has been called up a great many times in the night to go 6 or 10 miles in the country to see persons, and other suffering all the time, found no nutrient hardly wanted. Whereas if they would have taken a dose or so of some remedy commonly kept about the house it would doubtlessly would have cured them. The time has arrived when the people should have [illegible] to do with the enforced, monopoly doctors. One in an average the most of doctors bills is easily out of a hundred. A Dr. is called, he leaves the poisonous stuff that takes thousands to our early grave, making the family believe where the patient takes it, that it contains necessary, and [illegible] it will get hurt him.
VALUABLE TESTIMONY.
Dr. Tanner,
Dear Sir,
Whee you called at my house urging me to try your Ointment for my Rheumatism, I had little or no faith in it. I took it more to please you than myself. I began to make applications of it, continued doing so for nine days and nights, renewing the Oil about every 12 hours. After using it for six days, my rheumatism was better, and in nine days the dreadful disease left me. I was so bad that my limbs was drawn up, keeping me in my bed. I hope every body afflicted with the rheumatism will give your German Ointment a trial.
Your obedient servant,
Nathan Rogers.

BE KIND.

I would not hurt a living thing,
However weak or small.
The beasts that graze, the birds that sing,
Our father made them all;
Without whose notice, we have read,
A sparrow cannot fall.

'Twas but the other day,
I met a thoughtless boy,
Bearing a pretty nest away,
It seemed to give him joy;
But oh! I told him it was wrong
To rob the little feathered throng.

I passed another by,
It seemed a saddening thing,
To see him seize a butterfly
And tear away its wing;
As if devoid of feeling quite:
I'm sure that this could not be right.

The patient horse, and dog,
So faithful, fond, and true,
And o'en the little leaping frog,
Are oft abused too,
By thoughtless men and boys, who seem,
Of others' comfort not to dream.

Yet surely in our breast
A kindlier soul should dwell,
For 'twas our blessed Lord's request
To use his creatures well;
And in his holy book we find
A blessing given to the kind.

THE MERCHANT'S STORY.

We were riding along in one of the luxuriously fitted up passenger cars, and the conversation had glanced from one subject to another, until, at last life-stories became the current conversation. A noble looking man, who sat opposite me in the car, narrated the following:—

'It is now about fifteen years since I left the wealthy city of P——, having closed my business with the intention of retiring from commercial life, after amassing a considerable sum of hard cash. Several years before the winding-up business, however, I had determined to buy a handsome country residence, and console myself in the beauty of it for want of a wife, of which I was clear, when the following circumstances completely set aside my former calculations and left me—but I am anticipating my story.

'It was a beautiful, clear summer eve that, just as I was preparing to close my store, a young lady came in, and, in a trembling tone of voice, and with an apparent flurried manner asked to see some of the goods, pointing to some ruffling and cambric patterns. I noticed her agitation, and thinking perhaps deception was intended, I watched her closely. After looking some time at the goods she purchased a small cambric pattern. I noticed, however, that she still seemed unwilling to leave the store, and that the perturbation in her manner seemed to increase.

'In a kindly tone I asked if there was anything else she wanted, and, at the same time, I began to notice that she was really beautiful. Rather below the medium stature, of a clear, white complexion, with deep blue eyes, and black hair, done up in heavy braids behind—for she wore one of the jaunty little hats then in fashion. Was it any wonder that I began to fall in love with the suspected lady of a few moments before? Therefore, I asked, in a kindlier tone than before,—

'Can I do anything more for you?'

'She burst into tears."

'Here I was in a pretty plight! As usual previous to closing my store for the night, I had lit up, and now here I was alone with a young lady, more than ordinarily pretty, and in tears! What else could I do than what my heart prompted me to do at that moment? Involuntarily I asked the question—,

'Can I aid you in any way, miss?'

'I might have said madam, but I knew there was too slight a warrant for that.

'She raised her eyes, full of tears, to mine, and told me in a few words that her main object in coming into my store had been to escape pursuit; that she had walked faster and faster, but still she had been gained on by her pursuer; and, not daring to excite an alarm by running, she had ventured in just in time to save herself.

'With deep interest I listened to her short narrative, and then, in it wonderful that I, then a young man just arrived at the susceptible age when gallantry is one of the ruling incentives of the heart should offer my services and company home? She declined gently, saying that she could not allow me to leave my business, with no one to take charge of it, and she thought probably by then time the danger was past and her pursuer had gone.

'I went to the door and looked up and down the street, and was turning back when I espied the dark figure of a man lounging around the corner of the square just below where the square stood. My resolution was at once taken. Going back into the store and telling her to wait a few minutes, I closed my desk, shut up the rear of the place, and telling her I should accompany her home, unless she persisted in refusing, she at length consented, and, locking the door, in company with my fair companion turned down M—— Street, which at that time, as yet, was the central part of the town and of business. After passing the corner she turned agitatedly, as before, toward me, saying,—'There he is! that is he!'

'Who?' I asked, looking at the same time in the direction indicated.

'I was too late, only catching a glimpse of a dark figure wrapped in a large cloak—the same that I had seen before leaving the store. I persuaded her to take my arm, and, more re-assured, we proceeded down to 10th street, and stopped before the door of a handsome mansion, at which, obedient to her request, I rang the bell. It was quickly answered and she then invited me in; but, thanking I declined, feeling that it would be presuming on the service rendered to enter at the time. She bade me call soon, and promising to do so I departed.

'As after plenty of business prevented me from putting into execution my long delayed visit; for, to tell the truth, I had grown in love, desperately in love with my newfound acquaintance. But one afternoon, leaving my business in the hands of Cousin Harry, I went home and donned my best, and sauntered down 10th street to the house of Mr. L——; and stopping and ringing the bell, was answered by a servant, who, on my enquiring for Miss C—n,—such, she told me, was her name—informed me that they had moved away; and, after vainly endeavouring to gain some clue to her whereabouts, I was obliged to give up the search.

'As I have said before I had concluded to close up my business; for, having commenced very young, and with a good start, I had become moderately wealthy, and in circumstances to suit my cherished design into execution.

'But a man in love seldom does exactly as he intends; and found, after spending a while in the country that I wanted some recreation. The fact was I wanted society to drive away a melancholy that was settling on me; for go where I would and see what I would the image of Annie C——n was constantly before me. At last I concluded on making a summer residence of Newport — then the glory of bathing places and a resort for invalids of every description. I went just at the right time for the cure of melancholy, if cure could be effected. The season of fashion was at its height. Balls, masquerades, rides and sails by moonlight, to sum up and I participated in their pleasures to the full. But my spirits only drooped the lower after the never so hilarity had subsided.

"The wealth of our fair land:
Its beauty and its chivalry were gathered there."

'In this dejected downcast mood I had wandered out one evening a little beyond the usual promenades at that place, and was on the point of returning when my ears were attracted by sounds as of a person in pain, and I hastened forward toward them, thinking some one of the many, there might have been taken suddenly ill, and have some near to offer help. As I drew near, however, I heard as I thought a woman's voice pleading. Just then a sharp shriek for help came to me, and forgetting caught save the gallantry naturally mine, I hurried forward as speedily as possible, and just in time to see a man, as I judged, dragging a figure closely muffled along with him and making for the beach. The noise I made in approaching alarmed him, and dropping his burden and turning, he confronted me, at the same time drawing a pistol and firing. The ball grazed my cheek, but springing upon him rapidly, I threw him to the ground. The conflict was not ended; he was a muscular man, and it was with difficulty I could keep him down. Making an extraordinary effort he at last disengaged one of his hands from mine, and quickly grasping a bowie knife, hitherto unnoticed by me, he dealt a blow which I warded off from my body to receive in my arm. I felt the blood oozing out from the wound, and, straining myself once more, I compressed my fingers so tightly around his throat that his hands dropped powerless at his side; then quickly wrenching the knife from his hand, and taking his pistol, I turned to the lady, for such she was, then suddenly left in my hands.

'I bent carefully over her, and, although I could feel the slow pulse beat, I almost feared to move her lest I should extinguish the little spark of life apparently left. I chafed her hands, and bethinking myself of a small bottle of camphor, which I had frequent occasion to use for headache, and which I carried along with me, I bathed her forehead copiously with it. Soon I was gladdened with signs of returning animation. But my wound, until now unthought of, began to grow painful, and I began to feel faint from loss of blood. Determined to make another effort I raised my precious charge, and, as fast as my now failing strength would permit me, bore her to the nearest house. Feeling my strength still failing I laid her down just as I reached one of the little villas that overlook the sea at Newport. Well for her I did so; my endurance then far, had been sustained wholly by my determination, and no sooner had I placed her carefully on one of the rustic seats than I myself sank insensible to the ground.

'My next recollection is of finding myself in a tidily arranged chamber, fitted up with exquisite taste. Even the sunshine—for it was high day—threw only a softened stream of light through the curtains. At my bedside sat an elderly lady whom I strove in vain to recollect. How I came in the place or where I was, I knew not; and when my nurse—for such she appeared to be—turned towards me, I asked her where I was. She hastily motioned me to be silent, telling me she feared a return of my fever. So I lay back again, more anxious than ever to solve the mystery, but totally unable to do it, and presently I again fell into a doze.

'When next I woke there was the sound of subdued voices talking, and I could distinguish the words.—

'There are good hopes, then, doctor, of his recovery?

'I leave him almost entirely now in your care. Good nursing will be now the surest means of bringing about his complete restoration.'

'Thanks, doctor, for what you have done. I will spare no pains to make his cure complete.'

'I was bewildered. I had surely heard that voice before, but where? I tased my brain to no purpose. With an effort I raised myself in the bed, and the figure at the same time moving, I saw my long lost Miss Annie C——n.

'The effort was too much; I sank back exhausted. I grew worse, and for nearly a week feverish and delirious. I lay between life and death. Slowly I recovered, and as I grew better, I strove to speak with her but she invariably silenced me. Sitting, often an hour at a time reading to me from some selected book, my hours were whiled away, and I grew rapidly well in body—worse in heart.

'When I did get strong enough to take a short walk, and to talk with her, I found that it was her whom I had rescued from the same vile hands that had caught her before.

'When days passed and I had not called at her uncle's, Mr. L——'s, she had given me up, and, his family moving away, she went with them.

'After I had got completely quit of my wound, which had been a pretty severe one in the right arm, I said, one evening as we sat alone in the parlor,—

'Annie, I must leave you; I am causing her denouement.'

'She looked up at me, and I could see her eyes were dim through her tears as she said,—

'So soon.'

'And then, mustering all my courage, I determined to know my fate as I replied.'

'Unless you will be mine for good.'

And then I placed an arm only run placed beneath the witchery of bright eyes and a true heart, and did not cease until I heard her voice, seemingly sweeter than ever before, murmur,—

'Yes.'

'As I folded her to my heart, and we talked over our plans for the future, I felt that all my trials in the past were submerged in those happy moments when I won my wife.

'I stop at this station. Good night, gentlemen.'

The Debt of England and the North

The New York World shows that the public debt of the Federal States is comparatively much larger than that of Great Britain although the latter took generations to incur while the Northern debt has been created within four years. The World says:

"In order for us to fully appreciate the amount of our public debt, we must compare it with that of Great Britain, which is well known to be the largest debt in the world. We propose to show that relatively, our public debt is much the larger. A large debt for a rich nation to pay may not be so much as a small debt for a poor nation to pay. Then let us see how we compare with England in wealth and public debt.

"The British national debt was, on the 31st March last, £788,803,139 stg., or, reckoning five dollars to the pound, it was $3,999,010,695. The interest on that debt, which is 3 per cent., is $719,970,320. By official returns, the entire wealth and valuation of the nation, was, on the 8th day of April, 1861, $31,500,000,000. Therefore the yearly interest is at the rate of one dollar for $262 50 of the valuation.

"By the census of 1860 the entire wealth and valuation of the United States and territories was $16,159,616 068, including 4,000,000 of slaves at a southern valuation. Our public debt, besides our state and municipal debts and other liabilities, as we have before shown in these columns, will on the 4th March next be more than $2,653,427,101, and it is all to be founded, and draw an interest of 6 per cent. in gold, which is $159,205,626. Therefore, the yearly interest payable in gold is at the rate of one dollar for $101 50, for the valuation, which is more than two and a half times larger than the debt of Great Britain.

"With gold at 250, payable in United States currency, the rate of interest will make our debt relatively more than six and a quarter times greater than that of Great Britain! and that, too, as compared with the resources and valuation of the United States in 1860, as it then was, and as it is now."

When the American war first broke out, a young married man of Steubenville, Ohio, volunteered. He was reported killed at Perryville, and subsequently his wife received a metallic coffin which purported to contain the body of her husband. She buried it with all due ceremony and affection, and after more than a year had elapsed, she married again. A few days since, an exchanged prisoner passed through Steubenville and left a message from the husband supposed to be dead, that he would probably be soon exchanged and would be home again. Her present husband is a worthy man, and the case becomes somewhat embarrassing.

On Monday week, the first "dummy" engine was put into use on the Second Avenue Street Railway in New York. It worked exceedingly well, and it is claimed that it can draw the loads of three horse-cars at least at twice their ordinary speed —while at the same time it is more fully under the control of the driver. It makes no puffing noise, or smoke; is less expensive than horses; and does not frighten them animals, unless driven at a very high rate of speed, for which there is no necessity.

Two sparks from London, while, enjoying themselves among the heather in Argyleshire, came upon a decent looking shepherd reading on the top of a hill. They accosted him by remarking—"You have a fine view here; you will see a great way."

"Oh aye, an aye, a feary great way."

"Ah! you will see Ameriky from here?"

"Farrer than that?" said Donald. "Ah! how's that?"—"Oh, just wait till the mist gangs awa', an' you'll see the muns!"

THE ACADIA WRECKAGE.—We learn with regret that the proprietors of the splendid steamer Acadia, built expressly for the Gulf trade, are compelled to immediately withdraw their steamer from the route, having lost, on the first two and only trips $2,000. Several Americans have made offers for the vessel and if not sold this week, she will in all probability be placed in winter quarters at Sorel.—Montreal Telegraph.

A LUCKY FISH.—The Cleveland Herald says: The schooner Fair Wind, on its passage from Fort Burwell to Cleveland on Monday last, picked up seventy-nine barrels of high-wines floating in the lake, supposed to belong to the Propeller Action. The "find" is worth about $2,000.

A TRIP IN A FIRE BALLOON.

The idea of fire-balloon has generally been connected with some pretty toys sent up into the air for the purpose of diverting children on a rainy day. Few ever dreamed to think that a man would be found daring enough to mount half a mile by another method. But such a feat was accomplished on Wednesday evening, and the details of the voyage, as reported in the Telegraph by one of the occupants of the car, entitled to unstinted terms even the elegant descriptions which have been written of Messrs. Caswell and Gladstone's aerial journeys. The ascent was made from Crompton. The balloon was four times as large as that "Nassmith" which was nearly torn to pieces by a brutal mob in Lethgowry last fall, but which had not been "posted up" with grander accounts were prepared to find that the balloon was really an open trapping [illegible] of combustible cotton, one furnace, strange faces, bewildering air holes, and a whole host of perplexing accessories. Of course to an engineer all this is simple enough. There was a cylinder with a furnace, there were air-holes; into this furnace masses of straw, carried up in the balloon, were to be thrown; the fire was to be briskly kept up when it was intended to descend; it was to be lowered when a descent was contemplated; to break a sudden fall there was a pretty parachute; and the whole thing was ingenious and elaborate, but to an ordinary mind, calculatingly less than otherwise. The adventurous spirits who early in the afternoon pushed their way in under the canvas folds and gazed at the central machinery simply carried away the idea that the passengers would have to sit down with their backs to a raging flame; and the demand for seats in this exceptional conveyance accordingly fell off. At seven o'clock six passengers what had all been up in the air before, took their seats, and the balloon began to rise. Strange were the new sensations occasioned by the new system—and they are as difficult to describe as they were strange. Let the reader, however, imagine that he has been riding in the engine of an express train; let him then conceive that this engine with the fire roaring in the furnace has suddenly leaped into the air, and he will get some faint notion of the situation. As the balloon rose—not with a swift steady bound like that of an athlete, but rather with a feverish, hesitating, uncertain movement—the men who were "on board" had quite enough to do to pass the bundles of straw to the aeronaut, who was very properly crying out for "more." It was not a nice commencement of a dangerous journey. The elevating power of the balloon seemed reasonably sufficient for the occasion; and whilst the crowd swayed to and fro beneath, the huge machine drove against some of the decorations of Cremorne, and knocked them about at its pleasure. Still fresh bundles of straw were flung in; the momentary impetus was gained; the "Eagle" cleared the obstacles; and as it soared into the air Mr. Godard sounded a cheery note upon his little trumpet and waved his cap to the cheering crowd. There was not much wind, and the balloon slowly rising, took it course to the south-eastward of London. At times it seemed becalmed; and during this interval of quiet those who looked out over the panorama of London owned that the sight was well worth the risk. The whole expanse of the mighty city was visible; the dense clouds curtained it in, and covered it with a haze, slowly sank the great red sun; slowly rose the great white moon; away over the open fields gathered the mists of the night; the wonderful river of London rose up through the evening air, like the passionate clamour —impatient, querulous, irresistible—of the sea; and behind each gazer close to his back was the roaring and the raging of the furnace. The red light glared out and was almost painful; but the sight was worth the peril; and neither from Englishmen nor Frenchman was a murmur heard as steadily one after one the trusses of straw were passed into the fire. The long lines of the bridges, the dim outlines of familiar buildings, and of all the open spaces in which London takes its pleasance rose upon the view. As no time did the balloon ascend much above half a mile, and as no time did that roaring, crackling clamour cease; but M. Godard was bland and brave; his fellow-countrymen were courteous and courageous; and the English held their tongues. At length, after crossing and re-crossing the river, it was determined to descend—a feat which was not accomplished without much difficulty and some danger, for fire balloons are naturally not so easy managed as their companions of the air. Instead of opening the door and throwing out ballast, burning fiery furnaces have to be regulated, and in this case 460,000 cubic feet of rarefied air had to be overpowered. However, the voyagers were not novices, and they got down with nothing more than a few bumps.

ANOTHER KAFFIR WAR APPREHENDED.—Considerable excitement has been created in Cape colony by the rumored outbreak of another Kaffir war, in consequence of which the second battalion of the 10th regiment, under orders for India, has been retained at the Cape for the present. It appears that on the 27th of May last a rumor reached Grahamstown to the effect that the Kaffir chief Kreli had crossed the Bashee river in Kaffraria Proper, and had sworn to retake the country of which he considers that he has been unjustly deprived by the British authorities. It was also rumored that the chief of another tribe had marched at the head of a large force of Fingoes, in order to join Kreli, and that by one or the other several of the mounted police had been killed. The Governor of the colony, who was then at Grahamstown, ascertained these rumors to be only partially true, but these was still sufficient cause for alarm in the fact of Kreli's position at the head of a large armed force. Energetic steps were therefore taken to protect the colony, which have had the effect of reducing Kreli to quietness, and we now hear that, though he has actually crossed the Bashee river, negociations have been commenced between him and the government.

FREEMASONS.—London is now connected with Edinburgh and with Jerusalem by Telegraph! How strange to see the old Bible Lands invaded by modern inventions and improvements. In another year our shores may be within one day's communication with the Holy Land. A telegram despatched from Jerusalem at noon may reach us before noon of the same day!

COLLEGE FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.—An important measure for the benefit of the Deaf and Dumb, has been commenced by the establishment of a College at Washington, D. C., under the Presidency of Edward M. Gallaudet, A. M., a son of the distinguished philanthropist who was so long at the head of the Hartford Institution.

THE CULTURE OF THE SILKWORM.—The Californian says "There are 56,000 beetles on our shores. Idol gods are worshipped in two heathen temples in San Francisco. The Heathen are trying to do something for Christ in California, and so are the Presbyterians.

TERRIBLE RIOT NEAR CHICAGO.

The Chicago Journal gives the particulars of a fearful riot by members of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which took place at Wolf's station, on the Rock Island railroad, about 18 miles from Chicago, on Monday last. It appears that members of the society and their friends, to the number of about 1,000, filling fifty cars, on that day went on an excursion to Gold Spring, and were on their return in the afternoon, when the train switched off at Wolf's station to await the passage of another train. Here some of the more hilarious representatives of the cars and paid a visit to the "Northwestern Hotel," a saloon directly opposite to the station, where they called for drink. Having drank once they called for more, which the landlord, a German, refused to furnish until the first one paid their flume of the conversation, during this an insult, consequent breaking and smashing up the furniture and fixtures of the saloon in a most violent manner. The landlord, incensed beyond measure at their riotous proceedings, with his assistant, drew their revolvers and ordered the excited excursionists to leave the house, which they refused to do until one of their number had been wounded by a pistol shot. As soon as they were outside, the excursionists began to throw sticks, logs and stones at the establishment, after the manner of their countrymen.

The landlord, with his assistant then began an indiscriminate shooting with their revolvers, as fast as they could load and fire, the shots sometimes falling among the assailants, but oftener in the cars, where the more quiet excursionists were sitting. The rioters now rallied under the brisk fire, entered the house, drove out the landlord, overtook him as he was running for the woods brought him back, but he at last escaped under a shower of stones, brickbats and missiles of every description, though it was reported that he was murdered. The rioters were now reinforced by the arrival of another train of excursionists, and the combined forces proceeded to make thorough work of gutting the house and destroying the property. It was difficult to get at the particulars of the disgraceful outbreak, from the members of the society, but the number of wounded was variously estimated at from ten to thirty, with five or six killed. One or two were mortally wounded, and died after they arrived in the city. The facts and particulars are to be elicited by a full judicial investigation. The Journal says it was one of the most unfortunate and bloody affairs that has marred the State for many months.

A FUNNY OCCURRENCE.

The Troy Times of Thursday tells the following funny story about the loss of a boot in a gas pipe:

Day before yesterday, a thrifty citizen of West Troy, desirous to please his better-half and properly adorn his "palatial" residence, purchased a twenty-five dollar mirror, "which was cheap and just suited her." The purchaser concluded to carry the mirror home himself, and not to trust its transmission thence to the perils of a porter. With tired muscle and pouring sweat, he arrived on the St. Charles Hotel corner. The ferry-boat was "on t'other side of Jordan," and the corner of the mirror was thirsty—therefore the mirror was stood up against the hotel stoop, on the sidewalk, and a small boy bidden to watch it, while his owner stepped into the St. Charles bar to get "suthin to cool himself with."

At this untimely moment a large billy goat, which enjoys the freedom of the city, and is familiar to all the residents in that vicinity for his famous "bucking" powers, came leisurely along the sidewalk. The small boy in charge of the mirror fled on the double quick, in serious apprehension of being "bucked." The goat kept on his career until he caught sight of another goat reflected on the polished surface of the glass. Then he stepped back some dozen feet, reared aloft his caudal appendage, gave three or four preliminary shakes of the head, and rushed on his shadowy adversary with a power of "buck" which of all creatures of the animal kingdom the goat alone possesses. The glass was shattered in a spray of fragments, and the goat went through the back of the mirror up to his head and shoulders.—Whether the goat was more astonished at the utter demolition of his opponent, or the owner of the mirror at his unexpected loss, is one of the problems yet unsolved.

THE "GREAT EASTERN."—A sum of £1,000,000 has been spent, and nothing remains for the shareholders, original or prefferential, or for the bondholders; for the £25,000 which was realized at public sale for the ship will be hardly sufficient to pay the preference creditors and the law expenses. Everything available, including office furniture, sold before the directors disqualified themselves, though they did not forget to send in claims for half-year's fees in arrear; and all that is left besides the balance of the £25,000 after paying expenses and preference claims, is £15, which is in the hands of the official liquidator. The ship has been bought for this ridiculously small sum by a new company, of which three of the late directors of the Great Ship Company are the principle shareholders and directors. Surely this is a state of things which deserves, nay demands, inquiry, especially just now, when limited liability companies are increasing in number so rapidly; for if the directors of a limited company can with impunity waste all the property entrusted to their care, and leave a large amount of debt without anything whatever to merit it, and without any responsibility or accountability, some new provisions are most assuredly required.—*Exp. This is the longest swimming match ever contested by Englishmen, being longer than that of which Byron boasts, "Leander, Mr. Ekenhead and I did," even allowing for the current, which made the passage from Sestos to Abydos so difficult.

THE CONTEST.

THE NOMINATION.

At Hastings Col. Haultain had a large meeting which was favourable. At Warsaw, the meeting was entirely unanimous, and a resolution was passed expressing confidence. At a meeting on the third line of Dummer the people were wholly unanimous in favour of the Col. The Lakefield meeting was largely attended and was a most successful one. At Douro the Col. could not get a meeting; and the first meeting at Monaghan was spoiled by the heavy rain. At Maddle School House in Smith, there was a large attendance, and the resolution in favor of the Col. carried unanimously. At Ennismore there was a large meeting, the people having congregated in the neighborhood to attend a funeral; there was, however, no expression of opinion. A large meeting was held at Stewart's School House in Otonabee, which was, like many others, wholly unanimous for the Colonel. The second meeting for Monaghan, like the first, did not take place—owing purely to some mistake in sending out the notices—this is much regretted. The people of Monaghan cannot be more disappointed than was the Colonel at the accident. If possible, a meeting will still be held in Monaghan. Thus far, therefore, the meetings have been eminently successful.

THE NOMINATION.

We should think there were a thousand persons present at the nomination. After the writ was read, Robert Nicholls Esquire stepped forward and in a brief address nominated Col. Haultain. R. Denniston, Esq., then seconded the nomination. John Harvey, Esq., nominated Chas. Perry, Esq., and W. A. Scott, Esq., seconded his nomination. The Hon. Sidney Smith was then nominated by G. F. Orde, Esq., and seconded by Capt. Sutherland, after which Peter Pearce, Esq., was nominated and seconded.

Col. Haultain was, of course, the first to speak. His able address was listened to most attentively. He spoke truth and wisdom; meeting his assailants at every point, and refuting the vile slanders perpetrated respecting him; and concluded with a most masterly summary of the political matters of the day, and an eloquent appeal to right thinking men.

Mr. Perry followed, and his speech certainly presented a pitiable contrast to that which had just preceded it. He ignored politics, and told the people that had Col. Haultain come forward when requested at last election, he would not have been now before them.—Said that the Colonel's reason for not coming out, was, that he was afraid of defeat. Ask ed it the Short estate was any nearer a conclusion than at first. Said that he didn't know anything about the grand federation scheme, appeared to wince dreadfully under the writings of some attorney, and gave little vent to his feelings thereupon. Said that the whole matter might go into a nutshell. Said that he had given up all his property when he failed, except some which he had still. That he had been the first man to go into the sawed lumber business, and called a certain Mr. Riggs of Dummer, a man whom we are informed is wholly unreliable, to prove that somebody else had heard fifteen per cent asked for money in Col. Haultain's office.

Mr. Smith followed in a speech of considerable length, but we have not space for it, or that of the last person nominated.

The show of hands was then called for by the Sheriff, and we are safe in saying that it was clearly in the Colonel's favor. The Sheriff, however, seemed unable to decide and called for a division. This division seemed to give the majority slightly to Mr. Perry. This may have been occasioned through a misunderstanding, as the Sheriff's voice was very indistinct. However, the Sheriff decided that Mr. Perry had the majority, and a poll was demanded for Col. Haultain.

Cheers followed and the Nomination ended.

MR. PERRY'S SPEECH.

Calmly reviewing the remarks of this gentleman, which were exactly what one might expect, we were utterly at a loss to find in them anything at all worth answering. When a man is so hard up for something against his opponent that he can bring forward nothing better than that one Thomas Riggs heard somebody else say that he was asked in Col. Haultain's office fifteen per cent. for money, he has come to a lamentably low ebb—and his reduction into a nutshell is very easily understood; and incredible as it may appear, such was the dreadful charge which Mr. Charles Perry, in his righteous indignation at so offensive an outrage, appealed to the electors upon—and this, too, in the face of a positive assertion by Col. Haultain that he had always, save in one instance, when eleven was inserted in the mortgage, but with the understanding that ten only would be taken if the interest was promptly paid, refused more than ten per cent., the usual rate charged by the townspeople.

We have refrained from entering in any way into Mr. Perry's business transactions, and from discussing that gentleman's private character, and we do not intend to canvass either at the present time, for we know well that Mr Perry is sufficiently known, and when he accuses his opponent of falsehood, which he certainly did in effect on the hustings, it needs no review of the man on our part to demonstrate to our readers, the utter worthlessness of the charge. Some men are consistent, if they oppose a man because of his errors, they do so consistently, and give the accused an opportunity for defence. Mr. Perry however, is not a man of this kind, he tells the electors in his address that he holds the Colonel in high and honorable esteem. And when he meets the electors, after the Colonel has spoken, and therefore no opportunity for reply, he attacks him. Not content, however, with carrying his office and "X. Y. Z." letter coming forth the true state of the case in contradiction of Mr. Charles Perry's assertion respecting the charge of fifteen per cent. by Colonel Haultain for the use of money on mortgage, he re[illegible] that during the [illegible] he had [illegible] Col. Haultain [illegible] Mr. Perry's [illegible] both his [illegible] private reputation astonished, but these things work their own cure.

We heard of three men who were privately [illegible] to the Col. in consequence of the nomination proceedings; and we will, no doubt, hear of many more. "A tree is known by its fruits," and the Colonel's reputation both for veracity and integrity is sufficiently established to cause honest men to turn with disgust from a candidate who can find no better weapons of attack than those used by Mr. Perry.

Some men excuse themselves, when they spread a lie, by saying that they heard it. To circulate, the man who will intentionally repeat a falsehood, is, if possible, meaner than the one who originates it.

THE BACK COUNTRY.

Colonel Haultain may certainly depend upon a large majority in the Back Country. Active steps are being taken there to gain as large a vote as possible. At Minden village a committee has been formed of the following gentlemen:—

Reuben C. Garrett, Esq., Chairman; Francis Peck, Esq., Secretary; Alex. McDougall, Esq., Treasurer; and Messrs. W. H. Brower, A. M. Garrett, Thos. Young, James Fogue, Andrew Lord, Francis Bowron, William Wright, Henry Edmison, B. Z. Johnson, Richard McCracken, Alex. Mantle, John Newell, John Fogue, Geo. Kellett, William Ritchie, John Wright, Jos. Sanderson, Robt Gilleapie, John Otto, John Buck, John Scott, W. Gainer, W. I. Sedgwick, John Noice, David Hall, W. Moore and W. S. Cameron.

At Silver Lake, in the Township of Galway, the following gentlemen are also a committee:—

Thos. Probert, Christopher Irwin, Lewis Fry, Wm. Cosh, Henry Neeberry, John Elgar, John Coulter, John McElwaine, Wm. McElwaine, John Norris, Charles Fry, and Thos. E. White, Esquires.

Any one at all acquainted with the back country, will, upon reading these names, conclude that Mr. Perry's chances on the Bob caygeon Road are very small indeed.

ROBBERY OF THE EXPRESS OFFICE.

On Tuesday night last, some daring villains entered the Telegraph and Express Office in the rear of Cox & Davidson's Bookstore. The burglars—for there appears to have been several—entered the back window by forcing the spring. Having entered they coolly walked off with a strong iron box, weighing about 150 pounds, in which Cox & Davidson had deposited for safe keeping their books, the firm cash box, a number of deeds and other valuable papers, and two or three hundred dollars in greenbacks, one hundred of which belonged to the Express Company. The strong box was found in the morning on the bank of the river, a considerable distance off. The lock had been blown off with powder; so great was the explosion that the contents were scattered over a considerable space. The robbers seem to have been in a hurry, for they left behind one of the tin boxes containing about forty dollars in silver; this box was found about forty feet off.

Judging from the large charge of powder used, and the fact that the robbers were not cool enough to take the silver, and, also, from their stupidity in not destroying the telegraphing machinery through which we hope their escape will be prevented, we would say that they were not adepts in their business. Next week we hope to advise the public of their capture. We would just add that active measures are in progress to arrest the robbers, the nature of which would not be expedient for us at present to disclose.

OUR STREETS.

How often have we during the present summer seen strangers turning up their noses in disgust, as some obnoxious whiff from an adjacent cess pool struck their olfactory organs—our streets are a disgrace. Every one thinks himself at liberty to cast the sweepings and filth of his store or dwelling into the streets. The consequence is that our air is tainted, and our eye is disgusted. Surely this state of things is not necessary. If it is necessary that we should live crowded together in towns, it is not necessary that the filth which necessarily accumulates on our streets should remain there. Last fall the mud and filth was knee deep. Is it to be so this fall? Money has been lavishly and we believe wastefully expended all summer.—Let a little of it be spent on the front street. If it was paved, as in many towns, it would be swept every night, but because it is badly graded and drained—full of holes and cess pools the filth is allowed to accumulate. Let an effort be made, every one will rejoice at it—properly grade the streets, form good clean water tables and the natural slope of the road, assisted by the copious showers we enjoy, will greatly assist in keeping them clean. Let the "city fathers" see that something is done for our comfort and reputation in this matter.

The Montreal Herald in an article on the Elections says:—

"Going further West, we have first the county of Peterboro. This constituency is vacant by the death of Mr. Conger, an old school reformer, who followed Mr. Hincks' lead when the latter went into the system of ruling the country by cultivation and good will of the classes who had an interest in raising and spending vast loans, to be left as a constantly growing burden upon the Provincial resources. If what was supposed to be the understanding between the high contracting parties to the coalition had been carried out, and if each of the old parties had been allowed quietly to retain its seat in each constituency, and, until further orders to send a member of the same political bias as the one in possession when the new Ministry was formed, Mr. Conger would have been succeeded by another conservative or to use the words of other days "corruptionist." The reformers, however, having had their man beaten, though he were a representative of the policy of the coalition, felt themselves absolved from any obligation which may be supposed to have been contracted in their behalf, and they accordingly put up Col. Haultain, a very worthy gentleman, who has already served in one Parliament, on the liberal side. He is to be opposed by Mr. Charles Perry, a member, we believe, of a family somewhat noted for rebellious tendencies during the eventful years of 1837 and 1838 but who came round in a body to be good conservatives under the able manipulation of Mr. Hincks with his railway and municipal Loan Fund appliances.

FIRE.—A correspondent informs us that a dwelling house and barn, the property of Mr. W. Woods, township of Harvey, was completely consumed by fire on the night of Saturday, 20th August, about 9 o'clock. The dwelling had been occupied until Saturday morning by a servant of Mr. Woods, who it is stated left on bad terms, and threatened to do him damage. There is no doubt but it being the work of an incendiary, as her interest caused the place about 2 o'clock; and there was no fire to be seen at that time.

THE RIVAL SHOWMEN.

DREAM.

Again, on the night, were indulged in his kindly visions on various parts of the Province, we imagined ourself into a similar gentlemanly row, and we dreamed as a dream of a deep and living interest. We thought we were on our way from the Town of Peterborough, and when we arrived at the entrance of the Town we came to where there was a small assemblage of people, and considerable excitement among them. While we were speaking to one of the party, I was waited upon by a Mr. Pliable, who solicited my vote and interest for his "good friend" Mr. P——, who was, as Mr. Pliable informed me, "a good jolly fellow." Here Mr. Pliable was joined by another—a Mr. Gunnels; the latter gentleman, I soon learned, was well read in a publication called The Rustling Cockatoo, and, also, a thing called Old Port Wine; nor was it necessary to inform me concerning his predilection for the latter, as the appearance of his face was sufficient evidence that he loved "Old Port" with a more than religious veneration.

MR. GUNNELS.—Oh! my good friend, Radical, how are you? Glad to see you; hope Mr. Radical and all the young Radicals are radically sound in wind and limb. Piping times these, my buck. Devilish troublesome gentry these canting, jobbing, vagabondish fellows, (are they not) these Reallyhatites. We know you hate these fellows, my hearty, and that you will support liberal measures and liberal men. Shall we have the honor of your vote and interest for Mr. P——. He is a right true fellow, we'll warrant him.

RADICAL.—Canada is in difficulties. It is oppressed with a load of taxes. Will your friend, Mr. P——, if he gets "in," do his best to lessen them. If he will do this, I will give him all the support I can.

MR. GUNNELS.—Why, my dear fellow, you must know that taxes are necessary things in all States. No doubt they press upon the resources of every country, and depress capital; but still they are necessary evils. Our friend, if he "gets in," will help to make great changes in the taxation. If the burden presses too heavily on the right shoulder he will shift it more towards the left—and this you will find a great comfort indeed.

RADICAL.—Your answer does not satisfy me. If you speak truly of Mr. P——, to tell you plainly, my vote he cannot have.

MR. PLIABLE.—You common people who read the Globe are always discontented and repining—there is no satisfying you. Taxes are necessary evils. All men cannot be rich—Providence has ordered matters otherwise—therefore you should learn patience and humility; happiness, let me tell you, lies in the mind; and if you will only be prevailed upon to think yourself happy, you will soon find the sting taken out of your temporary evils.

Again we saw in our dream, in an open space of land within the same good Town of Peterborough, two exhibitions, one of which was named "Joe Pentland's Circus" and the other, "Per-y's Emporium of Humbug." And on the same day there was a mortal rivalship between the two establishments. Joe's contained rope-dancers and first-rate proficients in "ground and lofty tumbling." While Per-y's was a splendid caravan under the direction of a little newspaper editor, well known in that part of the country as a first-rate vomiter of fire and smoke. This fierce contest engrossed the individual attention of the whole Town, and nothing was talked about but the respective merits of the two sets of showmen. The little newspaper editor was particularly zealous and noisy. He dwelt with extatic raptures on the merits of his establishment. He told the crowd of people (among whom I observed many doughy-faced individuals, whose heads were no way indicative of intelligence, all duly marshalled under the command of a thin darkish gentleman in black, who, ever and anon encouraged the little orator of the caravan by their loud and vociferous bawling,) that the caravan contained (see their clown said) a great curiosity—a biped—a native of Canada, quite a proficient in "Jim Crowism!" The foreman, also, descanted upon the great desire of the "Biped" to get down to Quebec in order to exhibit himself in the "Big" mansion there. 'Twas they, "the free and independent" who alone could enable his "Biped" to get there, and if they did, he'd open for them new roads and lines of railway without number. He also said the establishment contained many rare animals. "Here," he said, "is a complete Noah's ark upon a limited scale, everything rare and curious from the heavens above and the earth beneath." Joe, the Harlequin, we saw, was equally zealous for his own interest. He succeeded, in some measure, in drowning the pretentious of his rival by his loud and obstreperous manner. He maintained that his corps was the most renowned in America. He said he had fools and fire-eaters, and rope-dancers; Per-y's Emporium only excelled him in one thing: he was deficient in jugglers. As to the Canadian Biped he was all humbug together—a regular "pig in a poke"—and his promises not worth a cobbler's curse." This was received with loud shouts by the crowd, and his exhibition was soon filled to the brim by the idle and the curious.

I here awoke, and, behold, it was all a dream. SCOTIA.

The Peterborough Brass Band.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—I notice in your issue of the 25th inst., a curious as well as an amusing piece of composition (if I may be allowed to call it such) purporting to be a reply to a few matter-of-fact statements in your paper of the 18th inst., in which I endeavored to show the position of the Peterborough Brass Band in reference to the Loyal Orange Association of the District of Peterborough. But it seems the members of this famous band have took umbrage at the plain way the truth was laid before the public. However, I cannot in any way be surprised at that, as the truth is exceedingly obnoxious to some people, especially those whose interests it effects. I have no doubt when the prophet reproved Jezebel for her wickedness and foretold her ignominious death, she thought him very abrupt, for the truth was not congenial to her taste. Likewise, when the Pharisees were compared to a whitted sepulchre, which is beautiful externally, but inwardly is full of dead men's bones, and all uncleanliness, they were very much annoyed at the truth. I need not now enlarge to show how much truth is disliked when it conflicts with interest. But I would recommend the P. B. B. to take legal steps to collect what is owing to them, if they think they have any just claim, as the parties who hired them are good for it. At the same time, I would remind your correspondent that my brain is not so fertile in concocting fabrications as he seems to imagine; for I am prepared to prove, by the deputation that waited on the Band on the occasion referred to, that my statements are true regarding their engaging to play for $4 per mess, &c.; and I think those individuals bear as good a reputation for telling the truth as the leader of the P. B. B. or John T. Burns, Plenipotentiary Extraordinary of the above-named adventurers—who seem to have made the discovery that John Smith represents only a small portion of the community. Probably if John T. Burns was as well posted as he might be he would think otherwise. And I may be allowed to say for his information that (as few as I represent) if all the Orangemen of this little Canada of ours were collected into one body they would make a much larger army of sworn defenders of the Crown of Great Britain than the Duke of Wellington led on the plains of Waterloo so victoriously that they decided the fate of Europe.

Now, Mr. Editor, I would like to enquire of you who this obscure individual is signing himself "J. T. Burns," who seems to be the cats-paw of the P. B. B. I was informed that he was a disfranchised printer, now in the employ of a wealthy firm, leading lumber at the Port Hope and Peterborough Railway Station. Be that as it may, it is no discredit to him; but I think if his pursuits are more remunerative than leading a 12th of July procession at $2 per day he is more fortunate than some of his companions. I don't pretend to be a prophet, but I think I am safe in predicting that if the P. B. B. pursue the same course they have for some time past, they will get leave to follow their pursuits without interruption by being asked to play on the 12th July or any other day.

Begging you will excuse me for occupying so much of your space, I remain yours, &c.,

JOHN SMITH.

THE MURDERER MULLER.

HIS ARREST AT NEW YORK—CONFESSES HAVING THE VOYAGE, &c.

From the New York Times, Friday.

The gentleman in the employ of publishing agents of the Victoria, Queen of Scots, from London to this port, arrived on Wednesday, about 2.30 o'clock on Wednesday morning, having on board Franz Muller, a young German, who is charged with having, about two months since, murdered Mr. Briggs, a London bank clerk, a few miles out of that metropolis, while the two were riding together in a railway carriage.

It is unnecessary here to repeat the circumstances attending this diabolical assassination, the motives that led to the commission of the crime, the zealous efforts that were made by the police of London, Liverpool, Manchester and other cities in England, to ferret out and apprehend the criminal, or the means by which, at last, Muller was traced to the ship Victoria, just as she was on the point of sailing for New York. All these facts have been fully published. Inspector Tanner, Inspector Kerrezy and Sergeant Clark, all connected with the Metropolitan Police of London, arrived here per steamer, two or three weeks since, they having been sent on for the express purpose of boarding the Victoria immediately upon her arrival in our harbor, and taking the murderer into custody. For the last fortnight, one or more of these officers, together with Mr. Death, the London jeweller, and Jonathan Mathews the embosser, have been stationed at Quarantine, Staten Island, momentarily expecting news of the Victoria's appearance off Sandy Hook, and ready to board that ship at the first opportunity. Late on Wednesday afternoon a telegram from Sandy Hook was received at the Telegraph station at Quarantine Landing, that the Victoria was in sight. Immediate steps were consequently taken to board her, and at 9.30 o'clock in the evening, when the packet entered the waters of the upper Quarantine, the London officers accompanied by officer Tieman, of the New York detective force, and Messrs Death and Mathews, who went for the purpose of identifying Muller, entered the Health officer's boat, and, with the latter official they all proceeded toward the Victoria. Upon boarding her, the detectives were very cordially met by Captain Champion, who informed them that he was aware of their business and for what purpose they had come on his ship. The Captain said that when he took a pilot, several miles outside of Sandy Hook, he was first made acquainted with the fact that he had on board the notorious railway murderer.

It seems that the London Detectives immediately upon their arrival here, visited the office of the Sandy Hook pilots, and had directions to the effect that the pilot, where ever he might be, who boarded the Victoria on her inbound voyage, should say to the Captain that if Muller was on board of his ship, he, Capt. Champion, would be held personally responsible for his safe delivery in the City of New York. Capt. Champion states that from that moment he felt as though a very heavy responsibility was resting upon him. It would not do to let Muller know that he was watched, or even suspected, and yet the Captain saw the necessity of keeping a strict watch over him, both by night and by day. During the voyage Muller appeared quite cheerful, and at times very sociable. He does not seem to have had the most remote idea he could be tracked and followed across the Atlantic, and it was not until sometime after the pilot boarded the ship that his suspicions were aroused, and he was suddenly started from his fancied security and led seriously to reflect upon the appaling condition in which he was placed. The illusion under which he had slept during his passage of the Atlantic was broken in this wise: when the Victoria was in the vicinity of Sandy Hook she met a small steamer containing a party of excursionists. The publicity given to the fact that Muller, the English railway murderer, was expected to arrive by the Victoria, induced many on board the excursion boat to shout aloud, as soon as they saw the name of the ship, "How are you Muller, the murderer?"

Upon hearing this cry repeated several times, the Captain and others who were in the secret on the Victoria, noticed that Muller gave a sudden start, as though an electric shock had passed through him. He walked nervously around the deck, all the time looking, first in one direction and then in another as if calculating his chances of leaping overboard and swimming to the nearest hills, some of which were then in view. Capt. Champion thereupon became still more anxious in regard to his charge, and the responsibility resting upon him, respecting the safe delivery of the fugitive in New York. As the ship proceeded up the bay, Muller was observed to grow more and more nervous and uneasy. Several times he asked questions of some of the officers and crew of the vessel relative to the land which could be seen on either side—what kind of a country it was back of the hills? how far they were from New York? if there were any large towns where there were telegraph offices before they got to the city, etc., etc. As might naturally be supposed, Captain Champion began to feel his responsibility getting a little too heavy to bear with comfort to himself. True, two trusty men were supposed to have their eyes constantly upon Muller, but upon coming through the Narrows, the offender might suddenly throw himself into the water, in the hope of swimming to the nearest land, or if, perchance he was sufficiently driven to desperation and despair, drown himself in the bay. The captain therefore concluded to iron him, and place him in his own cabin until he could deliver him to the proper officials in New York. For this purpose he and some of his officers, all armed with revolvers, and having the irons secreted about them, were about to proceed to confine him, when a row boat filled with men, and having the flag of the Health Officer flying in the stern was seen approaching. When the detectives went on board, the captain said he was never so glad to see officials on his deck before, and that he now felt relieved of a heavy weight of responsibility.

Pursuant to the suggestions of the police, the passengers were all so arranged that they could be seen by the persons whose business it was to identify Muller, and the latter was very scrupulous for the truth as not congenial to her taste. Likewise, when the Pharisees were compared to a whitted sepulchre, which is beautiful externally, but inwardly is full of dead men's bones, and all uncleanliness, they were very much annoyed at the truth. I need not now enlarge to show how much truth is disliked when it conflicts with interest. But I would recommend the P. B. JOHN SMITH.

Ashburnham, Aug. 29th, 1864.

Muller was closely confined on board the ship until early yesterday morning, when a steam tug was chartered and he was conveyed to the city, and thence to police headquarters in Broadway.

The officials had some conversation with him, and he answered a portion of their questions, but as a general thing he seemed very reticent. He said that he was entirely innocent of the crime of murdering Mr. Briggs on the railway, and that when his trial comes on he would be able to prove that he was not on the train at the time; in legal phrase he would prove an alibi.

Yesterday afternoon, at two o'clock, was the hour appointed for Muller to appear before United States Commissioner Chas. W. Newton, for an examination pursuant to the provisions of the Extradition Treaty between the United States and England. Intelligence of the arrest and proposed examination of the English railway murderer, having been extensively circulated through the morning papers at the hour named, a very large crowd had congregated in the vicinity of the United States Marshal's office in Chamber-street.

At about two o'clock the prisoner entered Marshal Murray's office, in charge of Officers Tieman and Farley, of the New York Detective force, and the English officers before named. The prisoner at times appeared much agitated and restless, often casting quick and nervous glances round the room and upon the officials and spectators there congregated. At two o'clock precisely Commissioner Newton appeared and made preparations to commence the examination in the United States District Court-room. The British Government was represented by F. F. Marbury, Esq., counsel to the English Consul at this port. The prisoner being called, was asked by the Commissioner if he was ready with his counsel. Muller replied that he had no counsel and no money to employ any. At the request of the Commissioner Ex-Judge Beebe consented to look after the interests of the prisoner during the preliminary examination. In order to give Judge Beebe time to learn the facts of the case, so far as it is possible to do so, Commissioner Newton allowed an adjournment until 11 o'clock this morning.

Franz Muller is, as may be seen, of our readers would know by the name, a German, and about 25 years of age. He is of [illegible] build, light hair and complexion, [illegible] appearance. Yesterday morning he [illegible] the usual repose of the desperate [illegible] Police Headquarters, he seemed very inobtrusive and taciturn. To look at him one would think he was about the last person in the world who could deliberately plan and successfully execute any very heinous crime. If he be guilty of having assassinated and murdered Mr. Briggs, as it is charged he did, the crime is very evident, viz: he wholly lacks those faculties of secretiveness and shrewdness, the use of which would have enabled him to evade the officers of justice.

The police have made a thorough search of Muller's person and baggage, immediately after taking him into custody, and among other things they found a gold watch and hat, both of which, it is stated, can be positively shown to have belonged to Mr. Briggs, at the time or just prior to his death.

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS.

We understand that the 3rd battalion Military Train will proceed in two divisions to England as follows:—One division with the invalid-artificers will embark in the Pawnbian on the 3rd inst., and the other in the steamer Jura on the 10th inst. The horses belonging to the detachment at Toronto, not selected for service in the artillery, will be sold by public auction on Saturday the 3rd Sept.

On the departure of the Military Train and Guards from Canada the following changes in the quarters of the troops will take place:—

B. Field battery, 6th brigade, Royal Artillery, from Hamilton and Toronto to Montreal. The 47th Regiment from London to Hamilton. The 63rd Regiment from Hamilton to Montreal. The 1st battalion P. C. O. Rifle Brigade from Kingston to Montreal. The headquarters of the R. C. Rifles and 3 companies from London—one company from Niagara, and one company from Toronto to Kingston. The whole of these troops are to be held in readiness to move at the shortest notice.

The Naval and Military Gazette of August the 6th states that the troop ship Urgent had been ordered to be ready for the sea by the 15th of that month to proceed to Canada to bring home one-third of the Guards, the Himalaya bringing home the remainder.

A TRUE BALSAM.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is truly a balsam and a blessing to invalids. It contains the pure balsamic principle of the Wild Cherry, the balsamic principles of tar and pine. Its ingredients, which are mingled after the true principles of chemistry, are all balsamic, and therefore it is safe and sure in effect. Coughs, colds, consumption, and bronchial troubles disappear under its genial balsamic influence as though charmed away. Probably no medicine has ever resolved to so extended a popularity in this country, or has accomplished so great an amount of good.—Ballou's Pictorial. We can bear witness to the truth of the above reliable recommendation from a reliable source.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.—It is over ten years since this celebrated remedy was introduced to the American public. During this time it has performed hundreds and thousands of most astonishing cures, and its reputation and sale have now reached a point that far surpasses any remedy of the present or past ages. It has acquired this great reputation, not by a system of puffing, but by the actual merit of the article itself. If you are afflicted with any of the diseases for which it is recommended, such as Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Nervous Debility, or Disorder of the digestive organs, it will not fail to sustain its reputation in your case. For sale by all druggists and dealers in medicine.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.—The vessels of the skin, under the renovating action of this great external remedy, rapidly discharge the poisonous particles which produce eruptions, sores, boils, or any kind of exterior irritation. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and No. 244 Strand, London; and by all druggists. If the reader of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, 80 Maiden Lane, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on others persons' make. 25 cents, 62½ cents, and $1.

The oldest House in Boston was built in 1626, and is consequently 252 years old, the timber for which was cut near the spot, and is still sound and in a good state of preservation. the most reliable medicine ever offered to the public for the cure of summer complaints, sudden colds, rheumatism, pleurisy, &c., is the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." OXYGENATED BITTERS.

Testimony from J. C. Barter, Collector of the Port of Ogdensburg, New York.

Gentlemen,—I had been much afflicted, for the greater part of the year ending at last midsummer, with a singular derangement of the bowels, connected with occasional attacks of Dyspepsia. During the last summer, I accidentally took up a paper containing testimonials respecting your Oxygenated Bitters. In one instance, where relief had followed their use, I found my own symptoms and condition so accurately described, that it determined me upon trying them. I accordingly procured, and have used several bottles; and find in renovated strength and health, satisfactory evidence, that in my case they have accomplished all that I could wish.

Very respectfully, your ob'd't servant,

J. C. BARTER.

None genuine unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE COUNTY OF

Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—

The death of our late Representative, my friend Wood, Esq., M. C. P., has left a vacancy in the representation of this County, which has to be filled by your choice.

I have received from a large number of the Electors a requisition inviting me to come forward as a candidate for the membership.

After due consideration I have determined upon accepting the call of my friends, and respectfully to the requisition, and take no time in placing before you the views which I entertain upon the questions of the day.

I agree with Colonel Haultain that the movement towards unanimity taken by the leaders of both the parties, whose political strife has so long and with such evil result distracted this Province, is a complete vindication of the support and assistance of every true lover of the country; consequently the question between being and trust necessarily by entirely personal in its nature; and whom you by your votes will be called on to determine is, whether the one candidate or the other is more worthy, in your eyes of receiving a majority of your suffrages.

For myself, I may say that I am a native born Canadian—sprung from an origin which, in a true Canadian sense, is deserving of consideration and respect—that is the old Canadian United Empire Loyalists who long, long years ago, exhorted all to abandon the British and their ancient government by their sufferings and their courage.

I may further say that I was bred in the principles of the old Baldwin Reformers, whose example I have followed; and none can deny but that the truths contained in their principles have had the greatest and most beneficial effect on the policies of the country.

Of late years I have taken my place among the Liberal Conservatives, whose doctrine and legislation I have considered best adapted to the state of the Province.

Having lived among you for the last five and twenty years, at one time largely interested in the growth and trade of the County, perfectly conversant with the wants and necessities of the large and growing country in one word, I may safely claim an advantage, in this respect, over my opponent.

I fully recognise the immense importance of economy in the management of Governmental expenditure, and I, elected as your representative shall withstand in my place in the Legislative Assembly any attempt by any government to spend money without the consent of Parliament being first obtained.

I consider the defences of the Province a subject of the greatest importance, and one which any person entrusted with your confidence cannot overlook provided that a due regard to economy in the organization of the proper force employed, be observed.

The internal resources of this County, so vast and important in magnificent provision of future wealth from both ocean, timber and minerals, require but the aid of good communications to make us as we ought to be, one of the most thriving and prosperous communities in the Province.

On this subject I may mention that the Bobcaygeon, Scotsboro and Burleigh Roads, in connection with the projected road from the Township of Dummer, across Stony Lake through the Township of Burleigh, will receive every assistance in my power.

To those gentlemen who have proffered me a hearty and cordial though unsolicited support I cannot be too grateful, and I can assure them that no effort on my part shall be wanting to promote the interest of the County as desired by them.

To my opponent I may take the liberty of saying, that I hold him in high and honorable esteem and although I have announced our contest to be personal in its nature, it is by no means with an offensive meaning towards him or his supporters.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your Obedient Servant,
CHARLES PERRY.

ARE YOU IN AGONY?

A WELL SPRING OF HOPE FOR ALL!

Is to be found in

Holloway's Pills.

Be of Good Cheer! The Suffering may be Saved!

BY THE USE OF

Holloway's Ointment.

THE history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact that WHATEVER SQUARE INTERNAL diseases calls, the disinfecting, searching and healing properties of the Pills are fully equal to its subjection and cure, and that, with the Ointment, they are

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history written by one man, or even desired from the experience of one nation. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the sick of every country—an unimpeachable record, the like of which has never been obtained in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a sterling medicinal to meet the ills and necessities of the suffering portion of humanity, and one entirely free from mineral and other deleterious particles, was severely felt till this all powerful medicine was ushered into the World; HOLLOWAY'S INVALUABLE PILLS have become the HOUSEHOLD REMEDY of all nations. Their attributes it is PARTIAL as well as to cure; they attack the RADIX OR ROOT of the complaint, and thus, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the drooping energies of the system, assisting nature in her task of VITAL and FUNCTIONARY REPOSSESSION.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the PILLS? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the retarded or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs over THE BLOOD ITSELF, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

Is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this harmless but effective preparation. At the two epochs of life in which the female system undergoes the most important and critical changes, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements can at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatever form disease attacks the liver, it is compelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistable curatives. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organ, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a celerity which astonishes the sufferers and their friends. Let the sick whom the faculty have abandoned, resort with confidence to this powerful anti-bilious agent, and a restoration to health and activity will be the unvarying result.

Dyspepsia, Diarrhœa, Weakness, &c. &c.

The terrible bodily and mental pangs which characterise Dyspepsia are at once mitigated by the Pills. Diarrhœa, constipation, headache, physical prostration, nervous tremors, hot flushes, steams, affections of the kidneys, hemorrhoids or piles, and, in fact, all internal complaints, from whatever cause arising, give way before the salutary influence of this extraordinary remedy. As a specific for dyspepsia, and the disorders connected with it, or growing out of it, the Pills are always to be relied on when every other medicine had made of treatment has utterly failed.

Holloway's Pills are the best Remedy known for the following diseases:

Asthma,	Headaches,
Bowel Complaints,	Indigestion,
Coughs,	Influenza,
Colds,	Inflamation,
Chest Diseases,	Inward Weakness,
Costiveness,	Liver Complaints,
Dyspepsia,	Lowness of Spirits,
Diarrhœa,	Piles,
Dropsy,	Stone and Gravel,
Debility,	Secondary Symptoms,
Fever and Ague,	Vernal Affections,
Female Complaints,	Worms of all kinds.

CAUTION.

If the readers of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expence. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on other persons' make.

None are genuine unless the words "Holloway New York and London," are discernible as a Water Mark in every leaf of the book of directions around each box; the same may be plainly seen by holding the leaf to the light. A handsome reward will be given to any one rendering such information as may lead to the detection of any party or parties counterfeiting the medicines or vending the same knowing them to be spurious.

 Sold at the manufactory of Professor HOLLOWAY, 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicine throughout the United States and the civilized world, in boxes, at 35 cents, 88 cents, and $1 40 each.

TO THE ELECTORS

OF THE COUNTY OF

PETERBOROUGH.

Gentlemen,—

The important duties of the late session for this County again calls upon you to consider the privilege of choosing another to represent you in the Legislative Assembly of the Province.

I have been requested by many to offer myself as a candidate at the forthcoming election, and under circumstances which have induced me to place my services at your disposal during the present Parliament.

The course lately pursued by our leading public men, and the combination of the political parties of the Province, call for a suspension of partizan contention, urge to cordial co-operation, and would render inappropriate remarks or comparisons as to their past respective merits or demerits.

I apprehend that any man at present offering himself for the suffrages of the electors, has chiefly to confine himself to the expression of his opinions relative to the political combination entered into with a view to certain constitutional changes.

Were this combination formed under ordinary circumstance, or for ordinary purposes, the wisdom and expediency of it might justly be called in question; but considering that it was formed under circumstances fraught with danger to the United Province, and for the special object of remedying existing difficulties, it merits our highest approbation—and, I believe, must tend to raise in the public estimation the character of all concerned in it.

It has my entire approval; and should the forthcoming election result favorably to myself, I am prepared to give the present Administration my cordial support in carrying out the important objects for which it has been formed.

Thus as good a prospect is before us of being able, peaceably, to settle difficulties of no ordinary character, is matter for devout thankfulness; especially when we regard the disturbed condition of the world generally, and of this Continent, in particular; and it should be the prayer of every one who recognizes an over-ruling Providence in the affairs of men and nations, that God's blessing may be vouchsafed, in order to perfect that which has been so well begun—and permanently to establish peace and justice in this portion of the dominions of Her Majesty, our Gracious Sovereign.

There are three matters of general and abiding importance that will exist and call for special notice, whatever may be the issue of present arrangements. They are: our Militia and Defence, our Finances, and the Settlement of the Country.

As regards the first of these, my opinions have undergone no change. I have only to elucidate my great dissatisfaction that matters so peculiar and complicated in their nature should have been wholly committed to the vagaries of inexperience and consequent incompetence. Whilst glad to see some steps in the right direction, I hope the time is not far distant when a system will be adopted which will afford increased and really efficient military instruction to our population, and yet be commensurate with our resources, and adapted to our circumstances.

The subject of our finances has been one of much anxiety to every thinking man, and I shall cordially support every wise measure for regulating our expenditure according to the means and resources of the Province: and also will hail with pleasure every honest effort made to carry out the wise spirit of our constitution, which requires that public disbursements should be kept strictly under Parliamentary control.

The settlement of the Province is a question that must necessarily engage much of the attention of the Member for this County. I think we have every reason to expect that a more liberal system will be adopted than has hitherto prevailed; and that by united effort on the part of all interested, we may secure better communication with the back country, and thereby ensure its more speedy settlement. I have undertaken a matter of importance in connection with this subject, which will require my presence at Quebec next week, and circumstances alone can determine the course I shall be called upon to pursue as regards the canvass of the County.

I take this opportunity of thanking very cordially those who have, without solicitation on my part, tendered me their support. I am not insensible to their good will, nor to the responsibilities that it may entail upon me.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
F. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterboro', August 2, 1864.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN:

An Election will take place in September or October next, when you will be called upon to choose a Member to represent the Trent Division.

Having been elected by your confidence in 1863 to fill up the unexpired time occasioned by the decease of the late Hon. E. Murney, and the resignation of the Hon. Sidney Smith, I have during the past year devoted as much of my time as it was possible for me to do in attending the two Sessions of Parliament, and also in attending to the requests of such of the constituents as have seen fit to honor me with their land and other matters, not immediately connected with Parliamentary duties.

We are about beginning a new era in the history of the politics of our country. The present move in the formation of a Ministry who pledge themselves to bury the feuds of the past, and to work together for the general good of the country, by bringing such measures before the next Session of Parliament as will tend to a final settlement of the sectional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada, demands our serious consideration.

I may be permitted to state that I shall accord to them a fair trial, and whether in or out of Parliament, to assist by every means in my power the consummation of so desirable an object; trusting that Upper Canada may receive that which she is justly entitled to, and that both Provinces will be greatly benefitted by the change.

I have concluded from the numerous personal requests, as also by letters from many parts of the Division, to again place myself at the disposal of the Electors, and if again honored with your confidence, to discharge the trust committed to me in as satisfactory a manner as possible.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Yours &c. &c.

H. CALCUTT'S Compound Liquid Couler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to supply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

A Flank Movement.—One of Sigel's soldiers gives the following account of a foraging adventure he had in Virginia:

"Well you see, I goes down to dat old fellow's place dat has a beech-orchard, verv'eve was stedbioned, to atheal some beeches, and ven I gets to de vront gate vat you dinks I see? I sees dere a pig pull-dog, and he looks mighty savage. So I dinks I frighdens him, and I says, "Look here, Mr. Pull-dog, stand back, I fights on dis line all summer." But de pull-dog, he don't care for dat, so I slanks him!"

"How did you do that?"

"Vy, I goes vay around, so as the pull-dog couldn't see me, and ven I goes to de back gate vat you thinks I see? Vy dere I see dat same old pull-dog! So I slanks him again."

"How did you do that?"

"Vy, I goes vay around again, as he couldn't see me to another little beech orchard, and ven I gets dere vat you dinks I see? Vy dere I see dat same old pull-dog! So I slanks him again."

"How did you do that?"

"Vy, I says to dat old pull-dog, Look Mister Pull-dog, I slanks you dree and every dimes I find you de same pull-dog. Tam your old beeches; who es for your old beeches? My dime is next month and de country may go to de devill for beeches; so I goes to my dent."

When young Hodge first came up to town, his father told him it would be polite, when being helped at dinner, to say to the host, "Half that, if you please." It so happened that, at the first dinner to which he was invited, a sucking pig was one of the dishes. The host, pointing with his knife to the young porker, asked, "Well, Mr. Hodge, will you have this, our favorite ... or haunch of mutton?" Upon which, deferring his lemon, he replied, "Half ..., if you please," to the consternation of all present.

"Why does the operation of hanging kill a man?" inquired Dr. Whately. A physiologist replied, "Because inspiration is checked, circulation stopped, and blood suffuses and congests the brain." "Bosh," replied his Grace, "it is because the rope is not long enough to let his feet touch the ground."

"Isaac," said Mrs. Partington to her nephew, "when you enter the state of alimony, choose a virtuous and well-informed young woman. Then, my dear, your love will be inferred, and your posterity ascertain." She looked exceedingly solemn, and continued to put potatoes on the door-knob.

NEITHER ONE OR THE OTHER.—A very diminutive specimen of man lately solicited the hand of a fine buxom girl.—"Oh, no said the fair but insulting lady, "I can't think of it for a moment. The fact is, John, you are a little too big for a cradle, and a little too small to go to church with."

A grammarian conjugated the increasing heat in somewhat the following style: Hot, hotter, hottest; hottentot, hottentoter, hottentotist; hottentotism, hottentotissimus, hot as an oven, hot as two ovens, hot as four ovens, hot as seven ovens! How comfortable to contemplate, this fine weather!

A friend thus describes his summer's gardening operations: "The bugs ate our cucumbers, our chickens ate the bugs, neighbors' cats ate the chickens, and we are in hopes that something will now eat the cats."

"I want to ask you a question," said a little boy to the Yankee School Ma'am. "Well my son." "Why is a gin place like a bad ...ing?" "I can't tell; my boy." "Because you can't pass it," said the boy.

Secretary for Canada.

ATTENTION is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.
Policies effected on or before 31st January next will receive a full year's bonus over those effected thereafter.

PATENT WATER-DRAWER!
AT BYTHE MILLS.

You must remember that by buying one of my Water-drawers, you get your water pure, which you cannot do by a suction Pump. I warrant them not to freeze, and to stand as long, if not longer, than any Pump; and, besides, you save over fifty per cent. I can sell them cheaper than any Pump-maker in Canada! If anything goes astray by fair play within one year from the time of purchase, I bind myself to re-place it; so you cannot be deceived. Now, any one who is in need of a Pump would do well to get one of my Water-drawers at once. I have two teams out at all times to deliver them, and persons residing at a distance will receive prompt attention by sending a letter to the undersigned

N. H. DOWN'S
VEGETABLE BALSAMIC
ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt., Nov. 24th, 1856.
Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.
I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.
I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.
J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.
Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS, COLDS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs. Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.
For as more than half the disease "to which flesh is heir," originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.
ADVICE.
Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

TANNER'S ENGLISH OINTMENT is an old ... that has long been used in North America and the United States, and is recommended by many Doctors in their practice for Breaking Bones, Rheumatism, Sore Eyes, Sore Throat, Colds, Coughs, Colored Humors, &c. We will leave the public to judge for themselves as to the virtues of this Ointment by reading the certificates below from Gentlemen of high standing, personally known where want or the reliance may be placed.

(From a Minister.)

DR. TANNER,
Honor Sir,
Your German Ointment I have used in my family for a good many years and consider it a very good article for Sore Eyes. I was afflicted on at one time that I was compelled to leave my pulpit, but after using it by washing it into my eyes for a short time, my eyes began to grow stronger and get better. I am now able to read print as far off as any person.

THE NEW-MOWN HAY.

When swallows dart from cottage eaves,
And farmers dream of barley sheaves;
When apples peep amid the leaves,
And woodlanes scent the way—
We love to fly from daily care—
To breathe the bucolic country air;
To join our hands and form a ring,
To laugh, and sport, and dance, and sing,
Amid the new-mown hay.

A stranger comes with eyes of blue!
Quoth he, "I'm love, the spring and you
Were born to pass an hour with you,
This pleasant summer day,"
"Come in! come in! you saucy elf!
And who's your friend?" "'Tis friendship's self!"
"Come each—come both our sports to share;
There's welcome kind, and room to spare
Amid the new-mown hay."

The ring is formed. But who are these?
"Come tell your errand, if you please,
You look so sour and ill at ease,
You dim the face of day."
"Ambition!" "Jealousy!" and "Strife!"
And "Scorn!" and "Weariness of Life!"
"If such your names, we hate your kin;
The place is full, you can't come in
Amid the new-mown hay."

Another guest came bounding by,
With brow unwrinkled, fair and high—
With sunburnt face, and roguish eye—
And asks your leave to stay.
Quoth he, "I'm Fun, your right good friend!"
"Come in! Come in! with you we'll end!"
And thus we frolic in a ring,
And thus we laugh, and dance, and sing,
Amid the new-mown hay.

BEWARE WIDOWS.

I don't think I had any intrusive dread of them, but then, you understand, my sister, whom I always regarded as a model for her sex—so wise, so sensible, so prudent, with such a profound knowledge of the world—warned me against them from the first.

"Take care of yourself, Abijah!" she said, "and above all, keep clear of widows. I've known em to marry a man in spite of himself, and you are just the sort to be taken in by the deceiving creatures. La! don't they know how to get around a man, and find the soft spot in his heart!"

And I determined to take her advice, for I always thought that if ever I did make up my mind to marry, I would like to exercise some choice in the matter—to select my own wife, and not to be guided by any one else, or to be taken by storm.

I was not young; in fact my hair was gray; I owned to fifty, and left most of my liver in India. But then, I had brought home instead a good deal of money, which my sister told me would be an attraction anywhere. In fact, I was surprised to find how highly wealth, intelligence, and the indescribable air of foreign travel, was appreciated in my native village. Before I went away I was nothing in particular but a poor boy, and while gone I had spent nine-tenths of my time perched upon a stool in my counting room in Calcutta, and was accounted there only a plodding merchant. But on my return what a change! If I might judge from the smiling, flattering reception I everywhere received, I was a very great man indeed.

Shawls and diamonds, and a few lacs of rupees surely ought to be sufficient to make a man out of almost any sort of material—why not out of Abijah Barnes, as well as of another. My weak eyes, and bald head, and sallow skin might have been the result of burning the midnight oil: but they were not. Some people probably, thought so, or I should not have been pestered by applications to become a member of all sorts of learned societies, otherwise it could not have been for the fees and contributions. Though my sister did intimate as much, I never believed her.

But this was neither here nor there. It was in regard to the subject of matrimony that my sister warned me most earnestly. "Above all things beware of widows!" and I, not rightly appreciating her advice, still resolved to act upon it, and I very soon had the opportunity.

I did not quite know what to do with myself. I had no relations save my sister, and the time hung heavily upon my hands. So I resolved, first of all, to make a tour of the fashionable summer resorts before setting myself in my new town mansion for the winter.

I had a dim fancy that I ought to have a mistress for my mansion, and my sister informed me that only a fashionable lady would suit the situation. Those are the very words she used, otherwise I should never have thought of applying them to my future wife. She gave me entire latitude in my choice, with the proviso of fashion, and the spinster-hood. I did not get on well with the ladies. I didn't understand them, and they did not understand me. They seemed to receive my attentions willingly enough, but I could not help fancying that they were laughing at me all the time, nor that, if it had not been for my money, etc., I should have been in their eyes nothing but a yellow, shrivaled, ugly old man. I felt awkward with one of these pretty creatures. I did not know what to say to them. I could not talk to them forever about riding on elephants and so to a tiger hunt, I never saw one in my life, any more than I had always lived in America; and was afraid to trust to my memory in repeating travellers stories of them. I could not dance, and long disease had made walking a sad fatigue to me. I think I need not wonder that I was laughed at, though it did mortify me at the time.

I couldn't help knowing some widows. There were plenty at the Springs, and they alone understood me. I was terribly afraid of them after what my sister had said; but, somehow, I was more at ease with them than with the young ladies, when I could forget. Finally, I made up my mind that a man could not get married in spite of himself, and determined to accept the sympathy and kindness these lovely widows delighted in bestowing upon me. If they would only fall in love with me, I did not see any occasion for making a martyr of myself, at the same giving them pain by repelling their kindness. Besides, they one and all protested that they never could forget the dear departed, and that of all things, the thought of a second marriage was most detestable to them.

I ought to accept Mrs. Gray, relict of the late respected Simeon Gray, "one of the most extraordinary of men, and quite the best, I do assure you," as Mrs. Gray herself averred. Clad in the deepest and most sombre of widows' weeds, with a patient sadness overshadowing the saintly purity of her young face, always silent and apart, and shrinking timidly from notice, she had early attracted my attention, and I felt for her a certain sympathy which I could not bestow upon her more easily consoled sisters.—There can be no danger here I thought. Her heart is too evidently in the tomb which holds the mouldering remains of the best of men. She lives only for that beautiful boy; whose fair curling hair and pale lovely face is always seen peeping from behind her black robes. I am safe in speaking kindly to her, and I do really sympathize with her loneliness, for I begin to feel that it is hard to live without companionship in this world.

But I did not get on well with my task of consoling the beautiful widow. She received me with a mournful indifference, very chilling to an awkward and bashful man like me. She listened politely but coldly to my flattering remarks, and repelled all my attempts to persuade her to take the air in my carriage. She could not even reprove a sigh of impatience when I sat down by her and tried to divert her mind with the relation of some of my Indian stories.

I saw all this for I am very sensitive and self-conscious, like all bashful men, but it only made me pity her the more, and aid me to forming new plans for showing my sympathy. Poor thing! it was so sad to see her there, in that gay and crowded resort so grief-stricken and utterly alone, and I was quite in despair with the failure of all my efforts. I am not as a general thing, fond of children, but little Carlos Gray was an exception. I think my overflowing pity for his desolate mother reached him also. He pined, and his little pale face grew almost transparent in its wonderful beauty. I thought I might do something for the child if I could not console the mother. So I timidly asked Mrs. Gray one evening, as I sat by her side, if I might not take Carlos for a drive with me in the morning.

"Oh, Mr. Barnes!" she replied with the first gleam of interest she had shown in anything I had said, "you are a great deal kinder to me than I deserve. So kind, so thoughtful! and I am so absent and absorbed in my own sad thoughts that I have not, I fear, appreciated you. I know Carlos needs the air, and if I could trust him away from my sight a moment, he should go with you, and I would try to thank you as I ought. But I cannot—I cannot even with you, and I must rouse myself, and remember that I have him to live for. I must take him out to walk myself, and no doubt it will do us both good."

And I heard a long sigh, and sat looking down upon the white hands folded in her lap in almost glistening contrast to the black robes she wore.

"But indeed ma'am" I said hurriedly, "you are not strong enough for morning walks. Let me lend you my carriage, and you take the little boy a drive instead."

"Oh no, my kind friend, no, indeed! I could not be so ungrateful as to deprive you of your carriage. Not for the world would I do it. really poor dear Mr. Gray has not left us much money, I fear; and we must not shrink from walking, or from many other things that we have not been quite used to doing."

Oh, how sad and patient she looked as she said this, as if she only endured her sorrowful life now that its brightness was gone. A new feeling came over me. I longed to take her to my heart and shield her from every grief and care. Poor frail and beauteous flower. Surely, she could not long withstand the cold winds of adversity.—Would that I might afford her shelter.

I was silent for half a minute, revolving in my mind what I should say to persuasion. At length I stammered—

"I really beg that you will take the carriage as a personal favor to myself. The horses need exercise, my coachman says, and I cannot ride myself—at least not to-morrow. I prefer——"

I was going to say that which was not true but she interrupted me.

"Oh, Mr. Barnes, I will not permit you to make such a sacrifice for me, and I see you will not yield a point, so I must. If you will permit Carlos and me to accompany you to-morrow, I shall be most happy and most grateful."

She gave a little sigh as she said these words, enough to show that she had not made the concession lightly; and then, lest I should feel, perhaps, that I had been urgent beyond reason, she exerted herself to enter into conversation. I think I had never spent a more pleasant hour than the one that followed.

Mrs. Gray and Carlos occupied places in my carriage the next morning, and the next, and the next. It was giving new life to the child, she said, and she did not refuse, for his sake. I thought it was doing her as much good, she grew so cheerful, and even gay at times. But I dared not notice the change lest she should take the alarm and deprive me of the intense pleasure those drives afforded. But she grew, day by day, more friendly and more confidential with me. She seemed to regard me as an excellent elderly friend, and to receive kindness from me almost as if I had been a father or an uncle. I wondered that I should feel any dissatisfaction at this, but I did.

But I am making my story too long; it is so pleasant to refer to those happy days before—but all in good time.

I lingered, and lingered, and the season waned. I had ceased to mingle in the society of the place. My poor, sad little friend absorbed my time and thoughts. I was so virtuously employed that I took great credit to myself. "Even my sister could find no fault with me," I thought; I am perfectly safe, now, and I went elsewhere, who knows that I might not be caught by some of these designing creatures she is always talking about?"

But I could not stay forever. The season drew to a close, the gay throng had departed, and only a few stragglers, like myself, remained. My agents were pressing me to come to town, to look after some neglected business, and I must soon leave. I said as much to Mrs. Gray as we drove homeward one pleasant September morning when to my surprise, she burst into a passion of tears—she who had always been so calm and self controlled.

"And I shall be all alone, then! Oh, Mr. Barnes, why, why did you not leave me to the solitude and sadness to which I was growing accustomed? But forgive me, oh, forgive me, my kind friend. These bright days which you have made for us will be a happy memory for little Carlos and me, in the dark hours, and toiling years that lie before us. I do so thank you for them, though I must have often seemed ungrateful."

"Oh, no, indeed, Mrs. Gray. In truth you have had nothing to be grateful for, and I am more than repaid in my own pleasures for any I have been able to give you. But you will soon return to your own house, will you not?"

"Home, Mr. Barnes—my home! Alas! I have now no spot that I can call such. Carlos and I are poor, homeless wanderers," and then she fell a weeping once more, as if her very heart would break.

I dont know how it happened, but when I came to my senses again. I held her in my arms, and, bending down my face close to her tear-stained cheek, I was wildly telling her all my love and pity, and beseeching her to become my wife, and allow me the privilege of sheltering her beneath my roof and in my heart. She did not answer me for a long time, but she clung to me and gradually her sobs died away. When we drove up to the hotel an hour later, it was my affianced wife whom I handed from the carriage.

I was to leave in three days, and, as there was no preliminaries to settle, we decided to be married on the morning of my departure, and go away together. During all those days I was bewildered with joy. We were married privately in the little church, after which we returned to the hotel for a late breakfast before leaving. As I stood for a moment in the office, making the last arrangements, I heard a gentleman, who had just returned after two weeks' absence say:

"So the widow has succeeded at last. The grief and desolation dodge has paid better than I expected; but the fellow must have been very new to have been caught by it."

A dead silence followed, broken only by a smothered "by Jove!" from the speakers' lips. I wondered what they all looked at me so strangely for, but laid it to the account of my own situation. It did not occur to me that the gentleman's remarks had any application to me. But they had. Mrs. Barnes is not at all the woman that Mrs. Gray was. Before we had been married two months, a big boy came home from sea, and a boyden of a girl from school. Mrs. Barnes informed me that I shall have to provide for her three children, which I would do willingly if I might never see their faces again. She is neither so pretty, so young, nor so amiable as I thought, and I wish I had taken my sister's advice, to "beware of widows."

ST. PATRICK'S BODY FOUND.—While the workmen engaged in the renovation of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin—the oldest church in Ireland—were digging up a portion of the flooring in one of the aisles, they discovered a large stone coffin of curious workmanship buried a few feet below the surface. The coffin, when opened, was found to contain the skeleton of an ecclesiastic, supposed to have been buried there 900 years! The skull was perfect, and the bones crumbled into dust when exposed to the air. On the lid of the coffin there was a full-length figure of a Bishop in his robes. It was inspected by some antiquarians, including Dr. Dodd, who expressed it as his belief that it was the original founder of the church, St. Patrick. It is in good preservation, and is in every respect an interesting relic. When the church is finished it will be placed in a most prominent position, because there is no more remarkable antiquity in the building.

THE SUBSTITUTE MARKET.—The Detroit Free Press has the following:—The purchasing of substitutes goes forward more slowly now. Those who have bought them are wealthy and good business men. They knew that the price must advance, and accordingly they purchased at once, and nearly all have bought who proposed to. The consequence is, that very few are now being put in, and very few can afford to put them in at present prices. The highest price that we have yet heard of, was paid for two substitutes on Tuesday, at $1,351 each. The lowest price yesterday was $850. Nobody dares make an estimate what the price will be after the draft takes place.

SECRETARY CHASE is said to have invested a million of dollars in English funds. He was not worth a tenth part of this amount when he entered Lincoln's cabinet. He has certainly made his situation in the Treasury Department a very profitable one to himself of not to the country. What inference must we draw in relation to his confidence in our own Federal securities to which he has so earnestly invited his countrymen to invest? Has he forgotten that "greenbacks are as good as gold?"

Among the wounded Confederate prisoners taken by Sherman at Atlanta were two women. The arm of one was discovered during the amputation of her leg. The other was mortally wounded through the breast by grape shot.

Charles Dickens is to receive £12,000 for his new serial novel from his publisher, Messrs. Bradbury & Hall—£6,000 on the publication of the first number, and the remainder on the completion of the work.

A Student's Duel at Heidelberg.

A correspondent of the London Post, writing from Heidelberg on the 10th inst., says:—

Passing through Heidelberg, I saw one of the saddest and most striking sights—the funeral procession, by torchlight, of the unfortunate student, who, about a month ago, was found in broad daylight desperately wounded by a pistol shot and bleeding to death, in one of the public thoroughfares of the town. He was at once carried to the hospital, and, on searching his papers, there was no doubt the wound was inflicted by himself, in consequence of a quarrel with another student there. A challenge had been the result, but the other declining to fight with swords, to prove that he was not a coward, had insisted that they should draw lots, and that the one on whom the dot fell should kill himself with a pistol.

The victim was a native of Wurtemberg in the Crontan tract of students; and, knowing that his father was dangerously ill he begged for a reprieve of a fortnight, but this was refused, and he was bound to kill himself before a certain hour on the following day. Universal indignation has been felt, and every effort had been made to discover the author of the murderous challenge, as foul play is strongly suspected, but beyond that he is a Pole, nothing is known, as the Croatian would not give up his name. Each of the chiefs of the different corps into bound themselves by a solemn oath to kill the murderer, and one of them never left the bedside of the wounded man, hoping that in his delirium, he might divulge the name. When taken to the hospital, and told that he would recover, he declared that as soon as he was well he would kill himself, as he was bound to do so.

The different chiefs of the corps of students came and assured him that he had amply redeemed his honor, but to no purpose. His parents then arrived, and it was hoped that being an only son he would relent. The doctors had hopes of his recovery until two days ago, when bad symptoms set in, and he died on the 5th of July. On the following evening a procession of students, each bearing a torch, accompanied his hearse, drawn by six horses, to the railway station, where he was taken to be buried in his native village, his broken-hearted parents alone accompanying his remains. Nothing could be more sad than the funeral cortege—the mournful notes of the music and the muffled drums, and the 300 students with their flaming torches. On arriving at the station, they all sang in chorus, and after each verse came the well-known French refrain:

Mais ce partant,
Ne verrons point de larmes.
Car c'est le bien venu
Qui gouverne nos jours.

From the station all returned in quick time, and in front of the university the students made funeral pile of their torches, singing in chorus as they threw them away. The crowd then dispersed, and all the students proceeded to a Bier Keller (before agreed on), where the custom is to drink, in perfect darkness, a huge chopin of beer, to the remembrance of deceased when living, and of his remembrance in death; after which they all throw their glasses on the floor, and break them in pieces. It might, indeed, be hoped that such a shocking tragedy would induce the authorities to put a stop to the system of duelling, which prevails at this university to such an extent, that they are not of weekly, but of daily occurrence.

The faces I saw last night were scarred in every variety of form. Some had their faces cut open, the scars scarcely healed; some had bandages around their heads; others huge plasters on their cheeks; and at this present moment, a student is walking about with his nose stuck on with plaster. At Heidelberg scars are considered beauties, in the same way that tatooing is admired in New Zealand. What is also strange, it is considered more honorable to receive than to give cuts. The Germans are loud in their praises of the ordinary duels with swords, as they say only a nose or an eye can be lost, for up to their necks the students are muffled up and protected, and only the faces are exposed. For a nose to be cut off or an eye cut out is by no means a rare occurrence; but the famous Dr. G——s replaces them so perfectly that only to the inner man is the less perceptible.

SHOWING THE DEAD.—There is a curious custom at Harar, of laying out bodies in state during the night before burial. They are placed close to an open window fronting the street, on a couch raised four or five feet from the ground. The corpse is surrounded by high wax tapers, and the whole room is illuminated. Frequently when returning from a tertulia, or a ball, I have been startled to see the fixed and rigid features of some old lady, dressed in their best attire, and apparently reclining before the window. It must be apparent as unnecessary mockery of death, dressing out a corpse in a new suit of clothes, with tight patent leather boots and white neckcloth. I remember one night in particular. I was returning home through one of the by-streets, when, seeing the lower windows of a house illuminated, and concluding that there was a body lying in state, I went towards it. There, close to the window, so close that I could have touched it through the bars, lay the body of a young girl about fifteen years of age. She was dressed out for a ball, with flowers in her hair, and white satin shoes on her feet; her hands grasped in her breast, her eyes closed, and her mouth slightly opened; and altogether her face and expression was one of the most beautiful I ever saw.

A young man at Woodstock, Ill., was drowned while bathing. His father and friends discharged a cannon over the water to raise the body. The gun burst into innumerable fragments, and cut at the crowd only one was hit and that was the father of the drowned young man who was mortally wounded.

The Character of Freemasonry.

Recognising the great truth that all men are brethren, Freemasonry contemplates no superiority but that of intellect and virtue, and yet it members aspire to adopt, many of the excellent points and which make it so. But in manifesting quiet, it is content to pursue its peaceful course, dependent in unobtrusive modesty, with a liberal hand, its beneficent effect in the unfortunate of every clime.

The utility of the order is clearly evinced by the history of its deeds through decades of centuries—its inherent strength by its unwounded emblems of self-humiliation, and its adaptation to the wants of man and society by its remarkable propagation in all the earth.

The Mason's great motive of action is

"A divine particle and a soul
The noblest patriot might be proud to feel."

In the existing state of society, where avarice and selfishness constitute the chief characteristics of man, and charity and virtue, and the tender sentiments of the soul, are remembered only in name or in the sublime duty of Masons to throw off the trammels of prejudice and passion, and sacrifice on the altar of brotherly love and universal good, all feelings of selfishness and interest. They should remember the sacred ties which bind them together, not in empty, unmeaning words merely, but indeed and truth; not in pomp and high-sounding phrase, but in that principle of Light which owes its birth to Heaven, and which, like the gentle night-dew, distils its refreshing sweetness over withered flowers, to foster and restore.

But the Masons' work stops not here. They must not confine their labors to the alleviation of the more physical wants of man; they must also seek their moral improvement and intellectual culture. The "Sons of Light," standing in the refulgent East, they are naturally the enemies of the fees in ignorance in all its forms. They feel thus the first great step toward relieving the necessities of mankind is to make them acquainted with their wants. The experience of every man furnishes convincing evidence of the fact that no permanent reformation of morals can be effected while the intellect is shrouded in ignorance.—Develope his mental faculties and man becomes a rational being, and once rational, he is open to the salutary lessons of moral truth. Those are thoughts that are illustrated and enforced with great energy and beauty in the Second Degree of Masonry; the general diffusion of light and knowledge is, therefore, one of the cardinal principles of the Order.

But in the diffusion of knowledge it does not seek the advancement of any particular sect or denomination, but the promotion only of the common good. Masonry meddles not with private opinion either in politics or religion, save only to require of those who would enter its sanctuaries, a belief in an Al-Wise Omnipotent God, of infinite goodness, justice and mercy. Its objects are simple, its plans easily understood, and the chief duty it inculcates is to act promptly and energetically for the good of mankind.

In the lodge, philanthropists of every creed can and do meet on a common platform.—Catholic and Protestant, Episcopalian, Unitarian, Baptist, Universalist, etc., etc., judge fully and each other as fellow laborers in the same high and holy cause; for Masonry draws them together by "whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report." Masonry leaves each man's religion to himself and his God; and we, as Masons, are content therefore with a faithful discharge of the moral obligations which rest upon us as social beings, as members of one great family without compromising the opinions or feelings of the least of our brethren. We relieve the distressed, we visit the sick, we bury the dead, and protect the widow and orphan, without stopping to inquire of what faith they are, who are the recipients of charity.—Boston Herald.

MONKEY STORIES.—Cassell's "Popular Natural History" means to be entertaining if it is not always accurate, as we may see from the following extract:—"The small pox having spread fast lately among the monkeys of South America, Dr. Parkes, secretary to the Bloomsbury street Vaccination Society, was struck by the idea of arresting its future progress. Vaccination was, of course, to be the means of staying the plague; and his scheme for its introduction was singularly ingenious. He bought two or three boys hand and foot, and then vaccinated them in the presence of an old monkey, who was observed closely attentive to his proceedings. He then left him alone with a young monkey with some of the matter on a table, and hands it a lancet, guarded, that it might not cut to deep by a projecting piece of steel. The Doctor witnessed the result from a neighbouring room; the old monkey dressed the young one bound him without delay and vaccinated him with all the skill of a professor."

CHAMPS IN THE AMUSEMENT OF OUR BRITISH TROOPS.—The Morning Post says: "We believe it is no secret that an important change is about to be made in the armament of our troops. It is understood that the committee appointed to consider the subject have strongly recommended that the whole of our infantry should be furnished with breech-loading rifles, and there appears to exist but little doubt that the recommendation will be acted upon."

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1864.

THE ELECTION.

The election is upon us. To-day and to-morrow the inhabitants of this County are by the exercise of their franchise, to say who they will have to represent them in Parliament. We exercise the right of self-government. In no country in the world is so happy a measure of power placed in the hands of the people. This power is deposited from our Sovereign. It becomes us, then, like loyal men so to use it as to render to that Sovereign the greatest fealty. Thrice happy people! No universal suffrage drown down the voice of wise and worthy men; no proud despot sways his haughty sceptre over a crushed people; the power of government rests not on the shoulders of a despotic autocrat, a haughty nobility, or a proud aristocracy, but on the broad shoulders of the people. Upon you, then, Citizens, rests the responsibility of good or bad government; forget it not for a moment! Your representatives may prove false to their pledges, and deceive your hopes; they who promised economy may riot in extravagance; and those whom you thought honourable may prove perfidious; they may banter their birth-right (the name of an honest man) for a paltry office—their mess of pottage; but forget it not! The power of upholding or punishing such conduct rests in your hands also. But better days, we hope, are dawning upon Canada. The apostacy of FOLEY and MACDOUGALL met its reward. Under a new political era—with a new Constitution—let the Electors look to it that upon them rests not the odium, dishonour and disgrace of sending to the Legislature men incompetent for, and unworthy of, that most difficult task: the development and inauguration of a new system of internal government. The man whom you send is a representative man—you hold him up to the world as one in whom, more than in any other man in your midst, are centred all those parts which you think desirable in a legislator. Your are to consider the present, the past, and the future—our end state as a country—the causes of our trouble—the future swollen, as to our distress, by a continuance in the way of the past and present, or moulded to a state of prosperity by the cunning hand of the able statesman. It while prosperous, care and wisdom are required to maintain that prosperity, how much more difficult is it, while in a state of decline and financial embarrassment, to reconstate a country. To render good service to our land, a member should be possessed of judgment to discern; wisdom to guide, and honorable and good intent that he may exercise his qualities for the good of the people. If, then, men of Peterborough! there is before you one having all these qualities—one known to you as intelligent, honorable, temperate, moral—one whose past life is to you a guarantee for the future—one of respectable position in society—independent as to means—and, withall, favorably known to the heads of the Government and the County at large; then, for the sake of your Sovereign, as loyal men—for the sake of your country, which demands this at your hands—for the sake of yourselves and your County—let that man be your representative in Parliament.

FAIR DAY.

Tuesday last was the County Fair day. A great number of people were in Town, but they seemed as if they came more for a holiday than for business—so little money did they spend. On no Fair day has less money crossed the counters. Though there was a fair show of stock, yet very few horses or cattle changed hands. The day was delightful, and the many happy faces of our country folks were, we thought, happier looking than usual. Sobriety and good conduct marked the day. May it always be so.

Mr. PERRY'S QUALIFICATION.

Within the last few days we have had several questions addressed to us, as to Mr. Perry's Qualification, and whether documents were in the Sheriff's hands with those notes on the day of nomination. In reply we have to say that Mr. Perry in his declaration of qualification, gives in four hundred acres of wild land in the south of Smithtown as owned by him, and worth £400, free of all charges and encumbrances whatever; that the writs in the Sheriff's hands against lands, and of course affecting and forming a charge against those 400 acres, were all held previously to the day of nomination; and that the aggregate amount of those writs is about TEN times the declared value of the lands.

COL. HAULTAIN'S EAST BELMONT COMMITTEE.—Porter Preston, Esq., Chairman, and John Preston, Ezekiel Nixon, Philip Gannon, John Anderson, John Brown, Jonathan Wild, J. R. Williamson, James Clerihue, and Peter Wright, Esquires.

TWO MEETINGS were held on Monday night in North Monaghan, by a deputation from Peterboro'. Monaghan promises to do her duty—and we, who know the men of that good township, feel that they will not be wanting at the polls in rendering the Colonel a warm and generous support.

OTONABEE, the of whose citizens, through false impressions, were estranged, have returned to the conviction that their is but one man deserving of her intelligent support—and that man is Colonel Haultain. She promises him a majority of one hundred and fifty.

SMITH, jealous of the county's honor, declares that Mr. Perry shall not represent them. The men of that good Township have never yet been wanting to the best interests of the county.

COLONEL HAULTAIN has just returned from his canvas of the back country. Everywhere he has met with enthusiastic receptions. The back townships promise him a very large majority.

DUNNER AND ASPHODEL are thoroughly organized and determined not to be caught napping.

The County Council meets at their Chambers in Peterborough, on Tuesday next, thirteth instant.

We notice by our exchanges that the Drill Sergeants scattered throughout the Province for the instruction of the Volunteers, have been recalled.

VOTE the first day—Vote before 12. A vote the first day is worth two the second.

THE CONCERT.

Madam Anna Bishop's concert came off on Wednesday night, the 31st ultimo, with great eclat. The Madam's pleasing and youthful appearance, causing many to wonder if that was the woman who, thirty years ago, charmed the London audiences with her delightful song. She had all the appearance of a woman of twenty-eight, while she is over fifty. Without disparaging her daughter's appearance, the mother was indeed the handsomer of the two. She has managed to keep as much of her fine voice as of her early beauty. Indeed, while we observed that even in the last few years her voice has greatly failed, we were yet surprised to find it even so good. The daughter, who much resembles her mother, is not so able a singer—she lacks her mother's compass and richness. Withal she is a pleasing singer, and will, no doubt, greatly improve under her mother's able teaching. Sedgwick with his simple little concertina, causes one to wonder how such music is distilled from so simple an instrument. Lascelles is a fine singer—of deep rich voice. His "Good bye at the door," and "Molly Bawn," were beautifully rendered. The singing was somewhat marred by the jingle of the wretched piano that had the assurance to rest on the concert platform. We wish them better fortune in getting a better instrument for their next entertainment. Taken all in all, it was the best concert we have had here for a long time.

LAKEFIELD BAZAAR.

On Wednesday, the 31st ultimo, the Bazaar in aid of the Angelican Church Building Fund, was held in the village of Lakefield.

Mr. Blakely, with a liberal feeling highly appreciated by the Committee, placed his new and commodious hotel at their disposal for the day, and in other respects exerted his best endeavors to render the Bazaar, what it proved to be, successful beyond the most sanguine anticipations entertained by the promoters of the good work. The weather was delicious, more especially felt to be so after the long-continued drought and heat of the summer—cool, yet beautifully bright.

In addition to the attractive display of useful and ornamental work, for which the committee are indebted not only to their immediate neighbours, but to their friends at a distance, in Quebec, Toronto, Hamilton, Lindsay, Peterboro', and, though last not least, Old England. There was an abundant supply of provisions furnished, as was universally acknowledged, at an almost too moderate charge. And all the time Mr. Philp's Peterboro' Band rendered the festivities of the day more enjoyable by their enlivening strains. In fact harmony, in every sense of the word, was of universal prevalence.

The gross receipts amounted to the very handsome sum of $334. The expenses including the Band, the purchase of materials, printing, and breakage, did not exceed, thanks to the liberality of all concerned, $18 91; leaving a balance in the hands of the Committee of $15 9.

Of this sum $300 have been deposited in the Bank of Montreal to the credit of the Fund, the balance being retained for the purchase of materials to add to about $100 worth of unsold articles with which it is intended to endeavour to tempt the friends of the church, on some fine winter's day when sleighing is good and the bright moon is at her full.

COMMUNICATED.

"LET EVERY MAN DO HIS DUTY."—And gently (for we would not be harsh) let Mr. Perry down into the cold shades of oblivion.

NIAGARA ELECTION.—A despatch from Niagara last evening puts the final majority for Mr. Angus Morrison at 63.—Globe.

It will be seen by our advertising columns that Mr. Dunn, late Principal of the Peterborough Grammar School, intends opening a private Grammar School in this place. Of Mr. Dunn's ability and power to teach, we do not consider it necessary to say anything, as he is sufficiently known to the public. That many have strong objections to sending their children to large public schools where all classes and kinds congregate, is an undeniable fact. For such, we think, that a school such as Mr. Dunn intends establishing will be found well adapted—as the morals as well as the education of the pupils will be carefully attended to—and will, therefore, obviate the necessity that parents now have of sending their children elsewhere. We may just observe that the hours are so arranged that the lessons may be prepared thoroughly and at home. We hope to see our young people liberally patronize the Evening Classes; it is a chance they do not often get of improving themselves.

DISASTROUS FIRE IN LINDSAY.—On Saturday morning last, a disastrous fire broke out in the dry goods store of Messrs. McDonough & Kent, on Dundas street. The building was a wooden one, and the flames spread with frightful rapidity, and soon consumed the grocery department of the same firm and the provision store of Mr. John Moule adjoining on the east, when fortunately, the further progress of the fire was stayed. The loss by this fire is at least about $60,000. McDonough & Kent's stock was insured for $30,000; their buildings were also fully insured. Mr. John Moule had his stock insured for $1,250, and his house for $1,000.

MAN DROWNED.—We learn that a laboring man named McDermott, was drowned in Benson's dam, on Friday night last. It appears that while crossing the boom, to visit and bring money to his wife—who for several months had been confined to her bed by illness—he missed his footing and fell into the water. His wife not expecting him he was not missed until Saturday night last. A search being made on Sunday morning, his body was found under water, his arm being fastened around a stick. We understand that his wife is left in extreme destitution. We hope that the benovelent will see that the sick woman is properly cared for.

CHILD DROWNED.—We learn that a little girl of five years, named Dennahay, was accidentally drowned in the Otonabee River, above Mr. Dixon's old mill. The body was found in Rogers' dam. Is it not owing to carelessness that so many children are allowed to frequent the river? If parents would exercise a little more determination in governing their children, they would not so frequently be called to mourn such calamities as this.

OPPOSITION ON THE PORT HOPE AND ROCHESTER ROUTE.—We beg to draw attention to the advertisement in another column, of the Steamer Empress. That favorably known Steamer crosses to Rochester and back every day. She has every accommodation, a good table and cheap fare. Any one going to the United States, will save money, time and hardship by taking this boat.

The next sitting of the County Court and Quarter Sessions, will commence on Tuesday the thirteth day of September instant. If jurors, suitors and witnesses will observe their own interests, they will be in attendance at the opening of the Court. We understand that the business, criminal and civil, will be light.

☞ Rally to the Polls this morning and vote for the Colonel.

PETERBORO' ELECTION.

The following extract appeared in the Toronto Globe, of the 2nd inst.:—

"Col. Haultain is an excellent candidate, well fitted for the position of representative, thoroughly honest and reliable, and commanding the utmost respect of all classes. The best evidence of his fitness is the fact that with his Parliamentary record before them, his opponents are unable to bring against him a single accusation arising out of that record. They are forced to confine themselves to petty accusations, arising out of some trival local and personal matters, all of which prove an investigation to be capable of the most complete and satisfactory explanation. We should exceedingly regret to hear of the defeat of a man in every way so worthy, and trust that his friends will use every effort to put his success beyond a doubt."

THE QUEEN'S DIVISION.

Since Mr. Cottingham signified his intention to contest the Queen's Division against Mr. Simpson, the most encouraging accounts have been received from different parts of the Division. We learn that several influential gentlemen of both parties in even West Durham have signified their intention to use their influence against Mr. Simpson. Mr. Cottingham is now engaged in directing the survey of a new road through the new Townships of this County to Halliburton, and we understand that when he gets through with this duty he will take a tour through the Division. The contest commences under the most favorable auspices for Mr. Cottingham.—Warder.

DEPARTURE OF THE GUARDS.—Yesterday morning the Grenadier Guards and three companies of the Fusiliers, left Montreal by the steamers Montreal and Europa, for Quebec, on their way to Europe. The crowd which assembled to bid them farewell was only equalled by that which assembled to greet the Prince of Wales. When the boats started, the band played "the girl I left behind me," and the crowd cheered with the greatest enthusiasm, all classes joining in the acclaim, from the ladies in their carriages to the gamins of the suburbs.—Globe.

A MISSIONARY IN CHINA CAPTURED.—A letter received by Dr. Malcolm, of Philadelphia, from Rev. T. J. Roberts, dated, "Canton, China, May 9th, 1864," gives the painful intelligence that "there are apprehensions that Brother Knowlton, of Ningpo, has been lost among the rebels; having left home in January last, and not heard from since." Mrs. Knowlton sailed from New York to rejoin her husband, on Saturday the 13th inst., after a stay in this country of two years, and the entire recovery of her health. It is sad to think what intelligence awaits her.

....The number of emigrants arriving at New York, according to the latest returns, is at the rate of 4,271 a week, or about 220,000 a year. Possibly the gross emigration of the year will be something under this; but it is safe to reckon it at two hundred thousand.

ELECT Col. Haultain as your representative, and Canada will thank and applaud you for it!

The London (England) "Spectator" and Hon. Geo. Brown.

The Spectator this morning contains a remarkable article on the speech which Mr. George Brown recently delivered to his constituents in explanation of the origin and purposes of the new Canadian Ministry. The article is written with knowledge and discrimination, and is a perfectly fair specimen. The writer pronounces Mr. Brown's speech as "incomparably the best yet published on the political history, position and prospects of Upper and Lower Canada." "Mr. Brown" continues the Spectator, "talks like an English statesman, without a trace of bombast or dreamy oratory, states facts simply, quotes figures which do not weary, bases a great proposition upon intelligible grounds of national interest, looks steadily at the future, and, above all, refers throughout his discourse to ideas higher than those of mere political expediency." The writer, in quoting the facts and figures of Mr. Brown's comparison between the two Provinces, says that the "state of things is even worse than was at first reported in this country." After noticing some of the breakers which have to be guarded against, the Spectator approaches what is rightly designated "the greatest subject of all"—the political future of the North American Colonies. It agrees unreservedly with the glowing anticipations of Mr. Brown, that the day will come when "the whole of British North America will, in hearty alliance with Great Britain, stand together and be prepared to assume the full duties and responsibilities of a great nation." "That also," says the journalist, "is the dream of the statesmen now coming forward to the front of English politics, the form into which, as they hope, the Colonial Empire will be transmuted. The "mother country" is to be changed from an Empire owning dependencies she does not rule, into a kingdom ringed round with independent but cordial and faithful allies. If these are the views of many among the leading politicians of Canada, we can congratulate her Parliament on its success in the very highest function of Parliaments,—that of breeding and training statesmen. One only hint we would add on a point apparently trifling, but really of vital importance:—If the new Coalition succeeds, as it may, in conciliating all the colonies of the Atlantic coast, and, as it will, in convincing the British Parliament, let it invent for the nation it will have created some common national name, some sound implying unity, which a great population can use. The colonists of Victoria and New South Wales, Tasmania and Queensland, are all alike Australian, but the citizens of the United States, like those of the United Kingdom, have to this hour no name, except one used in reproach and another begotten of arrogance. They are not Yankees, nor the only Americans, and when the Canadians join themselves with the people of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, they will find it wise to adopt a title less unwieldy than that of British North America."—Globe.

☞ Vote early this morning for the Colonel.

THE NEW HARBOR TIME BALL.

Yesterday the time ball erected by the Harbor Commissioners on the roof of Messrs Clark, Winks & Co.'s stores, corner of Commission Street and Custom House Square, was worked in the presence of a number of the Commissioners and other gentlemen who ascended to the position, a most conspicuous one, for that purpose. We have before frequently alluded to this useful and indeed almost indispensable adjunct to a seaport, and we will now give a brief description of the apparatus and its operation:—It consists of a ball, hollow, zinc, which weighs 200 lbs., and is 5 feet in diameter, painted black, and resting on a pole, which runs axis-wise through it perpendicularly, rising to 200 feet above the building. On this pole is a vane, and when the astronomical chronometer in the McGill College observatory shews the hour of twelve, mean solar time, the electric circle is closed and the current speeds instantaneously along the wires which connect with the battery; the magnets become charged; a piece of brass, known as the armature, and holding a small hammer, is drawn inwards; the hammer falls, removes a small wedge, whereon a toothed upright shaft, connected at the upper end with the ball, works; the shaft drops two feet; the ball simultaneously descends as far, and then slowly descends seven feet further, making nine in all. The shaft works vertically within a cylinder, which goes through the upper story; and at its lower extremity is a cylinder of copper, which is filled with air and water, into which the plunger at the lower end of the shaft fits, acting on the pump-sucker principle, the compressed air resisting, and causing the needful slow motion of the ball through the last seven feet of its descent. By the above apparatus, the correct time will also be daily submitted to the fire-alarm telegraph, which is in connection with it. It is primarily intended for the regulation of the chronometers of the vessels in port; but, it will readily be perceived, that private individuals can avail themselves of it to set their chronometers or watches. A connection will be made with the Harbor Commissioners' office, and any institution or individual, can have communication with the same in their offices by means of a wire, connected with a bell which may be caused to ring at the moment of the lowering of the ball. This apparatus is believed to be one of the most simple and perfect extant, and the trial yesterday is considered to have been perfectly successful. The machinery has been made, partly in Montreal and partly in Boston, whilst the astronomical clock and other mechanism have been brought out from England.—Witness.

☞ Go to the Polls and vote early the first day for Col. Haultain.

DEPARTURE OF THE MILITARY TRAIN.—The movement of troops homewards from Montreal, and the coming of which we have known for some time past, began yesterday. At 7 o'clock in the evening, the Military Train, that had been quartered here for two years, embarked on the Richelieu Company's steamer "Montreal," for Quebec, en route to England. A large crowd of spectators crowded the wharf and along the revetment wall to witness the embarkation and departure, amongst them being a large proportion of females, some very young, and many in tears. There were, however, none of those "scenes" so frequently witnessed when troops leave a garrison where they have been long quartered. The departing Military Train were played down to the wharf by the fife and drums of the Guards, and the band of the 30th Regiment, playing as they descended the Jacques Cartier Square, the air usual on these occasions, "The Girl I left behind me." When the time came for their stepping on board, many hands were stretched to take a last farewell of the men, and hearty "good bys" were exchanged as the latter walked between two walls of spectators, with their rifles, haversacks, canteens, and with their blankets strapped upon their shoulders. A number of the more immediate friends of the soldiers were allowed to go on board for a few minutes. Major-Gen. Lindsay, his aides, and Capt. Pope, the Town Major, were on the wharf during the embarkation, as were also a number of the officers of other corps of the garrison in plain clothes, and when the vessel slowly moved away from her mooring, and began to move down the stream cheers arose from the crowd on shore, which were heartily and frequently interchanged on both sides, till the vessel getting fairly on to her speed, the spectators began slowly to disperse. In conclusion, we may state that the Military Train have ever been well looked upon whilst they have stayed in Montreal, and will take their departure from Quebec in the "Peruvian," on Saturday.—Witness.

The Boston Courier says that thirty-seven dollars in gold will buy a Federal bond of one hundred dollars on State Street, while it takes seventy-five dollars in gold to buy a Confederate bond of the same amount in London.

MONEY AND TRADE.

Complaints come to us from Montreal, and Quebec of unusual pressure in the money market, of restrictions of discounts on the part of the banks and consequent inconvenience among traders. Similar causes are assigned for this condition of affairs, the chief of which are the failure of the timber and ship dealers to receive their returns from England, the large amount of capital locked up in the heavy stocks of tea, sugar and other articles now being carried by Montreal merchants, the extraordinary quantity of silver in circulation in the country, which diminishes the movement of bank bills, and consequently lessens the resources of the banks, and lastly, the fact that a portion of the resources of the banking companies are derived from deposits made by Americans, and withdrawable at short notice, which, although used in certain descriptions of business by the banks, cannot safely be employed in transactions of a long date. If these were the sole causes of the monetary stringency, there would be small cause for alarm. The timber and ships unsold in England will find purchasers at some price, and the loss will be written off either by the bank or the dealer; the goods held in Montreal will gradually go into consumption, and will not be replaced in the face of a tight money market; the silver glut will, we hope, be lessened by a general effort on the part of the public to reduce coin to its real value; and the American deposits being of comparatively small amount can have little effect on the monetary affairs of the Province. But it is to be feared that there are deeper and more dangerous agents at work in producing the present stringency in Lower Canada. It is a very current fact that, closely connected as are Upper and Lower Canada in trade, their seasons of inflation and depression occur at different times. Thus the inflation of the decade from 1837 to 1847, which in Montreal culminated in the greatest disasters, and caused that city to be deserted as a place which had seen its best days, had but little evil effect in Upper Canada. In the decennial period of inflation preceeding 1857, on the other hand, Upper Canada undertook more than her full share of speculation, and suffered accordingly, while Montreal passed through it almost unruffled, her merchants having profited by the experience of the previous decade, and confined themselves to safe and steady business. But it is not in ordinary human nature to bear ten years of prosperity, and continue to be cautious and prudent, as well as bold and enterprising. Even the wisest and most cautious of men have their moments of weakness, and a long career of success is the strongest incentive to ra-hness and over confidence. We do not mean to say that there are not business men in Montreal who, amidst general prosperity, have kept their heads cool and are doing a safe and profitable business, but we are quite sure that their are hundreds who have been swept into the vortex of speculation, and are now struggling to obtain a safe footing on dry land. Young houses, with little capital and experience, but of vigorous energies, are the chief leaders in speculative movements, though their example often induces old houses to tread in unsafe paths. It is to those departures of commerce that we owe the sight of five or six Montreal lagmen at one time in a single Upper Canadian village, containing half a dozen stores. It is owing to their efforts that so many young men, without capital or business knowledge leave the plough to stand behind a counter and take upon themselves a load of debt which they carry to their graves. The young firms call themselves energetic and enterprising, and boast that they do business in a new style, and have no old fogy notions about them; but it would be far better for the country and for themselves too, if they allowed business men to seek them, and did not create a false trade by pressing goods on men without means or character.

That Montreal has over-traded during the last few years is generally admitted, though no one can tell to what extent til the culmination of her inflation. That she has overbuilt herself also, is beyond doubt. She has large accumulated wealth, and many new buildings, doubtless, have been erected by men of independent means. But others have been built on speculation, with funds withdrawn from the ordinary channels of trade, and have to some extent weakened the resources of the mercantile class.

The present question is, whether the undoubted state of the inflation of the trade of the Lower Province will at once culminate in the crisis and depression which will certainly occur sometime. During the present century the number seven has been fatal to commercial enterprise, but in at least one case, a special cause, we mean the failure of the United States Bank, brought on the crash somewhat earlier. The American civil war will have an important influence on the present decade, and almost defies anticipation of the crucial period. It is difficult to discover a reason why Canada should not run through the usual decennial period, ending in 1867, unless a stoppage of the war should cause a convulsion earlier. Even Montreal does not appear to have reached the top of the wave of inflation, and it is probable that her present difficulties will be of a temporary character.

It is of great importance that the rise and culmination of these periods of inflation should be closely watched by our merchants and bankers, and their phenomena noted for future guidance. We do not suppose that they can be altogether prevented by any action on the part of capitalists; but it is not impossible that their extent may be lessened. The moneyed public of England possess, through the operations of the bank, a guide to the position of affairs as well as a means of checking undue inflation and speculation. There is no institution in Canada, nor is it probable that it could be worked advantageously in this country. But the banks of Canada, as a class, exercise somewhat the same influence over the money market as the great bank in England, and whatever restrictive steps have been taken at this moment in Montreal, have unquestionably been influenced by a regard for the safety of the public as well as of the shareholders. It is infinitely better that the banks should check speculation by early and judicious repression, than that they should close their doors to all applicants after the crash has come, and safe men really need their aid. A steady watch against undue speculation by the banks during the next two years would unquestionably prevent the occurrence of an immense amount of suffering.

We have hitherto spoken entirely of Lower Canada, because the West cannot be said to be afflicted with an inflation of trade. Eighteen fifty-seven gave it a lesson which it will not forget in a hurry. Hard work and short commons have been its portion since. Has it been blessed with good crops it might perhaps have been able to speculate. As it is, it has been content to work. A crisis in Montreal would affect the West by causing the stoppage of many country traders, and by temporarily disarranging banking credits. But there can be no wide-spreading crisis during the present decade in Upper Canada. We have fortunately built no castles of canada during the last seven years, to be toppled over by the first puff of wind. In spite of short crops, the West is better able to meet its indebtedness now than when it seemed to be rolling in wealth.—Globe.

MR. SWINYARD AND THE G. W. R.—A large number of the people of Brantford took advantage of Mr. Swinyard's visit to that place on Monday, to present him with a complimentary address. Mr. Swinyard announced that the G. W. R. Company are about to build a branch from Harrisburg to Brantford, and in the meantime a steam train has been started from Brantford to Paris. He also announced that the Road would this year pay a dividend of five or six per cent on the capital. This will be cheering news for the shareholders, and says much for the management of Mr. Swinyard. We sincerely rejoice in the fact, and trust all our Railways may soon be in a similar position. We were glad to see that Mr. Swinyard expressed himself strongly against amalgamation.—Sarnia Observer.

Muller, the Alleged Murderer, on His Way to England.

Franz Muller, the alleged murderer, sailed on Sunday at noon, from New York, on board the steamship Bremen, for Southampton, he is to stand his trial for the murder of Mr. Briggs in a railway car. Marshall Murray delivered the prisoner into the hands of Inspector Tanner, of the London Police, on his arrival at the vessel, and shortly after-wards the steamer sailed. On leaving the Tombs for the steamer the prisoner presented a shabby appearance. His hair was uncombed and he had no hat to cover his head. A glazed cap, however, was found by one of the officers, who presented it to him; but he appeared ashamed to wear it, and instead of placing it on his head he carried it in his hand, and in that manner entered the carriage and was driven off.

During his confinement in the Tombs he sometimes broke through his apparent stolidity, and gave evidence by his nervous and irritable temperament, that his control over his passions was by no means complete. Visitors to the Tombs occasionally furnished him with newspapers and these he would read lying on his bed. The two years and three months which he passed in England enabled him to learn the language moderately well; but it misunderstood by persons who spoke with him, he resorted to various means to make them comprehend him.

Muller appeared to have utmost confidence in his being able to clear up all suspicions in regard to himself. When asked to converse he talked freely, and often asserted his innocence of the crime said to be established against him. His theory regarding the hat and watch and chain found upon him when arrested was that the hat was his own; that he purchased the watch and afterwards pawned the chain, fearing if he kept it he would be arrested for the murder. He denies that the hat found in the car was his, and insists that he was seven miles away from where the murder was committed at the time the papers say that event occurred. These facts the prisoner says he can prove, and further insists that he didn't run away from England, but that he came here in pursuance of arrangements made at least a week before the murder, and that he gave notice then of his intention to vacate his rooms. This, he says, he can also prove. When reminded of the severity with which the English frequently treat criminal cases, he remarked that the English people, whatever their other faults and shortcomings, would believe evidence, and he was willing to trust himself in their hands.

His allegations about his proofs will soon be tested.

AN ELOPEMENT NIPPED IN THE BUD.—The Napanee Ledger is informed of an elopement which took place from the neighborhood af Centerville, on Wednesday night last, the particulars of which are as follows:—It appears that a "Yankee skedaddler," of about seventeen years of age, arrived in Kingston last fall and worked his way into the country in search of employment. He arrived at the house of a farmer in Camden East, who, at the time, was in need of help, and was immediately installed to the position of "chorer," or man of all work. The duties of his post, which consisted of cutting wood, building fires, carrying water, &c., brought him very often into the society of a daughter of the farmer, of the romantic age of sixteen. The young lady was principally occupied in the kitchen, and she soon became very intimate with the hero of our tale. This intimacy soon ripened into the stronger passion which rules "the court, the camp, the grove," and they vowed that they would one day become one flesh and one blood. But as evil fortune would have it, our American friend received a letter last week that his father was lying dangerously ill at home, and that if he ever wished to see him alive he must loose no time in returning. Finding that he must speedily bring matters to a point with our heroine, and believing that the suit would not be favoured by her father, he resolved to elope with her. He accordingly acquainted her with what he contemplated, and to which she joyfully assented. On Wednesday evening, about half past eight o'clock, they started on foot, with satchels in hand, for Napanee, intending to take the 11.40 train for Kingston. The young lady wore, by way of disguise, the suit of military blue belonging to her lover, who now was habited in a suit of Canada grey. Scarcely had they begun their journey when the parents of the fair one missed them, and suspicion at once flashed across the mind of the father that "they'd gone off together." He immediately harnessed a team and started in the direction of Napanee, and a neighbor was dispatched to Kingston. The happy couple, when they neared Newburg, and were no doubt congratulating themselves on their clever escape, were overtaken by the stern "parient," and were immediately recognized. He then forced his daughter into the waggon, and giving the Yankee a few smart cuts with his whip, sent him on his journey a wiser if not a better man.

ANTECEDENTS OF MULLER.—Unless Le Defricheur be mistaken in his identity, FRANZ MULLER, the alleged murderer, is well known in Canada. According to his journal, he once lived in Quebec and afterwards at Three Rivers, where he married a young Canadian girl of good position. About two months after the marriage, and when he had got hold of whatever property his wife possessed, he was obliged to go to Europe by way of the United States, two other wives whom he had previously married, and both of whom were living, having put in their prior claims. If this MULLER be identical with the alleged murderer of BRIGGS, his antecedents show him to be a through scoundrel. The name is the same; and besides the MULLER who was in Canada is known to have gone back to Europe. The date of his residence in this Province is not given; and we cannot, therefore, judge whether it squares with what is known of him in London; but it is certain that none of the English papers hint at the possibility of MULLER, the alleged murderer, having ever before been in America. There is nothing but the identity of name and character; But these coincidences are quiet sufficient to sharpen curiosity and to warrant enquiry into further proofs of identity.—Leader.

TO THE ELECTORS
OF THE COUNTY OF Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—

The death of our late Representative, my esteemed friend, W. H. Cowper, Esq., has left a vacancy in the representation of this County, which has to be filled by your choice.

I have received from a large number of the Electors a requisition calling upon me to come forward as a candidate for the membership.

After due consideration I have determined upon accepting the call of my friends, as expressed in the requisition, and lose no time in placing before you the views which I entertain upon the questions of the day.

I agree with Colonel Haultain that the movement towards nationality taken by the leaders of both the parties, whose political strife has so long and with such evil result distracted the Province, is a measure which deserves the support and assistance of every true lover of his country; consequently the question between us is, and must necessarily be, entirely personal in its nature; and what you by your votes will be called on to determine is, whether the one candidate or the other is more worthy, in your eyes of receiving a majority of your suffrages.

For myself, I may say that I am a native born Canadian—sprung from an origin which, in a true Canadian sense, is deserving of consideration and respect—that is the old Canadian United Empire Loyalists who, long, long years ago, showed their devotion to British and Monarchial government by their sufferings and their courage.

I may further say that I was bred in the principles of the old Baldwin Reformers, whose example I have followed; and none can deny but that the truths contained in their principles have had the greatest and most beneficial effect on the politics of the country.

Of late years I have taken my place among the Liberal Conservatives, whose doctrine and legislation I have considered best adapted to the state of the Province.

Having lived among you for the last five and twenty years, at one time largely interested in the growth and trade of the County, perfectly conversant with the wants and necessities of the large and growing country in our rear, I may safely claim an advantage, in this respect, over my opponent.

I fully recognize the immense importance of economy in the management of Governmental expenditure, and it elected as your representative shall withstand in my place in the Legislative Assembly any attempt by any government to spend money without the consent of Parliament being first obtained.

I consider the defences of the Province a subject of the greatest importance, and one which any person entrusted with your confidence cannot over-look provided that a due regard to economy in the organization of the proper force employed be observed.

After due consideration I have determined upon accepting the call of my friends

AN ENTERPRISING AGENT.

An enterprising traveling agent for a well known Cleveland tomb stone manufactory, recently made a visit to a small town in a neighboring county. Hearing in the village that a man in a remote part of the township had lost his wife, he thought he would go and see him, and offer his consolation and a grave stone, on his usual reasonable terms. He started the road was a horrible, frightful one, but the agent persevered and arrived at the bereaved man's house. The bereaved man's hired girl told the agent that the bereaved man was splitting fence rails over in the pasture, about two miles.—The indefatigable agent mounted his horse and started for the pasture. After falling into all manner of mud holes, scratching himself with briers, and tumbling over dozen rail logs, the agent found the bereaved man. In a subdued voice he asked the man if he had lost his wife. The man said he had. The agent was very sorry to hear it, and sympathized very deeply with the man in his great sorrow, but death, he said, was an inevitable archer, and shot down all, of both high and low degree. He informed the man that what "was his loss was her gain," and would be glad to sell him a grave stone to mark the spot where the loved one slept, marble or common stone, as he chose, at prices defying competition. The bereaved man said there was a slight difficulty in the way. "Haven't you lost your wife?" inquired the agent. "Why, yes, I have," said the man, "but no grave stone ain't necessary; for you see the cussed critter ain't dead; she acquired with another man!"

JOSH BILLINGS ON THE DRAFT.

Josh Billings is out with an "official" on the draft question. Says he:—

Widder winnins and their only son, is nimpt, provided the widder's husband has already served two years in the war, and is within to go in again; bleve the Supreme Corte has decided this thing forever.

Once more: If a man should run away with his draft, he probably wouldn't ever be allowed to stand the draft agin, this looks severe at first site, but the more you look at it the more you can see the wisdom into it.

Once mearly; Xmpts are those who have been drafted into the Stait prizzon for trying to get an honest livin by supporting 2 wives to once; also all of them people who are crase, and unsound on the goose; all snapper correspondants and fools in general.

Once mearly agin: No substitute will be accepted who is less than three or more than ten feet high; who knows how to chaw tobacker and drink poor whiskee and haven't be afeerd of the rich nor the rebels. Moral character ain't required, as the government furnishes that and rashuns.

Conclusively: A person cannot be drafted twice in two places without his consent; but all men has a right to be drafted at least once. I don't think even a writ of habeas corpus can deprive a man of this blessid privilege.

BALAAM'S PASSAGE.—As a dandy was wending his way through a narrow passage he met a pretty girl and said to her:

"Pray, my dear, what do you call this passage?" "Balaam's passage," she replied. "Ah! then," said he, "I am like Balaam—stopped by an angel." "And I," rejoined the girl as she brushed past him, "am like the angel stopped by an ass."

A bettered clad individual, who had succeeded in making good his escape from the rebel conscription, and reached our lines in Tennessee, being asked if the conscription was rigid, replied in this wise—"I should think it was! They take every man that hasn't been dead more than two days."

Anything Midas touched was turned into gold. In these days, touch a man with gold and he will turn into anything.

"My dear doctor," said an Irishman "it's no use giving me an emetic; I tried it twice in Dublin, and it would not stay on my stomach five minutes."

"I hold you in great esteem," said a hard fisted man, as he took a friend's hand in his own iron grasp. "My dear fellow," roared the other, "you're holding me in a vice."

A transparent Hibernian wanted a friend to discount a note. "If I advance this," said the lender, "will you pay your note punctually?" "I will, on my honor," replied the other, "the expense of the protest and all."

At a camp-meeting in this State, recently a zealous brother excused himself for 'hooking' and appropriating to his own necessities, some "good old rye" by saying: "My dear brethren, here, of all places the 'spirit' should be most freely "poured out."

We consider the old man's reply to his son as to the meaning of the word humbug, nearer correct than Webster's. "Humbug, my son, is when your mother says she loves me, and don't sew the buttons on my shirt."

H. CALCUTT'S Compound Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubler Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

ATTENTION is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

CERTIFICATES.

Newcastle, April 9th, 1860.

Messrs. Henry & Co.

Your Vermont Liniment has cured me of a Rheumatism which had settled in my limbs, and for which blessing I pray may well suppose I fell grateful.

T. Quesnel.

South Granby, C.W.

Mr. Henry E. Geer, Chemist, Montreal.

Sir,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, having accidentally got a needle run under her finger nail. The pain was most intense: but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone in a few minutes.

Yours very respectfully,

W. Gibson.

Montreal, Dec. 12th, 1860.

Messrs. Henry & Co.

Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I have frequently used it for bowel complaint, and I have never known it to fail in effecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarhœa summer complaint, and diseases of a similar character I have also found it a never failing specific for Colds, and for affections of the head. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

W. Baldwin.

(A Testimony from Hon. Judge Smith.)

Montreal, Feb. 5th, 1863.

I have used Henry's Vermont Liniment, and have found great relief from it.

Smith.

Much might be said of its remedial properties and magical effects, but the limited space of this Advertisement will only admit of a general summary

It is prepared with care: great pains being taken to adjust an exact proportion of each of the ingredients, in such a manner that the combination shall be, in every respect, at once more rapid in its operation, and more effectual than any other similar medicine.

N. H. DOWN'S VEGETABLE BALSAMIC ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE

WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt., Nov. 24th, 1858.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day: yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Down about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. Woodward, M.D.

Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS,
COLDS,
CATARRH,
ASTHMA,
CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases "to which flesh is heir," originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

ADULTS

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

☞ Sold at every Drug and country store throughout Canada,

THE SLEEPING CHILD.

A brook went dancing on its way,
From bank to valley leaping,
And by its sunny margin lay
A loving infant sleeping.
The murmur of the gurgling stream
Broke not the spell which bound him
Like music breathing in his dream
A lullaby around him.

It is a lovely sight to view
Within this world of sorrow
One spot which still retains the hue
That earth from heaven may borrow;
And such was this, a scene so fair,
Arrayed in summer brightness,
And one pure being feasted there—
One soul of radiant whiteness.

What happy dreams, fair child, are given
To cast their sunshine o'er thee?
What cord unites that soul to heaven
Where visions guile before thee?
For wandering dreams of cloudless mirth
Or thy glad features beaming,
Say not a thought—a form of earth—
Alloys thine hour of dreaming!

Mayhap, afar on unseen wing,
Thy silent spirit soaring,
Now hears the burst of golden strings,
Where angels are adoring.
And with the pure angelic throng
Around their Maker praising,
Thy joyous heart may join the song,
Ten thousand tongues are raising.

Literature.

[From Dickens' "All the Year Round."]

SOMEBODY'S ESCAPE.

In the old town of Limerick are many fine houses, built when it was thought that the town would stretch out by Lord Clair's instead of going as it did. There is a Rack Clare street, built of handsome private houses, which were afterwards let and sub-let cheap to lodgers—many of the lower class of trades-people. It was in one of these homes that a reduced gentlewoman—Miss Sally Carmody—lived, in or about the year 1761. There was a deal of French money sent over in those times, and some it was thought, appropriated it to their own purposes.
Frank Arther, even when he was building Arther's Quay, was accused of having got some. I am quite sure this was untrue; but the story was believed, because, you see, in those days it was thought such an impudent thing for a Catholic to build a whole quay! Three times, they say, he was on the point to be hanged; but the this might be, Frank Arther being considered mighty "uppish" (that was the word) for a Catholic, was suspected; and not himself alone, but all who were known to be connected with him. Arther's wife was better born than herself, and poor Miss Sally Carmody was a cousin of hers, and well known as such. So she, good old lady, was under suspicion also.
Miss Sally being, as I said, reduced, was obliged to take in needlework to support herself. She was very skillful at her needle, and numerous of fine ladies used to mount the stairs of her lodgings to entrust her with work they were particular about. One would think there could be no thing very dangerous in this poor gentlewoman. Still, being related to Arther's wife, she was watched, and she knew it. Above all, she lived in constant dread of a fellow-lodger who occupied the rooms on the ground floor, immediately below her. This woman, who followed the calling of clear-starcher, was an acrid, close, uncommunicative little body—very industrious, but very odd in her ways. She was what the neighbors call a "bitter Protestant;" consequently she was employed by all the Protestant ladies of Limerick, and was, moreover, a weekly pensioner of some religious society. By Miss Sally the little Protestant clear-starcher was looked upon as a spy, and dreaded and avoided accordingly.
One day a handsome carriage stopped at the door, and a fine lady of modish appearance, having enquired for Miss Sally, alighted and ascended the stairs to her room. She had some very fine work with her, and concerning this she had a hundred instructions to give. Miss Sally remembered afterward, that while she was talking about the work, the lady's eyes kept glancing here and there rather curiously. But as this was by no means unusual in her lady visitors, it caused her no uneasiness at the time. The customer at last departed, and Miss Sally resumed her occupation, suspended during the rather tedious directions to which she had had to hearken.
The visitor's sharp eyes, however, had not gone a-spying in vain. Inside the front room there was, as I have often seen in these old houses, a little room or alcove without any window, only lighted by means of a glass door connecting it with the apartment without. It came out subsequently that the fine lady spy had seen the shadow of a man inside. In less than half an hour the whole street was filled up with soldiers, and up to Miss Sally's room they came to secure their prisoner. They knew he could not had time to escape—they also knew that from the closet there was no other outlet; so when they were in the room without they were sure he was trapped.
Into the closet, then, they thronged, Duff himself at their head. But the closet was apparently empty. It was without furniture, save a mattress, a chair, and while on which were the remains of a meal. In one corner was a little heap of fresh but not large enough to conceal a man. For a moment the soldiers were struck—next moment they were round it.
There was a brisk set up for—glass rooms, and round it every bit gathered that these there was two called heart-and people used to build a sort of oven bricks round a fire place; that the inside might see, when he came, that they had no use of it.
Ay, and may be when he'd turn the bricks would be taken down and time came for the next visit. How he got out of the house, and how he got back would have it, Miss Sally had really no use for this fire-place; I suppose it was as much as she could do, poor lady to keep up the fire in the front room. And it so happened that the bricks were all well and firmly built. And even plastered over, and that they reached to within a couple of feet of the ceiling. There was just room for a man inside, and down there, as the soldiers guessed, the poor fugitive had dropped. He had only a few moments' notice of their coming, and, catching up a hatchet that was in the corner with the firewood, he had just had time to shelter up undignified his temporary place of refuge where they broke in.
With a throbbing heart he listened to their threats, their cries of anger, their oaths. He heard them asking if it would not be best to shoot down upon him, and kill him in his lair. But Gen. Duff bawled out: "no, no, not for a hundred thousand pounds. He must be taken alive. He cannot escape us; pull down the brick work and he is ours." They then set to, and worked heartily; and what with the knocking and hammering, and cursing and shouting, there was such an uproar as was never heard in poor Miss Sally Carmody's lodgings. The bricks being solidly built and plastered, it was not so easy as they had anticipated to tear them away.
And when at last they did effect their purpose, their supposed prisoner had again baulked them—how was plainly to be seen. While they were uprooting the bricks that screened him from them, he, seeing, or rather feeling that there was no bottomless cadar his feet, had conceived the hope that by cutting away the floor he might drop down into the room below, and so have another chance of getting off. With the hatchet he had caught up, he fell to work, the noise he made completely drowned by the uproar without, and some minutes before their object was effected he landed in the room below.
Instantly the alarm was given by the soldier nearest the heart's place. Some of their number remained above, while the rest hurried down to get into the room below. But here was another delay, for the woman who occupied it—a good Protestant, as several of them knew, and therefore not to be suspected of voluntarily harboring a French spy (for such they declared the fugitive to be)—was absent, and the door was locked. Some, who had hurried round the back of the house, found the window of this room fast bolted on the inside, and there was no other outlet from it. With a shout they announced their certainty that the Frenchman was still in the house, caught in his own trap! So they called for a crowbar to break open the door and seize him at last. Somehow, some of these men, [illegible] ... 'Andy knew he must be saved—they had abundant proof of his energy and desperation; and the bravest man that ever stepped might well be pardoned for not adopting a means of descent sure to be fatal to himself.
But, just as the crowbar was about to be put into requisition, there was a cry of "Stop! stop!" from a female voice in the crowd, and presently a little woman, greatly flurried and excited, came elbowing her way toward them. "Oh General, honey!" she cried, "sure ye won't break open my little room! I have the key somewhere—only wait one minnit!" And the little clear-starcher fumbled desperately in her pockets and in the bosom of her dress, vowing the while, as well as she could speak, that "it was the Lord sent her back from the arranged in time to prevent her little fra being smashed!" Still the poor creature was so frightened and so confused, that it was not until the General, losing all patience, had again called for the crowbar, that the key at length made its appearance, in answer to a despairing dive into the folds of a capacious side-pocket.
It was snatched from her, the door was flung open, and the men poured in. In a moment every sock and crassy was ransacked, in vain. There was no trace of the fugitive, and they were completely at fault. A window shut and bolted on the inside, precluded any idea of escape in that direction; the fire obscurely burning in the large grates as effectually proved that he could not have ascended the chimney; he was nowhere in the room, yet there was plain to all beholders the aperture in the ceiling by which he had got down. And louder than the curse of the angry soldiers were those of the little clear-starcher, whose apartment had been so unceremoniously disfigured. The would be captors were baffled; they swore that they were baffled by the devil himself.
But the Evil one had no need, even were he so inclined, to interfere in the matter. The little Protestant clear-starcher had contrived very cleverly to outwit the soldiery. That she was odd in her ways was certain; for while every man, woman or child, except herself, was in connection on the arrival of the military, she remained at her wash-tub, rubbing away, and listening to the uproar and blows otherhand, as if nothing at all unusual were the matter. Then she was when the ceiling gave way, and the poor hunted Frenchman, pale and covered with dust, stood before her. She never cried out, or even spoke; she looked at him for a second, then pointed to the open window; he sprang out and hastened off in the direction she indicated. The little woman dusted the window-sill where he had left the prints of his feet, shut the window, baked it on the inside, threw some fuel on the fire, slipped out, locking the door behind her, and mingled unobserved with the people in the street.
Whoever the Frenchman was, he was saved. When he jumped out through the window he made off across a garden, on through other gardens, on into a field where some other men were digging potatoes. These seeing him running, and his dress all torn, guessed how it was, and one of them gave him his jacket, another his breeches, another his cutaway, and then rubbed they over his hands and face, and otherwise altered his disguise. They put a spade into his hand, and set him to dig with them. By-and-by the soldiers came to make inquiries, and were sent off on a wild-goose chase after a gentleman without a hat, where they said they had seen running in an opposite direction. The soldiers never found him, and the fugitive got safe host to France. To this not rightly known who he was; some said one thing and some another; but from what General Duff cried out when the soldiers wanted to fire down on him, it was believed he would be somebody of great consequence. The poor people said it was the King of France.

SUNDAY IN NEW YORK.

It is worth a visit to New-York to see the lower part of the city on a Sabbath morning, and contrast it with the bustle and confusion of all the week. The South Ferry, that great spectacle for gentlemen and cars, where one's life is in danger in crossing the street, is as quiet as a cathedral. Broadway is nicely swept on Saturday night, and is silent as the wilderness. Old Trinity in the lower part of the city, and the aristocratic Grace in the upper, both in sight, seem to stand as sentinels over the holy time. The revellers, the devotees of pleasure, sleep late on Sunday morning, and the portions of the city, occupied by them are silent as the tomb. Passing up the west side of the city by the docks and steamboat wharves, one is impressed with the sanitary blessings of the Sabbath, and the hold it has indirectly on all classes. The laboring men, loitering about or smoking their pipes, have on clean shirts and are shaved. Little children, from the lowest dens and darkest alleys in the city, come out to the sidewalk with an attempt at cleanliness, and some little ribbon or ornament on their persons. The newsboys offer their papers in subdued tones, and bootblacks ask in a quiet voice, "black your boots?" and exhibit their own boots polished out of respect for the day. All along the docks the utmost quiet prevails, while the piers and wharves are swept clean and the silence of a pestilence pervades these marts of trades. The sailors do their work in a holiday rig, and every craft has its bunting flying. All along the wharves are stationed Bethel steamers for all nations and floating chapels where divine service is held. These are mostly attended by "Old countrymen" as they term themselves—the natives of Holland or the Lutherans. The dram shops make a compromise with the day by sealing their doors, putting their employees in clean linen, and shutting up one-half of the shutter.
The servants and the dinner of the morning being over, the lovers of pleasure appear in their strength. The quiet of the morning gives place to revelry. Funerals that require a military procession and a band of music are kept for Sunday afternoons. [illegible] ... try, drive here in style. It is the harvest of livery men. Everything that can go on four legs is engaged in advance. From ten dollars to fifty dollars is the price of a team for an afternoon's drive. Those who do not own teams and cannot afford to hire them, take the public conveyances. The same cars and boats that bear the worshippers to their churches in the morning, carry the sons of pleasure to their scenes of recreation. Theatres of the lower order, concert saloons, lager-beer gardens and enclosures, are all crowded. As the day wanes the police are doubled, and some parts of New York are more dangerous to visit on Sunday night than on any other night of the week. At twelve at night all is again still. With the early hours of Monday, Mammon again awakens, like a giant refreshed with wine, seizes the reins, and drives with unslackened speed till the advent of the succeeding Sabbath compels him again to a temporary repose.

Terrible Catastrophe in Austrian Poland.

(From the London Star.)

As is usual each year, the indulgences attached to the solemnity of the Assumption of the Virgin recently attracted numbers of pilgrims towards the nunnery of Kalwarya Zebrzydowska, situate five miles from Cracow. A large portion of the pilgrims, instead of returning by way of Cracow, took the most direct route across the Vistula at Chernichow; but as the river was much swollen by recent rains, the passage was not made in the ordinary ferry boat, but in a large grain barge, into which 300 country people of both sexes entered, accompanied by a Jew who had hired the vessel, and who was well provided with brandy, which he expected to retail as the vessel crossed. The boatmen, who were much the worse for their potations, could not manage the vessel against the powerful current, and, instead of making the ordinary landing place, they ran against a vessel anchored on the right bank, and with such violence that the barge was broken up and a great number of the passengers sank with her, while others were carried away by the stream. Assistance was promptly rendered by the vessel, which was at anchor, and numbers of struggling people were saved, but 150 were drowned. They were all natives of villages in the environs of Cracow.

A SCOTCH LORD.—Chief Thoburn relates the following anecdote of the Rev. Dr. Webster, a celebrated preacher of the Church of Scotland. It occurred about the year 1774. Beacon took him to London, and one day when passing the House of Lords, his curiosity induced him to go and see them. None were admitted without an order except noblemen's servants. The Dr. being ignorant of this rule requested admittance. "What Lord do you belong to?" asked the door keeper. "To the Lord Jehovah," replied Dr. Webster. "The Lord Jehovah!" exclaimed the doorkeeper. "I have been forty years here, but I never heard of such a lord. "Look," said he to his fellow-keeper on the front steps, "here's a fellow to the door by belongs to the Lord Jehovah. Do you know such a lord?" "Never heard of him," said Jock. "But," said Webster, willing to keep up the humour, "there is such a lord." "Oswell, pass him in," called out Jock; "I suppose it's some puir Scotch lord!"

The First Steamboat in Quebec.

The Quebec (Scotsman) Advertiser has for some time back been publishing every week, extracts, from old copies of the same paper. In its issue of July 13th, it found the following paragraph, interesting to Canadians, quoted from the Advertiser of December 22nd, 1809:—On Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, arrived from Montreal, being her first trip, the steamboat "Accommodation," with her passengers. This is the first vessel of the kind that appeared in our harbor. [illegible] ... Quebec by visitants. She left Montreal on Wednesday at 2 o'clock, so that her passage was [illegible] ... thirty of which she was at anchor. She arrived in Three Rivers in twenty-four hours. She has at present berths for 20 passengers; which next year will be considerably augmented. No wind or tide can stop her. She has 75 feet keel, and 85 on deck.—The price for a passage up is nine dollars, and down supplying provisions. The great advantage attending a vessel so constructed is, that a passage may be calculated to a degree of certainty, in point of time, which cannot be the case with any vessel propelled by sails only.—The steamboat receives her impetus from an open double-cycled perpendicular wheel, on each side, without any circular head or rim. To the end of each double spoke is fixed a square board which enters the water, and by the rotary motion of the wheel, acts like a paddle. The wheels are put and kept in motion, by steam operating within the vessel. A mast is to be fixed in her for the purpose of using a sail, when the wind is favorable, which will occasionally accelerate her headway.

A TERRIBLE SCENE.

A man named McComb was under sentence of death in Ottumwa County, Iowa, for the murder of a girl named Laura Harvey, and the day of execution fixed. The condemned, however, got an appeal to the Supreme Court, but on the day he was to have been hanged, some two thousand people gathered at the jail and avowed a determination to hang the prisoner. A woman mounted the fence and made an exciting harangue urging on the mob—and saying if they would leave it to the women they would attend to it themselves. A vote was taken, which was decided to be in favor of the hanging. A rush was now made for the jail, which was forced and the prisoner brought out. He asked for an hour which was given him, to prepare for death. A clergyman was sought, and he was finally taken into the Catholic Church and baptized. After this he was placed in a waggon and started for execution. The rope was on the limb of a tree, the prisoner himself assisting. Before this was done, McComb requested permission to make a few remarks. He said, "I have the rope around my neck, as you see, and have but a few minutes to live—but I am an innocent man.—If you will give me until next court, I will prove that George Lawrence is living, and that I did not murder Laura Harvey." At this point a cry was raised all through the crowd, "take him back," accompanied by the cry of "hang him," "hang him." The leaders fearing that the tide was turning, said that it was getting late, and they could wait no longer. An attempt was made to throw the rope over the limb but several resolute men jumped into the waggon and seized the rope. A short struggle for the possession of the rope followed, when it was cut, McComb was hustled out of that waggon into another, and driven rapidly to town, and lodged safely in his old quarters.

A DESERTER'S LETTER.

The following letter from a British soldier in camp near Petersburg, who deserted from Kingston, may be read marked and inwardly digested, at the present moment, not only by soldiers, but by every one who have any notion of trying their luck on the banks of the Potomac:—

Camp near Petersburg,
Aug. 2, 1864.

DEAR FRIEND,—I write the few lines hoping it will find you quite well. I am sorry that I was such a fool as to be persuaded to come over here, where you are driven about worse than niggers. Please to tell my comrades not to be guided by them crimps, for they tell you'll get $300, but it is no such thing; all you get is $100, and that they will rob you of if you don't look out. I will tell you who brought me over; it is a man who keeps the "Dublin Inn," in Ontario street, and the other who lives at the "Railroad Inn," next to our hospital. If you [illegible] ... you will find many of my clothes there. Them was ought to be severely punished, it is nothing better than stealing with a lot of cattle. There-are some mates that are trying to get away, and they say they will get them away in spite of you. Please tell them if they know what they are well off they will stop where they are, unless they want to be treated worse than slaves. Please to put this in the papers, so as no other soldier will be duped. Please tell them not to believe their lies, for it is all false—what they want is to sell them as slaves. They ought to be found out and punished, and if you go to the Dublin Inn and to the Railroad Inn you will find out. I should freely do four years to be back again. Please let my comrades see this.

A DEMOCRATIC HIT AT OLD ABE.—Shortly after the announcement of the unanimous of Gen. McClellan by the Democratic Convention at Chicago, was made at Kalamazoo, a vote was taken among the students of the Union Asylum, which resulted as follows:—Abe Lincoln, 83; Joe Hooker, 10; Brig. Douglas, 5; Dan Rice 3; Joe Brown, 2.
Much ability do gained if speakers would observe the editor's method—always to shut the gate when the quiet is out.
What was the most plentiful fruit in the ark?—Pineapple pears (pairs).

Marriage of the Rotunda Belle Boyd.

(From the Liverpool Post, Aug. 26.)

Yesterday morning a most interesting ceremony of marriage took place at the Church of St. Jerome Prescilly. The bridegroom, Lieut. Samuel Wylie Hardinge, who is about 30 years of age, was an officer in the United States Navy, holding the rank of Lieutenant on board the American war vessel Connestoga. The lady, who is about the same age as the gallant bridegroom, was the daughter of General Boyd, of the Army of the Southern States, who lately figured in prince, having been made prisoner by the Federals. The lady's father is full of the most eventful, heroic and romantic features. Her father (Gen. Boyd, who possessed vast estates in the territory of Virginia, early embraced the cause of Southern independence, and was soon entrusted with a command, obtaining the rank of General. His daughter, the bride, enthusiastically embraced the same cause, followed her father to the field, and accompanied him throughout his campaign with the celebrated Stonewall Jackson, and on two occasions successfully, as the modern Joan of Arc, led on the troops to battle; she was, however, in a skirmish, captured and made prisoner, and conveyed to Washington, where she was imprisoned. Here she remained 18 months, when she was exchanged for Gen. Cochrane, who had been made prisoner by the Confederates. On her return to the South, she went on board the Greyhound, Confederate steamer, which was captured by the Federal [illegible] Connecticut, while running the blockade. Lieut. Hardinge was sent on board the Greyhound as prize master, with his young bride as a prisoner. The result was that they mutually became enamored, and escaped together from the ship, and found their way to this country, the bride having succeeded in withdrawing her letter from his allegiance to the United States flag, and enlisted his sympathies and support for the South. It is the intention of Lieut. Hardinge with his bride to leave this country at the latter end of September to run the blockade and on or the service of the Southern States. The marriage cortege was comparatively private, being confined to the bridesmaid and two or three lady friends, and the bridegroom being attended by a number of American gentlemen connected with the South. After the conclusion of the ceremony, the parties repaired to the Alexandra Hotel, Jermyn-street, where the bridegroom has resided since his sojourn in this country, and partook of an elegant dejeuner.

SOMETHING LIKE A SNAKE!—The Trenton people are just now considerably agitated about a great serpent that has been [illegible] ... the fears of a number of the inhabitants of the village. There have been a good many reports about the existence of such a serpent for some time past, but as they could not be definitely traced, very little credence was attached to them. However, the matter has been settled beyond any question, for the "sea monster" has been seen by a resident of the village, a Mr. Julius Baker, who is said to be perfectly reliable. Not many days ago, while he and his wife were in a boat near Indian Island, they were suddenly startled by a great splashing in the water, and looking around discovered within about ten rods of the boat, the head and neck of a great serpent, about two feet out of the water. Mr. Baker describes the head to be in appearance like a bull dog, and says the neck was about "three feet through." Both were very much frightened, and immediately pulled for shore. Before reaching land the snake was seen three times, once only six yards from the boat, and again after they had landed, only a few feet off. Mr. Baker said it followed him to the shore, and made at times a fearful noise. We may remark that the story is believed by some of the most respectable inhabitants to be strictly true, they having the utmost confidence in the statements of Mr. and Mrs. Baker.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THE START IN LIFE OF A MILLIONAIRE.—Mr. Toby, the new President of the Hudson River Railroad, is a millionaire. He is not yet forty years of age. He began life as a steamboat clerk with Commodore Vanderbilt. When he took his position the Commodore gave two orders: first, to collect the fare of everybody, and have no dead-heads on the boat; second, to start the boat on time, and wait for nobody. The Commodore then lived on Staten Island Toby obeyed orders as literally that he collected fare of the commodore himself on the first crossing and left him on the wharf the next morning, so the boat could not wait. The Commodore was coming down the wharf leisurely, and supposed of course the boat would wait for him. He proved a man after Vanderbilt's own heart. He became his confidential agent and broker, bought and sold Harlem, and made for himself a fortune. A year ago Mr. Johnson had some words with Jerome, the brother. Jerome said to him, "I'll be your master shortly." He kept his threat, and when Mr. Stone lost his position as President of the Hudson River Railroad, Vanderbilt said, "Toby has got money, give him position;" and so he was made President of the road.

A NOVEL and curious instrument has been invented by M. Bryan. It is for the purpose of taking short-hand notes with more than usual rapidity. It consists of a series of levers worke with keys like a piano, and acting on a set of types which impress themselves on a strip of paper that is gradually unrolled. Working only with one finger an ordinary reporter can work as quickly as the best short-hand reporter, but by using two hands the rapidity of the operation is immensely increased.

JOHN MAGUIRE, the Irish exile, and late editor of the Richmond Examiner, is now serving as a conscript private in an artillerist corps of the rebel army, after having given the life of one of his sons, and his own talents and influence, to the rebellion.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE TRENT DIVISION

GENTLEMEN:

An Election will take place in September or October next, when you will be called upon to choose a Member to represent the Trent Division.

Having been elected by your confidence in 1863 to fill up the unexpired time occasioned by the decease of the late Hon. R. Mackay, and the resignation of the Hon. Sidney Smith, I have during the past year devoted as much of my time as it was possible for me to do in attending the two Sessions of Parliament, and also in attending to the requests of such of the constituents as have seen fit to honor me with their land and other matters, not immediately connected with Parliamentary duties.

We are about beginning a new era in the history of the politics of our country. The present move in the formation of a Ministry who pledge themselves to bury the feuds of the past, and to unite together for the general good of the country, by carrying such measures before the session of Parliament as will tend to a final settlement of the sectional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada, demands our serious consideration.

I may be permitted to state that I shall accede to them a fair trial, and whether in or out of Parliament, I consider by every means in my power the consummation of so desirable an object; trusting that Upper Canada may receive that which she is justly entitled to, and that both Provinces will be greatly benefited by the change.

I have considered from the numerous personal requests, as also by letters from many parts of the Division, to again place myself at the disposal of the Electors, and if again honored with your confidence, to discharge the trust committed to me in as satisfactory a manner as possible.

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,

Yours &c. &c.

BILLA FLINT.

CURE FOR JEALOUSY.—The murderer, in the affair at Brune, who was found out by the aid of a clairvoyant, according to some accounts, indicted a young and married man who was on a visit to this city, to call on one of these seers and ascertain what occupation his wife was engaged in at her residence some ninety miles away.

"She is sitting in the parlor," said the lady, "and every once in a while she looks out of the window as if expecting some one."

"Strange," said the gentleman, "whom can she expect?"

"Some one entering the door, she seizes him and caresses him fondly."

"It can't be; it's all a hoax; my wife is true to me," interrupted the gentleman, who was settled and warmed by the green-eyed monster.

"Now he lays his head into her lap and looks tenderly into her eyes."

"I swear that is false! and I'll make you pay dear for this slander!"

"Now he wags his tail," continued the sleeper; and as this explained the story, he unsheathed, and resolved never again to be inquisitive in regard to his wife's doings.

A SHARP LOCAL.—The local of the Cincinnati Herald has evidently been hard up. Here is his last effort;—"As a gentleman was passing along 5th street he passed a place where some boys were playing marbles. One of them in shooting he arbles cleverly, put it under the gentleman's oot. The gentleman slipped and stumbled against a lady also passing, precipitating her along with himself upon a large hog, who was examining the gutter, geologically, for debris. The hog frightened out of his propriety, bolted off and ran between the legs of another gentleman who, in falling drew the string of a kite from the hands of a boy. The kite of course fell, and in falling frightened a pair of horses attached to a waggon in an alley. A man who was building a fire in a carpenter shop, by which they passed started up to see what was the matter, and in so doing, dropped his lighted match among the shavings. A fire was the consequence. The engines assembled, and in the hurry consequent upon the alarm a man fell in the track of one of them and had his arm broke, which ended the budget of accidents for the day."

A FLEXIBLE PLATFORM.—The following platform, we (the Croydon Democrat) have arranged to suit all parties. The first column is the Secession platform; the second is the Abolition platform; and the whole read together is the Democratic platform. The platform is like the Union—as a whole, it is Democratic; but divided one half is Secession, and the other Abolition:—

Hurrah for Secession	The Old Union
We fight for	Is a curse
The Confederacy	The Constitution
We love	Is a league with hell
The rebellion	Free Speech
We glory in	Is treason
Separation	A free press
We fight not for	Will not be tolerated
Reconstruction	The negro's freedom
We must succeed	Must be obtained
The Union	At every hazard
We love not	We love
We never said	The negro
We want	Let the Union slide
Foreign intervention	The Union as it was
We cherish	Is played out
The stars and bars	The old flag
We venerate	Is a flaunting lie
Southern chivalry	The habeas corpus
Death to	Is hateful
Abe Lincoln	Jeff Davis
Down with	Isn't the government
Law and order	Mob law
	Shall triumph.

Mr. Jenking was dining at a very hospitable table but a piece of bacon near him was so very small that the lady of the house remarked to him:—"Pray, Mr. Jenking, help yourself to the bacon! Don't be afraid of it."—"No indeed, madam—I've seen a piece twice as large, and it did not scare me a bit."

A NOBLEMAN once asked a clergyman, who was dining at the bottom of the table, why the goose was always placed next to the parson?—"Really," said he, "I can give no reason for it; but your question is so odd that I shall never see a goose again without thinking of your lordship."

A SOLDIER in one of the late battles was sitting very coolly behind one of his guns, where the shot was falling very fast; being asked by the chaplain whether he was supported by Divine Providence, replied, "No, sir, I am supported by the Ninth New Jersey."

PROPRIETIES.—An exchange asks, very innocently, if it is any harm for young ladies to sit in the laps of ages. It depends on the ages selected. Those from eighteen to twenty-five are considered extra hazardous.

"THE man who raised a cabbage head has done more good than all the metaphysics in the world." "Then," replied a wag, "your mother ought to have the premium."

Jollyboy describes metaphysics as follows: "Two men are talking together, and one of them is trying to explain something he don't know anything about, and the other can't understand him."

"I'll take the responsibility," as Jenkins said: when he held out his arms for the baby.

An old bachelor says that marriage was instituted for no express purpose than to prevent men from sleeping diagonally in the bed.

An infatuated old bachelor, being asked if he ever witnessed a public execution, replied—"No, but I once saw a marriage."

What tables are most used throughout the world?—Yeap-tables, en-tables, and com-tables.

WHY are good husbands like dough?—Because women need them.

A QUAKER advice—"Don't scold a woman lest she scold better than thee."

Every six or nine Months.

The water can be pressed from large and small articles easier, quicker and more thoroughly than by the ordinary old fashioned back-breaking, wrist-straining and clothes-destroying process.

It is easily and firmly secured to the Tub or Washing Machine and will fit Tubs of any shape or size. Every Wringer is Warranted in every particular, either with or without star gearing; and in the event of any part becoming broken or mislaid, we can replace it at once. We sell them at prices that defy competition, as the following will testify:

H. CALCUTT'S
Compound
Liquid Cooler & Heater!
PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

THE undersigned, while thanking the public in general for the liberal patronage they have bestowed on him, since his commencement in business, begs to state that he continues to manufacture his celebrated

PATENT WATER-DRAWER!

AT BLYTHE MILLS.

You must remember that by buying one of my Water-drawers, you get your water pure, which you cannot do by a suction Pump. I warrant them NOT TO FREEZE, and to stand as long, if not longer, than any Pump; and, besides, you save over fifty per cent. I can sell them cheaper than any Pump-maker in Canada! If anything goes astray by fair play within one year from the time of purchase, I bind myself to re-place it; so you cannot be deceived. Now, any one who is in need of a Pump would do well to get one of my Water-drawers at once. I have two teams out at all times to deliver them, and persons residing at a distance will receive prompt attention by sending a letter to the undersigned

Dear Sirs,—I have used your Liniment, and find it to be the best I have ever used for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Toothache, and the like, and for which complaint you may well recommend it. I feel grateful.

Sir,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, having accidentally got a needle run under her finger nail. The pain was most intense; but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone in a few minutes.
Yours very respectfully,

Messrs. Henry & Co.
Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I have frequently used it for Bowel Complaint, and I have never known it to fail in effecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarhœa summer complaint, and disorders of a similar character I have also found it a never failing specific for Colds, and for affections of the head. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

N. H. DOWN'S
VEGETABLE BALSAMIC
ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE
WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ!

Waterbury, Vt.,
Nov. 24th, 1858.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.
Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When other remedies have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS, COLDS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases "to which flesh is heir," originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

ANSLEY.

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

Holloway's Ointment.

THESE famous remedies are the longest established and most widely known of any medicines in the world. It is unfortunate that so important a fact that unscrupulous makers impose upon the credulity of the people with worthless imitations of the Pills and Ointment, under various names, sounding and looking like the genuine. The Pills are fully equal to its malignancies and cure, and that, with the Ointment, they are

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history written by some man, or even derived from the experiences of one nation. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the sick of every country—an unprecedented record, the like of which has rarely been obtained in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World-Known and World-Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a sterling medicine to meet the ills and necessities of the suffering portion of humanity, and one entirely free from mineral and other deleterious principles, was severely felt till this all powerful remedy was introduced. Its searching and purifying properties are unequalled. They have become the acknowledged standard of the nations. Their attributes to counteract as well as to cure; they attack the cause at once of the complaint, and thus, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the disturbed energies of the system, destroying nature in her last task of VITAL and PERPETUAL REVOLUTIONS.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the relaxed or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs upon the mucous membrane, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

Is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this harmless but effective preparation. At the two epochs of life in which the female system undergoes the most important and critical changes, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements are at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatsoeverform disease attacks the liver, it is repelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistible curative. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organ, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a celerity which astonishes the sufferer and their friends. Many who have tried the faculty have abandoned resort with confidence to this powerful anti-bilious agent, and a restoration to health and activity will be the unvarying result.

Nuts for Crack for Cousin Sam.

Has ye come to your season yet Sammy my man,
For ye jist war rid wud when the war it began;
Has the thraid ye has lost, and the physic ye've taen,
No cou'd down yer fever an' sober't yer brain?

What is't ye has won? Is it conquest an' fame?
Is't honour and glory—a conqueror's name?
Is't the South we're its cottons, its planters an' slaves?
It's nane o' them a,' be a million o' graves.

What is't ye has lost? It's the big dollar bag,
An' ye've nocht in your pouches but dirty green rags;
O' the wale o' yer men nocht is left but their banes,
An' the kintra is fu' o' their widows an' weans.

An' thy've gaggit your press, an, they've stecket your mou,
An' they've set the red mark o' auld Cain on yer brow;
An' the bairns o' yer bairns that are yet to be born
Will be harry't in taxes, and put tae the horn.

I've speer't you some questions, I'll speer't ye anither,
What ails ye my man, Sammy, at Britain, yer mither;
Mark weel what she says when yer cursin' an' craikin':
"I'll jest hae to gie that wild laddie a paik in."

The hale warl's glowrin' an' wonnerin' what text
Your bluid-drinkin' parsons will open on next;
Tae Beecher an' Brownlow I'll jist say the word,
Christ said to bald Peter, 'twas "put up the sword."

Aye "put up the sword" an' hae done wi yer game,
Ye hae lost a' the stakes that ye played for, gae hame;
Look after yer farm, let yer neebors alane,
Ye hae wark on your han' or I'm muckle mistaen.

SOMETHING ADVANTAGEOUS; OR A FAMILY FRACAS.

I once attended a poor old man of the name of Jordan in his last illness. I call him poor, but yet he was not in want, and had about him the comforts of life. When he was near his end, he said to me—

'Doctor, I want to know the truth from you. I am not in the habit of being flattered by the world. There was a time, indeed, when it fooled me to the top of my bent; but that was long ago. Do not flatter me, but tell me your real opinion. Shall I soon die, or shall I yet run on a brief career in a world I am quite willing to be done with?'

'You desire me,' replied I, 'to be candid with you, and I will. You are on your death-bed.'

'How soon shall I be immortal?'

'That I cannot say. But your hours, so far as human experience can teach me to predict, are numbered.'

He was silent for a few moments, and a slight spasm passed across his face.

'Well,' he said, 'it is the lot of all. I have lived long enough.'

'Is there no friend or relation, Mr. Jordan,' said I, 'to whom you would wish to send? You are here, as you have often told me, quite alone in lodgings. Perhaps you would like to revive some old recollections before you leave the world.'

'Not one,' he said.

'Are you so completely isolated?'

'Most completely. I have tried all relations, and found them wanting. But still I have remembered them, and made my will. It is now between the mattresses and the sacking of this bed, and Mr. Shaw, the only honest attorney I ever met with, and whose esteem in Lincoln's Inn Fields will carry my intentions into effect. I was rich once in early life. How dark a day.'

'What day?'

'To-day. How dark and misty it has come over, doctor.'

His sight was going fast, and I felt certain that I would require but little patience and a small exercise of time to see the last of Mr. Jordan.

'Yes,' he continued, speaking in an odd, spasmodic fashion. 'Yes, I was rich, and had many a crawling sycophant about me, many sauling faces at my board; but there came a reverse, and like fair flowers at a sudden frost, my kind friends hid their heads. I was nearly destitute, and thinking and believing that the tie of blood would be strong enough to bind to me or my distresses those with whom I claim kindred, and who had been delighted to claim kindred with me, I went to them a visitor.'

'And failed.'

'And failed as you say. They dropped from me one by one. Some remembered slight offences, some were never at home, some really thought I must have been dreadfully unprincipled, and until they were convinced I had not, could not assist me. Doors were shut in my face—window blinds pulled down as I passed. I was shunned as a pestilence—my clothes were in rags—my step feeble from long want of common necessaries, and then an old school companion died in the West Indies, and left me £20,000, which I received through the hands of Mr. Shaw.

'A large fortune? And your relations?'

'Heard of it and were frantic. I disappeared from them all. From that day to this, they have not heard of me. Do love wild flowers?'

'Wild flowers?'

'Yes. Have are heaps just from the morning garden. Look, too, how you church twines them in her hair. The stream flows deep to eternity.'

'Mr. Jordan, sir,' I cried. 'Mr. Jordan do you know me?'

'Come father, laughing, gentle spirit,' he said. 'Being with you your harp of fairy gems. Yes, I know thee in the regent sister. Mary, my Mary; God knows, that I loved you.'

It was a strange thing at the moment, but the head of the widow, which I had drawn up to the top, came suddenly rattling down, and the room was quite dark. I raised it again,—and then turned to the bed,—Mr. Goodson was a corpse! What a remarkable change had in those few moments came over the old man's face. The sharp lines of age had all disappeared, and there was a calm, benign expression upon the still features, such as in life I never saw them wear.

'A restless spirit is at peace,' I said, as I felt for the will where he told me it was placed, and found it. It was merely tied up with a piece of red tape, and addressed to Mr. Shaw, 60, Lincoln's Inn Fields. 'I resolved to trust no other messenger, but to take it to him myself. I told the landlady of the house that she would no doubt hear immediately from his solicitor, and then I left.

'Well, Mr. Shaw,' I said, after I had mentioned to him the manner of Mr. Jordan's death. 'Here is the will, sir, and I presume that I have nothing further to do than to thank you for your courtesy, and bid you good evening.'

'Stay a moment,' he said. 'Let me look at the document. 'Humph! a strange will he leaves the form of an advertisement here, which is to be inserted in the morning papers, calling his relations together, to hear the will read.'

'Indeed!'

'Yes.' 'Well, I shall, as I see I am named trustee, do as he wishes. He states that he is very poor.'

'Why, he spoke to me of £20,000.'

'Did he really? A delusion sir, quite a delusion. £20,000! He had that amount twenty-five years ago. But, sir as you have attended him, and as I happen to know he had a high opinion of you I should like you to act in the future proceedings connected with his will.'

'In which there is a mystery, eh! Mr. Shaw?'

'A little—perhaps a little bit of post mortem carnage, that is all, which I am not now at liberty to descant upon. But I will take care to coincide with you, and I shall hope that you will follow as old friend to the grave.'

I promised that much, and duly attended the funeral. It was a quiet, walking affair, and from the manner of it I felt quite convinced that there were no funds to make it otherwise. A mound of earth alone marked the spot in the little church yard at Barnes, where Mr. Jordan slept the sleep that knew no waking. A drizzling rain came down. The air was cold and eager, and I returned home from the funeral of Mr. Jordan about as uncomfortable as I could.

* * * * * * * * *

The next day the following advertisement appeared in the morning paper, and caught my eye as I sat at breakfast:—

"If any one of the relations of Mr. John James Jordan, will call at the office of Mr. Shaw, 60, Lincoln's Inn Fields, they will hear of something advantageous."

I made up my mind to call upon Mr. Shaw during the day, and about three o'clock I reached the staircase leading to them, but there I had to stop, for it was quite besieged by men and women, who were all conversing with great eagerness.

'What can it mean?' said one old woman. 'I'm his aunt and of course I can speak for my Ned.' 'And a man,' 'he hardly belongs to the family, I'm his brother. Think of that Mrs. Dea.' 'Think of what ye two-legged goose?' 'Pho! pho!' said another man. 'I knew him very well, I'm his cousin. Hillo!—what's this? Who are you?'

A woman in tattered garments, but who still looked looked like a Beautiful one, stood hesitatingly at the foot of the stairs. 'Is this Mr. Shaw's?' she said. 'Hush, Mary, hush! don't my dear. But I am hungry, mamma,' said a little girl, who was holding her by a beautiful of her dress.

'Oh, Mary—do not, dearest, we—we shall soon go home. Hush, dear, hush! Is this Mr. Shaw's?'

'Yes,' said a fat woman, 'and who is you pray?'

'I—I saw an advertisement. I am his sister Grace's only child. My name is Mary Grantham. This is my only child. She—she is fatherless, and has been so for many a day.'

'What,' cried a man, 'are you the Mary that he broke his heart about?'

'Broke his fiddlestick,' said the fat woman. 'He was fifty when he died.'

'Broke his heart for me?' asked the poor looking woman with the child—'Good God! do I live to hear that?'

'You had better go up to the solicitor at once,' whispered I, 'Come, I will show you his door.'

I made a way for her through the throng of persons, and we soon reached the chamber. 'Here is mother of Mr. Jordan's relations, Mr. Shaw,' said I, 'I find you have had quite a levee.

'I have indeed, doctor. You must come at twelve o'clock, next Monday, madam, when the will of Mr. Jordan will be read by me to all around.'

'I think you, sir.' She was about to leave the chambers when I interposed.

'Pardon me, madam,' I said, 'but as I was the only person with Mr. Jordan at the time of his decease, I wish to ask you a question. If I mistake not, your name was the last that passed his lips. 'Mary, my Mary,' he said, 'God knows that I loved you?'

She sank into a chair, and burst into tears.

'Yes, then,' I added, 'are the Mary whom he loved. Ah, why did you not, if you can weep for him now, reciprocate the passion?'

'I did love him,' she cried, 'God knows, and he who is now with him, God, knows how I loved him. But old tongues came between us, and we were separated. He was maligned to me, and I was worked by accumulated tales until I married another. She who caused the separation, and created from hearth that should and should have been all the world to each other, continued she on her deathbed—'

'What sister?' asked Mr. Shaw.

'She sister? From no other sister could I have believed the tales that I was told. But I did see sufficient to convince the world to think that there were motives who could malign their own children. We separated, very unhappy—he was well help in argumentations showed me the advertisement, and urged me to meet—it with a few hope. But I feel that these long absent arms and brawling tongues below, that I cannot contend against.

'Never mind that,' said the solicitor 'it is my duty to read the will on Monday, and as a relation it is your duty to attend. At the same time I tell you to have no expectations.

I saw Mr. Shaw try to slip some money into her hand, and I saw a crimson flush cover her face as she said—'We can still work; and then, fearing she had been harsh to one who wished to be kind she shook his hand in both of hers, and said, 'God bless you, sir, I thank you from my heart.'

Bang, bang! came to the door of the chambers, a minute after Mary had left, and upon its being opened a man of about five or six and thirty made his appearance.

'Something advantageous? he gained, for he was out of breath, 'What—what is it? Give it to me, give it to me! How much! Good God, don't let anybody else have it. I'm his youngest brother—give it to me.'

'If you will attend here at twelve on Monday, the will will be read.'

Bang, bang, bang!

'I'm thoroughly besieged,' said Mr. Shaw. 'Now, madam, who are you?'

'Something advantageous,' here cried a masculine looking woman. 'I'm a relative—what is it—come on, my dears. Here's my five dear daughters and my baby—come along.'

'Be off with you,' cried the younger brother.

'Did you speak to me, you wretch,' said the lady, and she planted a blow in his face, that made him reel again. 'Take that; I know you are a smoking hound, you used to be called the chimney-sweep in the family, you poor scorched up looking bundle of cat's-meat.'

Several more arrivals now took place, and poor Mr. Shaw was fairly bewildered. Sounds of contention arose on the staircase. Shrieks from family combatants came upon our ears, and finally, I advised Mr. Shaw to paste a placard on the outer door of his office, on which was written:

"The will of Mr. Jordan will be read here on Monday next, at twelve o'clock, precisely."

The riot gradually subsided. The evening came on, and all the relations of the deceased had been and gone. Mr. Shaw and I supped together, and I promised to be with him punctually at twelve o'clock on Monday, for I was as curious as anybody could be to hear the will read, and at all events, anticipated a bustling scene upon the occasion. I was not to be disappointed.

STRANGE SCENE IN A CHURCH.

A MARRIAGE ILLUSTRATED.

One of the most singular illustrations of the well-known aphorism, "there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip," occurred, we are informed, in Antrim yesterday. It would appear that at an early hour of the morning a dashing suite of three carriages, with the customary hymeneal embellishments were furnished by a well known local livering establishment, to convey an apparently happy bride and bridegroom and a joyous wedding party to the historic town of Antrim, where the ceremony was arranged to take place. The parties are said to have been in the highest spirits on the way, and arrived in Antrim, at once proceeded to the sacred edifice in which the vows were to be made one. The officiating clergyman was in readiness, the bride and bridegroom took their places, and the pretty bridesmaids, with a pardonable flutter of expectation, arranged themselves in their allotted positions, and "all went merry as marriage bells" until the clergyman, in the course of the service, asked if any present knew of any just cause or impediment why the aspirants for matrimony before him should not be joined in that holy estate. The query was instantly responded to by a young gentleman in the body of the church who protested that he had just reason to forbid the banns; and, amid excitement which can be better imagined than described, he requested permission to put a question to the bride. This was accorded him, and in a manly voice he asked her if she had not, some two years since, pledged her troth to him. The fair fiancee hung her head and answered "Yes!" and while her intended husband, in concert with the entire assemblage, gazed in utter bewilderment on the scene, the fickle fair one put a climax to the proceedings by adding—"And I will keep my word!" Instantly seizing her former lover by the arm, she swept with him in majestic from the church, and entering one of the carriages which had driven the party to the sacred edifice, drove off at locomotive speed with her recovered swain to the residence of her mother, leaving the poor fellow in the church to ruminate over the inconstancy of fickle woman, and doubtless hoping "better luck next time."—Belfast Morning Whig.

An Irishman from London.—Not so long in London there was the following marriage in English on the wall:—"Tea will find at Trollbathe excellent bread, mann shop, provided you bring in with you!"

A gentleman met one evening not his servant. 'Well! where are you going in this time the night? for my part, I am going to bed. I will going the you.'

THE POOR OF NEW YORK.

There is no other city in the United States in which the poor are compelled to live together in so unwholesome a way as in this great metropolis. Within a single block of a dozen squares [illegible] of Broadway, upon the most expensive [illegible] are crowded, in the meanest tenements, [illegible] Then the number of people who stretch for two miles along [illegible] Two-thirds of the population—that is, over 700,000 human beings—[illegible] are crowded into [illegible] Chatham street, contains one hundred and thirty-six families.

This is a mere type of some anomalous condition of affairs. It is not a transient evil, resulting from the war. It dates back many years, and has been and is still a growing evil. Four years ago, in an admirable report to the New York Sanitary Association, Mr. Halliday expressed the wretched condition of these tenement houses. This report created some sensation at the time; but the subject was soon lost sight of among the graver and more exciting questions of the war. The facts, however, remain as true as ever, and are of such importance in their bearing on one of the greatest social problems of the day, that a reproduction of some of the most essential points of his report will be found of great interest.

Mr. Halliday divides the population of New York—containing about 800,000 souls—into one hundred and fifteen thousand nine hundred and eighty-six families. These families lived in about thirty-nine thousand five hundred and fifty-two dwellings. Of these dwellings, fifteen thousand one hundred and ninety contained each a single family; seven thousand one hundred and eighty-one contained each two families; four hundred and sixteen, each three families. The remaining eleven thousand nine hundred and sixty-five dwellings contained four to ninety-four families each, or an average of about seven families!

This fearful crowding and packing of human beings together is bad enough, we would think; but other horrors are added. A large number of these tenement houses occupy rear lots, where a breath of pure air can never penetrate. In the Eleventh Ward one hundred and thirteen rear houses contained one thousand six hundred and fifty-three families, or nearly fifteen families and seventy souls each, and twenty-four contained four hundred and seven families, being an average of seventeen families and eighty souls per house! In the Fourteenth Ward seventy-two rear houses contained one thousand three hundred and eighty-eight families, or an average to each house of nineteen families and ninety-five souls!

There are many blocks in our city, says Mr. Halliday, covering an area of not more than three or four hundred feet square, that contain nearly twice as many families as are found on all of Fifth Avenue. In a single block he found nearly seven hundred families, and a population of some three thousand five hundred souls.

Many of the tenement houses resemble extensive barracks in respect to mere size, immutably wanting in those sanitary regulations which prevail at military establishments. Mr. Halliday gives a fearfully minute and harrowing description of one of these huge pest-houses that contained ninety four families. It was built in a lot fifty feet wide by two hundred and fifty feet deep. An alleyway, eight feet wide, separated it from the surrounding houses, and nearly all the sparingness were so situated that the sun could never shine into them to purify the atmosphere of death that pervaded the whole building. Each of the apartments consisted of a narrow room and bedroom; and, in several instances, Mr. Halliday found families keeping boarders. In other apartments two or three families were huddled together without so much decency and comfort as the Esquimaux enjoy in their winter kraouls. Underneath the alleys was an open drain, connecting with the street sewers, and always filled with stagnant water and all the filth from the vaults opening into it. The horrible [illegible] from the closets and drains filled every apartment in the building.

This is no fancy sketch; it is a dreadful reality. Nor is this a solitary instance; it is only one—and not the worst—of hundreds. Mr. Halliday does not hesitate to affirm that a very large proportion of the tenement houses in New York present features equally revolting to humanity. Into such vile habitations the poor of our city—the honest and hard-working equally with the vicious—are crowded, year in, year out with no hope of improvement. The evil, as already observed, is a growing one. The number of tenement houses increases with the increase of our laboring population, and the only question with landlords appears to be how to economize space. The health and comfort of their tenants are never taken into account at all. Every year new tenements go up by the score, and the new differ from the old in the diminished size and increased number of apartments.

Every year the evil will grow in extent. The increase of our laboring population, and the capacity of landlords, drive multitudes of the poor from the more decent lodging houses into these vile cellars. A respectable and hard working man told us, the other day that he was compelled to pay eight dollars a month for a closet barely large enough to sleep in, and without a window—and the same closet, with the same bedding, was let to another man, who worked all night, and came in to sleep by day. This is but one instance of a thousand.—Another family, consisting of a father and three children, pay the same price for a part of a cellar.

The effects of this crowding together, of both sexes, cannot but be deleterious to morals as well as to health. What chance has female modesty, under such circumstances? How can a child brought up in such debauchery and wretchedness develop virtuous [illegible] but like wickedness? Its home [illegible] is the street and unspeakable scenes exist in these dens of vice blindly and recklessly

The Christian virtues must have shone resplendent in the [illegible] Nottingham, the great [illegible] of lament, [illegible] lovers of the poor have [illegible] that can be applied hopes. After the day's work is over, they rush up a society and superintendence of [illegible] crowded sitting room, where the refuse meats and even the garbage of the street is shared by [illegible] and dirty women called landlords, or lords, and dozens of low, dirty, filthy cellars, far below the level of the street, where people of both sexes are herded together indiscriminately. Some of these cellars are three up with a double row of bunks on each side, with another double row down the centre. The beds are commonly straw mattresses, and the sheets and coverlets, as far as our inspecting eyes, are ragged and filthy in the extreme. The keeper of one of these dens loudly announced that his sheets were washed once a week; but, to say nothing of the visible evidence to the contrary, he also testified that he hadn't a sheet on his bed that would have stood that test of even a moderate rubbing on the wash-tub. The atmosphere even by day is one of three cellars is perfectly sickening, and by night, when every one of these bunks are occupied by one or two persons—men, women and children—huddled in without the faintest thought of decency—the air becomes absolutely putrid, and the floor and walls become damp, and reek with pestilential exhalations. In some of these infernal holes, not over ten feet square, as many as thirty persons sleep at night. And it must be borne in mind that these cellars do not all open into the street. There are sub-cellars fitted up in the same way, where many a poor man and woman and child breathe the breath, not of life, but of death.

No doubt much of the evil we have described is owing to the high price of land in New York, and to the peculiar formation of the island on which the city is built. The poor must be near their work, and comparatively few of them can afford to live out of the city. Hence, they crowd together in the lower part of the town. And there is a class of persons who might do better, who choose to live in this manner merely as a measure of economy. They sleep in these dens, and live on the streets, for several years, perhaps, while the earnings of their industry or beggary are deposited weekly in the savings bank, until they have accumulated enough to buy a farm in the West, to which they will repair and, it is to be hoped, "purge and live decently," like Christians, on the money they have thus saved. But the great multitude live and die in this abject wretchedness; and this state of things must continue until our great capitalists, joining hands with the philanthropic men and women, who are now laboring for the amelioration of the condition of the poor, shall replace these dens by decent, wholesome houses, where our labouring population can live in Christian respectability and comfort.—*N. MATTERS IN RICHMOND.

A young lady, says the Boston Transcript of August 24th, for five years a resident in Richmond, and the relative of a distinguished individual in that city, has recently effected her escape from the Rebel capital, and arrived in Massachusetts a few days since. She had previously made many endeavors to leave Richmond without success. Some of her statements are of considerable interest. In Richmond there is one thing that can hardly escape the most superficial observation. The people fear Gen. Grant. When it is announced that he is moving on the city the popular mind instantly assumes a serious tone. The churches are thronged and the theaters deserted. Public amusements almost cease. This continues until the city is deemed safe from capture for the time, when the old levity again prevails. Parties, balls, levees and theatres consume the time of the people, and religion—even as it can be found at the South—is deprived of its formal support, the churches being deserted for frivolous occasion.

It has been already stated, the popular appreciation of Grant recognizes his persistent will, firmness of purpose, and marvellous command of resources. Hence, when the report spread that he was dead, there was a great and general jubilation in Richmond, and consequent depression as the fact became known. It is believed by the Rebels that Grant is no unworthy antagonist of their greatest General, Robert E. Lee.

The prices of all articles are enormous; ladies' slippers, $100 per pair; drum beefsteaks, $500 each. The necessaries of life are sold at rates proportionate to the following: brown sugar, $18; white sugar, from $20 to $25 per pound. A well furnished table, it will be seen, costs something in Secession, if bought with Confederate scrip.

COST OF PUBLISHING A NEWSPAPER IN MOBILE.—The Mobile "Advertiser" enumerates the prices which they have to pay in publishing a newspaper—a half sheet at that—in the South. Paper in peace times, it says, used to cost $2 00 to $2 50 per ream. It now costs $60 to $80 per ream. Ink in the same proportion. Glue, largely used in composition of press rollers, which formerly cost some $50 to $60 a barrel, now costs $1,202 a barrel. Oil, formerly $1 25 to $1 50 a gallon, now costs $50 a gallon. Molasses, largely used in rollers, in peace times $12 a barrel, now costs $1,000. Press blankets, formerly $3 25, and for a poor substitute we have to pay $75. Wood for engines, in peace, $5 a cord, now $45. Flash in peace, 20 cents a pound, now from $2 to $5.

"Na, na, I'll hae noo mair Irishmen," said a Lothian farmer to an Hibernian applicant for work; "the last two that I had deed on my hins, and I had to bury them at my ain expense." "Och, sir! there's no fear of any more! we've got a certificate from the board of examiners that it didn't die of starvation."

An Election will take place in September or October next, when you will be called upon to choose a Member to represent the Trent Division.

Having been elected by your confidence in 1863 to fill up the unexpired time occasioned by the decease of the late Hon. E. Murney, and the resignation of the Hon. Sidney Smith, I have during the past year devoted as much of my time as it was possible for me to do in attending the two Sessions of Parliament, and also in attending to the requests of such of the constituents as have seen fit to honor me with their letters and other matters, not immediately connected with Parliamentary duties.

We are about beginning a new era in the history of the politics of our country. The present move in the formation of a Ministry who pledges themselves to bury the feuds of the past, and to work together for the general good of the country, by bringing such measures before the next Session of Parliament as will tend to a final settlement of the sectional difficulties between Upper and Lower Canada, demands our serious consideration.

I may be permitted to state that I shall accord to them a fair trial, and whether in or out of Parliament, to assist by every means in my power the consummation of so desirable an object; trusting that Upper Canada may receive that which she is justly entitled to, and that both Provinces will be greatly benefitted by the change.

I have specified from the numerous personal requests, as also by letters from many parts of the Division, to again place myself at the disposal of the Electors, and if again honored with your confidence, to discharge the trust committed to me in as satisfactory a manner as possible.

I have the honor to be Gentlemen,
Yours &c. &c.
BILLA FLINT.

How to Cure a Smoky Chimney.

For hard lying, the following can't be beat. A correspondent, who lives in New Hampshire, states that in those parts resides a man called Jon, a fellow noted for the tough lies he can tell, and, as a sample, relates the following:

Joe called in at Holton's one day, and found the utmost choked with smoke, when he suggested:

"You don't know as much about managing smoky chimneys as I do, squire, or you'd cure 'em."

"Ah," said Holton, with interest, "did you ever see a smoky chimney cured?"

"Seen a smoky chimney cured!" said old Jon. "I think I have! I had the worst one in seaboard county once, and I cured it a little too much."

"How was that?" asked Holton.

"Why, you see," said Joe, "you see I built a little house out yonder, at Wolf Hollow, ten or twelve years ago. Jim Bush, the fellow that built the chimneys, kept blind drunk three quarters of the time, and crazy drunk the other. I told him that I thought he'd have something wrong, but he stuck to it and finished the house. Well, we moved in, and built a fire next morning to boil the tea kettle. All the smoke came through the room and went out of the windows, not a bit went up the flues. We tried it for two or three days, and it got worse and worse. By and by it came on to rain, and the rain began to come down the chimney. It put the fire out in a minute, and directly it came down by the pailful. We had to get the baby off the floor as soon as we could, or it would have been drowned. In fifteen minutes the water stood knee-deep on the floor. Then I went out and took a look. It didn't rain half so hard outside, and I pretty soon see what is the matter. The drunken cuss had put the chimney wrong end up, and it drawed downwards; it gathered all the rain within a hundred yards, and poured it down by bucketfulls."

"Well, that was unfortunate," remarked Holton. "But what in the world did you do with the house? Surely, you never cured that chimney?"

"Didn't I, though?" answered old Joe. "Yes, I did."

"How?" asked Holton.

"Turned it the other end up," said the incorrigible, "and then you ought to have seen it draw. That was the way I cured it too much."

"Drew too much?" asked Holton.

"Well, Squire, you may judge for yourself," said old Joe. "Pretty soon after we got the chimney down the other end up, I missed one of the chairs out of the room, and directly I see another of 'em shooting toward the fire-place. Next the table went, and I seen the back log going up. Then I grabbed the old woman under one arm and the baby under t'other and started; but just as I got to the door I seen the cat going across the floor backwards holding on with her claws to the carpet, yelling awfully. It was'nt no use. I just seen her going over the top of the chimney, and that was the last of her."

"Well, what did you then?" asked Holton. "Of course you couldn't live in such a house?"

"Couldn't I, though?" said Joe; "but I did. I put a poultice on the jam of the fire-place, and that drawed t'other way; so we had no more trouble."

SLOW GRINDING.—Quite a number of years ago there lived in Androscoggin county, Maine, a man by the name of L——. He was a farmer, stage driver and hotel keeper, and was blessed with a large family of boys. Among them was the hero of our yarn. Ide was the name that he was best known by. He was been lookand scrawny—always on hand to run errands and do chores generally. One very hot day in July Ide was sent off to a mill, with a large lot of grain to be ground. Unluckily for him, there was quite a quantity in before he got there, so that it was late in the afternoon before they got to work on Ide's lot. The water was low, consequently the millstones resolved rather slowly. Ide was hungry, and his inner man grew uproarious, and looking up to the miller, he says:

"Uncle Reub, I can get that meal faster than you can grind it."

"Ay, my hor, how long could you do it."

"Why, till I am starved to death!" said Ide.

Uncle Reub says that he never got such a shot before.

Mrs. Crocodile is an absent-minded lady. She bought a new bonnet not long since and the first time she wore it on Montgomery street she thought every one would notice it, of course. Presently she met Mrs. Simpkins, who stopped her with a "Good morning, Mrs. Crocodile." "I bought it only a few weeks ago." "How is your family?" "One hundred dollars." Mrs. S. perceived that the mind of Mrs. C. was on her bonnet, and tried her once more. "Anything new, Mrs. Crocodile?" "Yes, the feather is new, to—a new bonnet altogether." And so they parted.

Compound

Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 10 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to supply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

VEGETABLE BALSAMIC

ELIXIR.

WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt.,

Nov. 24th, 1858.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption. In the Fever and Ague it is a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence, and have no doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs, about it, that he is the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

THE DYING SUMMER.

(From the Quebec Chronicle.)

Dying Summer's gently gliding
Into Winter's frigid grave;
While the falling leaves are hiding
Beauties that around her wave!

Still, are gems of beauty glowing,
As the grove she tessellates,
With the floral wonders growing—
Wonders that her life creates!

Rich and gorgeous is the pillow
Where she lays her dying head.
Midst the gold-fruit ripe and yellow,
And the flowers blue and red.

Happy Summer, bright and airy,
Brilliant, transient, lingering still;
With thee, life and fay and fairy
Vanish all from mount and rill!

Roses sweet, with dew-drops weeping,
Woo thee lovingly to stay;
Softly streams and cascades leaping,
Bid thee not in haste away.

Laughing hours of sunny gladness
Fall-winds still will blow away;
Leaving leaves to sigh in sadness,
As they wither day by day.

While the sultry Autumn's breathing
Perfume forth each dewy flower,
Summer's hand is gently breathing
Garlands for her parting hour.

Youthful June and July glories
With their beauties pass away;
Serve but as Memento Mori's
Of all pleasures bright and gay!

SOMETHING ADVANTAGEOUS; OR A FAMILY FRACAS.

(Concluded.)

It is a habit of mine rather to be too soon than too late, and in the present instance I found it a most useful one, for I really almost doubt if I should have got into the chambers of Mr. Shaw at all if I had been later than I was.

I had fairly to push Mrs. Mary Grantham in, despite a vigorous opposition, and a man stopped my own entrance, crying—

'Who are you? What relation are you?'

'His grandfather's uncle,' said I; 'and if you don't make way, I'll pull the nose off your face.'

It was well that Mr. Shaw occupied very spacious chambers, or otherwise he could not have accommodated one half of the persons who came to the reading of the will; and never in all my life did I see such malignant looks pass from one to another as shot from the eyes of the relations. It was a most pitiful picture of human nature.

'Ladies and gentlemen,' said Mr. Shaw; 'ahem! ahem!'

There was a death-like stillness.

'Ladies and gentlemen, I am commissioned to read to you the—the—what shall I call it?—it is hardly a will—of the late Mr. Jordan. 'No, it certainly ought not to be called a will, for a will, properly speaking, is a testamentary ——'

'Read, read, read!' cried a dozen voices.

'Well ladies and gentlemen, I am glad to see you are all in respectable mourning.'

'Except one,' said the younger brother; 'there's his Mary that he was so fond of. Oh, dear me! she only comes for what she can get.'

Mrs. Grantham burst into tears. There was a little shabby piece of black crape upon her left arm, and another upon the arm of her child.

'I—I could not,' she said; I could not do more. God help me! I had not the means.'

'Read, read, read!' cried all the voices.

'Ahem!' said Mr. Shaw reading; 'I, John James Jordan, being very poor and having in vain called upon every relation I have in the world for assistance, and found none, have to state that my heart was filled with bitterness and uncharitableness towards them. But still I think that they are not dead to all feeling; and this being my last will and testament, I desire that my debts, amounting to the sum of one pound, three shillings and eight-pence, be paid forthwith out of my estate; that my funeral be strictly private, in Barnes churchyard, where I last parted with one whom I loved, but who has gone abroad, I am told; and to that one of my relations who will erect a tombstone. I bequeath——'

'Hark! will you?' cried one; 'be quiet Go on—yes, yes. Oh! you wretch, where's your feelings? Go to the devil!'

'Really, ladies and gentlemen,' said I, 'this is most indecorous.'

'I bequeath,' continued Mr. Shaw, 'my dying blessing and forgiveness.'

Mr. Shaw then folded up the will, and put it into his pocket saying—

'I wish you all good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I sold the few clothes and other matters he died possessed of and paid for the funeral, and his debts, being minus myself one shilling and four pence, which I hope some of you will pay.'

It is quite impossible by any words to fairly depict to the reader the appearance of Mr. Jordan's relations at this moment. If the fabled Gordon's head had suddenly appeared and transformed them all into stone, they could not have looked more completely paralized and panic stricken.

'A tombstone!' shrieked twenty voices.

'A tombstone!'

'A tombstone!' said Mr. Shaw. 'A small one would not cost much. You could put on it a suitable inscription. Here lies——'

'Lies here—never mind,' said the brother. 'Never mind. I—I—Oh, that's all in it.'

'You are a humbug,' said the masculine woman to Mr. Shaw, 'and so was old stupid Jordan.'

'Go to the d——l one all of you,' shouted another. 'A tombstone, indeed.'

Mr. Shaw was wiping his spectacles.

'Ladies and gentlemen allow me to add—'

'Oh, stuff, stuff! Bother. A tombstone indeed. I shan't stay another moment. An old thief. I wish I had been down his throat. Come on! It's all a do.'

'But ladies and gentlemen.'

They were quite deaf to the remonstrances of Mr. Shaw, and in a few moments the chambers were quite clear, with the exception of Mrs. Mary Grantham, who was sobbing hysterically. She then rose, and looked at me, hesitatingly. Then she looked at Mr. Shaw, and she seemed to be struggling to say something. She placed her hand in her bosom, and drew forth a ring tied to a black ribbon, and then, with a convulsive effort she spoke.—

'This—this ring—it is my only valuable possession. It was given to me thirty years ago, by him who is now no more, my cousin John who loved me. I have clung to it in pain and sorrow, in difficulty and distress. I have never parted with it. I seemed to not be wholly separated from him while I had it next my heart. But now great distress forces me to part with it. Will—neither of you gentlemen buy it off me. I shriek from its going into the hands of utter strangers.'

'Hemp!' said Mr. Shaw. There are a couple of sovereigns for it.'

She took the money, and then after one long lingering look, and a fervent kiss at the ring, she laid it on the table, and tottered from the place. I was about to follow after her, but Mr. Shaw held me back.

'Hold! hold!' he said.

'You are a brute, sir,' said I. 'Take your hands off me; I will buy the ring of you and give it back to her. It breaks her heart to part with it I see.'

'I shan't part with it,' he said; 'you are a hasty man, doctor.'

I was very angry and bounced out of the office. I looked eagerly about for Mrs. Grantham, but could not see her. I walked hurridly across the square, and as chance would have it, I went in the same direction she did. My first impulse was to speak to her, and my second thought was to follow her and see where she went. She crossed Holborn, and traversed some of the long streets that lead into the New Road, where she arrived at last, and finally paused at a stone mason's yard.

I could have shed tears at that moment, for now I felt why she had parted with her cherished ring. She stayed about a quarter of an hour at the stone-mason's and then she came out and walked slowly away. I did not follow her farther, but I went into the mason's yard, and said to him,—

'Did that lady give you an order?'

'Why, yes, sir, such a one as it is. She has got me to do a stone for two pounds and she paid me. I'm to meet her at the churchyard at Barnes to-morrow morning, at ten o'clock with it, and put it up. It has only to have on it the name of John James Gordon, and under that 'God bless him.'

I walked away with a sort of mist about my eyes, and it was an hour before I recovered my composure. 'I will meet her,' thought I, 'at the grave of her last love, and I will be a friend to her if she has never another in the world. She shall have it. I'll go and get it now at once.'

I suppose I looked in a very tolerable position when I got back to Mr. Shaw's chamber's, for he got behind a table when he saw me, and said,—

'Come, come, no violence.'

'Hark you, sir,' said I; you have got the ring. There's your money. Give it me directly, sir. Mrs. Grantham, poor thing, is going to-morrow morning, at nine o'clock to place a stone at the grave of Mr. Jordan, and I intend to be there, and give her her ring.'

'Oh! very well. Bother the ring—I don't want it. It aint worth half the money I gave for it. There it is don't bother me.'

I took up the ring, then put down two sovereigns, and casting upon him a withering look, which, to tell the truth, he did not seem to care much about, I left the chambers.

* * * * * * * *

A soft, damp, white mist covered up all objects, and made the air uncommonly raw and chilly, as on the following morning just as the clock of the church at Barnes chimed the three quarters past eight, I entered the church-yard.

The first thing that I then did was to fall over somebody's grave, for I was looking for Mrs. Grantham instead of minding where I was walking; and then a voice said.—

'There you go again, as violent as usual doctor,' and in the dim mist I saw Mr. Shaw, the solicitor, to my great surprise.

I was going to say something, but at the moment I was nearly knocked down again by somebody brushing past me. A gleam of sunshine came out, and the mist began to clear away, when a most singular scene presented itself. A few yards off was the grave of Mr. Jordan, and kneeling by it was Mary, his first love, with her child by her side. Mr. Shaw stood to her left, and at his feet there knelt a respectable young man—I recollected him as Mr. Shaw's clerk.

'Good God! Richards,' said Mr. Shaw: 'is that you? Why, what's the matter?'

'Oh, sir,' said Richards, 'I have come to ask your forgiveness. The spirit of my poor old father stood by my bed-side all night. Oh, God! oh, God! it was dreadful; and I knew what it was for. Oh! sir, forgive me. I—I peeped into the will, sir, while you went out to dinner—Mr. Jordan's will—and—and I went round to all the relations, and sold the secret for two pounds apiece, and—and that——'

Mr. Shaw gave a jump that astonished me.

'Doctor, doctor,' he shouted, 'for God's sake run down to the London road, and bring the man with the grave stone. Oh! good gracious. Oh! d—n you Richards. Ha! ha! ha! Oh! bless me. Oh! bless you for a prudent stone-mason; you will get well paid for this job. Hip! hip! hip!—hurrah!'

I thought Mr. Shaw must have gone mad. There was a man looking over the railing of the church yard with a spade on his shoulder, and to him Mr. Shaw said:—

'Five guineas for that spade.'

The man thought he was mad and tried to run away, but he dropped the spade, and in another moment Shaw's coat was off and he was digging away like fury.

'Where's the stone?' he cried'; 'bring the stone. That's right. Poke it in—prop it up. That's the thing—all's right here we are. Another knock. All's right—all's right.

'Liar,' said the stonemason as he lifted up his hands; 'look there!'

I looked in the direction he indicated and there to my astonishment, I saw arriving carts, coaches, cabs, and wheelbarrows, and each contained a tombstone. A regular fight ensued at the entrance to the church-yard, and engaged in that fight I recognized the relations of Mr. Jordan. Heavens how they cuffed each other around!

'Hold! cried Mr. Shaw, 'you are all too late, although you had information you ought not to have had. There is already a stone on Mr. Jordan, and placed, too, by the only one who knew not what you all know. Listen to the conclusion of the will—'And to that one of my relations who will erect a tombstone to my memory, I bequeath my blessing and forgiveness, and eighty thousand pounds in bank stock.'—Madam—to Mrs. Grantham—I congratulate you.'

'And there's your ring,' said I; 'Mr. Shaw, let us shake hands. I understand you now.'

Ha! ha! said Mr. Shaw. 'Ladies and gentlemen, you had better all of you keep the tombstones for yourselves. You can get the names altered, for if you don't I am very much afraid that you will not be apt to find in them, "Something advantageous."

QUEEN VICTORIA.

It is now more than a quarter of a century since Queen Victoria, then a fair-haired blue eyed girl, took the oath at her coronation in Westminster Abbey. She stood with calm self-reliance in that proud and imposing assembly of all the nobility, learning genius and beauty of her realm, under the towering arches of that most majestic cathedral, and sworn to govern them according to their ancient laws. The Archbishop of Canterbury advanced towards the Queen and addressed Her Majesty thus:—

"Madam, is your Majesty willing to take the oath?"

The Queen answered, "I am willing."

Then said the Archbishop. "Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the people of this United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the dominions thereto belonging, according to the Statutes in Parliament agreed on and the respective laws and customs of the same?"

The Queen: "I solemnly promise so to do."

The Archbishop: "Will you, to the utmost of your power, cause law and justice in mercy to be executed in all your judgments?"

The Queen, "I will."

The Archbishop: "Will you to the utmost of your power, maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the Gospel and the Protestant Reformed religion established by law? And will you maintain and preserve inviolable the settlement of the United Church of England and Ireland, and the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, as by law established within England and Ireland and the territories thereunto belonging? And will you preserve unto the bishops and clergy of England and Ireland, and to the Churches there committed to their charge, all such rights and privileges as by law do or shall appertain to them, or any of them?

The Queen: "All this I promise to do."

Then the Queen arising out of her chair, attended by her supporters, and assisted by the Lord Great Chamberlain, the sword of State alone being carried before Her Majesty, proceeded to the altar, where kneeling on the cushion placed on the steps and laying her right hand on the Holy Gospel in the Great Bible which had been carried in the procession, she took the coronation oath, saying these words;—

"The things which I have herebefore promised I will perform and keep, so help me God."

Then the Queen kissed the book, and to a transcript of the oath set her royal sign manual.

Such were the obligations to which Queen Victoria solemnly pledged herself at her coronation, in 1838, and who shall say that they have not been performed? It is to this sacred performance of her duties that she owes her present firm position on the throne. It would have been far better for the other Sovereigns of Europe had they kept their plighted word as well as she. How great are the perils they have passed through during the five lustres of her reign! Bourbon, Hapsburg and Bradenburg alike have been forced to yield to the turbulent elements which their own despotic misgovernment has evoked from their oppressed people. Not a few of them have sunk beneath the waves of the raging sea of anarchy around them, while she has rested securely on her shores, dispensing to her people liberty and law, and to perishing kings offering a safe asylum.

While most other countries have been convulsed by civil commotions, England has been entirely undisturbed, and the throne of Victoria is more firmly fixed than ever. While the very foundations of society have been menaced elsewhere, not even the slightest feeling of disloyalty has been noticed in England, and the Queen is as dearly loved as at the first. The confidence of her people has everywhere extended broad and deep, and she is now personally dear to all classes. The English can point to her with pride and satisfaction, and the more so that her conduct has been in all respects consistent. Her personal character and public conduct have always been above reproach. It is greatly to the credit of Queen Victoria that she has secured so strong a position, from the fact that all her predecessors, at least all of the House of Hanover, have been narrow minded and contemptible Sovereigns, while George IV., in addition to this, was a heartless scoundrel. For over a century before her accession, England had been cursed with five princes whose qualities were such as to render not feelings of loyalty or respect, but rather those of contempt and hatred. It is the great glory of Victoria that, though not distinguished for great mental capacity, she has done more to strengthen the cause of her family on the throne than all the five kings which preceded her. Nay, it is rather in spite of all that their folly and imbecility had done to weaken the regard of their subjects and bring loyalty into disrepute, that the many virtues of her private character have guided her on to the secure happiness and prosperity of herself and family.

She has restored to loyalty its old prestige. She has once more surrounded it with the reverential affection which makes obedience so easy, patriotism so hearty, and constitutional government so strong and so stable. She has revived and given a new lease of life to sentiments which had slumbered since the Stuart days, and which some had mourned over as altogether dead. She has done this by a combination of qualities which is rare in any rank; rarest, perhaps, of all upon a throne. But most of all has she affected it by setting an example in her household life of private and domestic virtue, which Britons appreciate so much, and by never in a single instance belying the confidence of the nation.

Perhaps, in nothing has that deep and ever present sense of grave responsibility under which she has lived and acted been more signally displayed than in the sedulous care which she and her consort bestow upon the education of her children. She thus not only strengthened her own hold upon the affections of her people, and increased the stability of her throne, but laid deep and strong the foundations upon which her successors must rest. Victoria well understood, when her young children were growing up around her, how much of the highest welfare of the country must depend upon the character of those who would hereafter be called upon to sway the sceptre and to form the Court of England. Hence few royal families have had the benefit of so excellent a Training. No one in the least degree acquainted with the facts in the case will hesitate to pronounce that everything which the most conscientious effort and vigilance could effect has been done to ensure her object. And not only is this true but in a very remarkable degree this effort and this vigilance have been under the guidance of an unusually sound judgment.—Boston Watchman and Recorder.

A Self-Accused Accomplice of Muller.

At the Worship street police court yesterday, George Augustus King, about five feet nine or ten inches in height, with straight red whiskers, wiry frame, and of shabby genteel appearance, calling himself a publisher, living at Bow, was brought before Mr Cuthbert Ellison by Mr. Inspector Hosey, of the K. division, charged upon his own confession with being concerned in the murder of Mr. Briggs.

Mr. Abbott attended for the prosecution, which was instituted by Mr. George Beckley, landlord of the Ranelagh Arms Tavern, Old Ford, who stated—Last night, about 11 o'clock, I was in the bar talking to my customers, and expressing the extreme gratification I felt at the capture of Muller with the extra evidence against him, when the prisoner, who was present in front of the bar, suddenly remarked, "I would wager a fortune, if I had it, that there were two men congregated in it." A gentleman who was present turned round, and said, "You ought not to say such things if you don't know them for facts." Prisoner turned towards him, and replied, "I don't care; now Muller is caught I'm sure to be apprehended. Muller is coming across the Channel in irons, but I can walk at liberty." Another person remarked—"I am really astonished at your saying this; if a constable was wit in hearing he would apprehend you."

Mr. Safford (Clerk)—Was he sober?

Witness—No; he was not quite sober.

Evidence resumed—He took my hands, burst into tears and sobbed out, "I wish to have 50 lbs. weight taken off my shoulders." I asked, "What is the matter with you?" He then said, "Muller and I were hard up; we wanted money, and money we would have. It (the murder) was contemplated three days before it took place. We went to French-church street, waited there until Mr. Briggs arrived, and took two first-class tickets to Hackney-wick We did not commence our operations until we had just left Bow Station, I then struck him twice; Muller struck him three times. Muller opened the door and laid hold of his body; I lifted him up by his legs and threw him out. I got out at Hackney-wick Station, and ran to Milford Castle, went into the parlour and heard the firemen of an engine ballon out that some person was run over on the line. I went to assist, helped to carry the man into the public house, and bathed his temples."

Mr. Inspector Hosey said since prisoner had been apprehended he had made inquiries at the Milford Castle and learned that the prisoner was there two hours previous to the time of the murder.

Mr. Safford—Is the Milford Castle near the spot where the body of Mr. Briggs was discovered?

Mr. Buckley—It is.

Mr. Safford—It is scarcely evidence, you not being present at the time; but for information, say was the body carried into the house?

Mr. Buckley—It was. Permit me to say that on hearing of such an extraordinary statement from the prisoner, I conceived it my duty to give him in charge, that the police might investigate the matter.

Mr. Ellison—Prisoner, at this stage of the proceedings I will not call upon you to say anything. I think the matter of such grave import as that opportunity for further and searching investigation should be given. If you have made this statement simply through a drunken freak, you cannot complain of the position in which you are placed. I remand you until this day week.

The prisoner was then removed to the station, followed by a large crowd. He was charged, on remand, with the wilful murder of Mr. Briggs, and committed for trial.

Note, 7th.

Execution of a "Bounty Jumper."

The New York Evening Post has the following:—

"Private Amasa W. Downing, alias John W. Bell," Company H, Fourth Maryland Volunteers, who had deserted and re-enlisted seventeen times, was shot at Annapolis on Friday. He deserted in June, 1863, and re-enlisted at the following places:—At Greencastle, Pa., August, 1863, receiving $300; at New York, August, 1863, receiving $675; at Harrisburg, Pa., August, 1863, receiving $1,500; at Philadelphia, Pa., September, 1863, receiving $250; Frankford, Pa., September, 1863, receiving $450; New York city, September, 1863, receiving $675; New York city, Oct. 1863, receiving $300; Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec., 1863, receiving $450; Columbus, Ind., March, 1864, receiving $300; Columbus, Ohio, April, 1864, receiving $700; Baltimore, Md., June, 1864, receiving $300; total, $7,350.

"After being conducted around the inside hollow square, had placed in front of his coffin, the proceedings and contempt of the court-martial were read to him, when he was asked if he had anything to say, and he replied in the following speech:—

"'Well, soldiers, I suppose I've got to be executed, and I reckon it's all right. All I've got to say is, do your duty to your country faithfully. I was once court-martialled myself and honorable men, but I have disgraced myself half now here to be fair to. You had better work for a dollar a day all your lives than set as I have. I am worth twenty thousand dollars, but I am to be executed, and it won't do me any good.—Take my advice, then, and let prostitution alone. Bounties won't do you any more good than they have done me. Some of your country [illegible], and take a little whiskey now and then; it won't hurt you, any how. I haven't got time to say anything more, so good bye."

HOW JOHN MORGAN WAS CAUGHT.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune says: The Richmond Sentinel of the 20th (?) tells the story—a shadow of the capture and death of notorious John Morgan. It seems that while on a reconnoissance near Greeneville, East Tennessee, and using the privilege of his lawyer's practice, took lodging in a farm house near the village. The plainest little house happened to be the residence of a Mrs. Williams, whose husband is an officer on Gen. Burnside's staff. Mrs. Williams kept quiet until the guerrilla chief fell asleep. Then she hastily procured a horse, rode at full speed for Aftern and returned with a squad of Union soldiers. Just as they arrived, Morgan awoke, and seeing the danger broke from the house, but was confronted on all sides by bayonets. Desperate at being thus caught by a woman he drew his revolver, swearing he would not be taken alive, and undertook to break through the guard. They fired—and [illegible] Morgan's career of infamy and blood was finished.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1864.

OUR PRESENT AND FUTURE.

There is a class of persons that are constantly troubling themselves and others with their unavailing and unwarrantable murmurs. Afraid of every shadow, and magnifying every incident, because of their disordered mental organization, they fancy, or would have others do so, that our country's existence and their liberties are being endangered by every untoward election; or, by the return of some candidate who may not have sought their favor or courted their support. The great cry of the last few years has been that our predilections and yearnings have been towards American customs and rule, and that we are drifting into the dangerous eddy of American Democracy or Republican misrule; and they would fain have us believe that they only were our true watchmen and they alone stood on our watch towers. These imaginary dangers have not yet overtaken us; we still exist; our liberties remain intact; our connection with Britain as strong, yes, stronger than ever it has been; and our rights and privileges not yet likely to be invaded.

At no period in our history have questions of such magnitude been discussed as are likely to be during the coming Session or Sessions of our Legislative bodies. But at no period heretofore were we in such a happy state for entering into the discussion of great political or radical changes with the surest and fullest guarantee that no danger to our liberties need be dreaded, nor dangerous or unnecessary Democratic elements introduced. And even did we apprehend a little danger, we have confidence in our public men to whom our affairs are committed—we have faith strong enough in their honesty, sagacity and ability for the work assigned them—so that we can calmly resign ourselves into the arms of Morpheus fearing no evil.

The County of Peterborough has taken the precaution to choose good men and true to represent them during the transition state from childhood to youth and maturity; and if the people of Canada will see to it that such men as Colonel Haultain and the Hon. Billa Flint, and such only, shall be allowed to occupy our Legislative halls—men who are above venality, and who are guided by, honesty of purpose and integrity of principle—they need not fear.

Owing to the mismanagement, heretofore, of some party, we had drifted into a very unpleasant position. Not one of the leading parties of politicians was found able to carry on satisfactorily the business of the Province—the weakness of each rendered them unfit. It, therefore, became a political necessity that former feuds should be forgotten, and political landmarks changed in some degree. And that we had statesmen who were willing to forego antipathies, and to unite in a common interest so as to be able to meet existing evils, manfully grapple with them, and try to settle them at once—and all this at the risk of loosing their political status in their countrymen's affection, and at the risk of being hurled from their position—all this speak well for the present and augurs well for the future.

Mr. Brown, for making the toward movement, deserves the highest encomiums. No other man in the House had so much to lose or so much, consequently, to fear. He, all along, had offered to the then existing Government the most strenuous opposition—had held them up to gaze as the cause of all the misrule and oppressive measures of which we had to complain—and he was the leader in all this. To unite with these, even for the best of purposes, might endanger his position with his own party and be the means of endangering the cause he had espoused—and thus subjecting us to misrule for many years, or of hurling himself from the high pinnacle to which he had risen in the estimation of his party, and of Upper Canada generally.

And as, to all appearances, those with whom Mr. Brown now works are sincerely desirous of furthering the great ends of good government and our prosperity, and of creating a national and political unity out of the discordant elements, as well as create for us a remembrance and a name—and all this too at the risk of losing the people's confidence, because of apparent incongruities in the united corps—we say, in the hands of such patriots, we have nothing to fear. Should they, however, prove either incompetent for the duty assigned them, or unable to settle difficulties because of selfish or discordant principles, Canada has talent enough to take their places, and wisdom enough to force them to give place to better men. Besides, our statesmen have the accumulated wisdom of many centuries to aid in the present work. They have the rise and fall of Empires and Republics—the advantages and disadvantages of former and existing Governments—with the marks of strength or weakness in each—to guide them in a choice in the settlement of the important concerns that now engross the attention of our people. Hence we need not fear, nor have we anything at which to repine. We feel assured that we have done our duty, and can therefore, leave the rest in the hands of those to whom we have committed our affairs—nothing fearing but all will be well.

FRESH ARRIVALS.—Messrs. Strickland & Rogers announce in to-day's issue, the arrival of their Fall Stock. From the great care they take in selecting their goods, everything new for the season will be found, and at prices to defy competition.

JOHN MIGHT advertises his Harness business to-day; he has done business for the last thirty years in this town, and that he is still doing a large trade is a good guarantee that his work is substantial and gives general satisfaction. Shop: corner of George and Charlotte Streets.

TRENT DIVISION.

HON. MR. FLINT RE-ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION.

The Nomination for this Division took place on the 22nd instant, before the Court House, in this Town. The consequence was not as large as might have been had there been opposition expected. It rained heavily for some days that no man could be found willing to risk opposing Mr. Flint, therefore the Electors of the County did not turn out as they would have done. And it speaks well for Mr. Flint that year after year he has been increasing in favor with his constituents. By his uniformly kind and obliging manner towards all he has won their affection—so that no one could be found that would have had a shadow of success in opposing him.

Shortly after one o'clock, the Returning Officer, Sheriff Corbett, of Kingston—after reading the writ for holding the election—called upon those present to nominate a fit and proper person to represent the Division in the Legislative Council.

Elias Burnham, Esq., proposed the Hon. Billa Flint as a fit and proper person to represent the Division.

John Walton, Esq., seconded the nomination.

In consequence of no other candidate being proposed Mr. Flint was declared duly elected.

Mr. Flint, then, in a brief but common sense speech referred to the events that have lately transpired in the political arena, proving that no material change could be affected from any further appeal to the country. He (Mr. Flint) thought that every reasonable guarantee for the interest of each Province had been promised, and would be secured, and that the rights of each would be duly protected. He read extracts from manifestoes of the leaders of the Government in 1858 and of the Reform Convention in 1859, to show that the policy of both parties was, even at that period, tending towards the present proposed constitutional changes of to-day. He referred to the fact that during the last two sessions very little business came before them—hence he had had little to do—a vote being scarcely taken in three weeks. He remarked that the members of the Upper House were called "old grannies," and they did their business in much the same quiet way that old women talk over tea together. He was preparing himself for more devotedly attending to the public business than heretofore, and expressed his willingness to serve any of his constituents (of either party) in any capacity he could. He referred to the fact of his now being quietly chosen without opposition, and thought that in all probability, owing to his advanced age, (as he would, if spared to the close of the term of eight years, be about seventy) he would not seek to represent them again. He thanked the Electors for their confidence in him.

After three cheers for our Gracious Queen three for the Returning Officer, and three for Mr. Flint, each person turned his own way quietly.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

The excitement caused by the fever heat of Democrats and Republicans in reference to the coming election seems to engross more time and attention with our cousins than even the [illegible] White House and the [illegible] public purse for the next four years [illegible] nearer and closer than many are willing to admit. The present occupant [illegible] Lincoln, does not give satisfaction [illegible]—and while they, (the malcontents) may not be able to defeat him—yet the fact is that a strong vote is likely to be polled against him. The odds, however, are to all appearance against McClellan—unless some changes be effected in the war departments before the November elections. Since the capture of Atlanta the news has been very meagre. The monotony is again changed, however, and the Federals under Sheridan claim a great victory in the Shenandoah. Since the above, Gen. Sheridan has gained a second victory. The loss to the Confederates in the first engagement is estimated at from 10,000 to 3,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners. The latter figures will likely be nearest the truth. Sheridan is reported to have been reinforced by Gen. Grant who was lately at Washington, and also at Harpers Ferry, where he held a conference with Gen. Sheridan.

The Confederates managed to drive off Gen. Grant's entire herd of cattle from the vicinity of Harrison's Landing without much opposition, they are reported to have been recaptured, but this is not yet confirmed.

A great struggle may very soon be chronicled before Petersburgh. Both parties are making every effort, and are being strengthened by every available man and means at command.

AFFAIRS IN TEXAS.

In a late attack of the French against the Mexicans the French are said to have been repulsed, at this point the Confederate Gen. Ford, came up with a drove of cattle for the French army, attacked the Mexicans, but was driven back—their drove of cattle captured. Brownsville was captured by the Mexicans who hoisted the stars and stripes, and thus held it for the Federal Government. This may lead to complications more serious than anticipated just now.

CONFEDERATE PIRATES ON LAKE ERIE.

A considerable stir has been got up about Confederate raiders on Lake Erie with the ostensible design of freeing the Confederate prisoners on Johnson's Island. The leaders have been captured and will, in all probability, suffer the reward of such conduct. We are, however, inclined to view the whole as the work of half a dozen or a dozen southerners who may have come among us and wish to create a sensation. No great evil is likely to come to our neighbours from the Canada side. Canadians wish to be at peace with all men.

GEN. SHERMAN

has agreed to a truce for the exchange of prisoners which has already taken place to the amount of 40,000,—a little army itself. He has also agreed to listen to overtures for peace, but for this the people of the North are not yet prepared unless on their own terms.

Since writing the above we learn that some of the men engaged in the Lake Erie raid, and who had been arrested by the custom House authorities at Sandwich have been released. There was not sufficient legal authority for their detention.

FLOURING IN IRELAND.—The Irish complain that the Government will not accept their services as volunteers. "What," asks the Times, "would have been the fate of Belfast if its workmen had been armed by the thousand with the regulation Enfield, and had possessed Government ammunition at discretion to fire at each other?"

The Charlottetown Convention.

This meeting is now over, and the Canadians who attended (not formally but by permission) are returning if not returned to Quebec. The result of the Convention's deliberations we are unable to give or even opine. The whole proceedings were kept secret, except as the General Sec; but from the speeches delivered at the Halifax dinner, we gather a few gleanings, pointing in what direction they have proceeded. These for the utmost harmony of opinion seems to prevail. There does not appear a dissentient voice. The desirability of union is, we believe, held by all; the necessity for it conceded, and the wisdom of proceeding forthwith to the consummation of such union acknowledged. From the speeches of Messrs. Cartier, Brown and MacDonald, who spoke at considerable length, we gather more than from the other speeches, and it is a pleasing fact to record that there appears no discordance between them. The union proposed is for every purpose by which a people are generally effected. Enlarged commerce, protection against invasion, increased civil and political prosperity, and the strengthening and consolidating the continuance of our connexion with the mother country, are the greatest benefits which can accrue from the union, and these appear to have engaged no small part of the speaker's attention. Some of the things promised is a settlement of our local difficulties, which have driven us to take the step now taken, the opening up of the whole provinces for settlement, enlarging our trade and manufactures, and increasing our facilities and capabilities. One thing conceded, is the necessity for Intercommunication, and for this purpose the Intercolonial Railroad will be, no doubt, immediately constructed as soon as the terms of union are settled. For the construction of this road the Canadian delegates intimated a willingness to pay the heavy part, population to be the basis of costs. Everything in the meantime augurs well, and in a very short time we may realize the consummation of our highest wishes, and may be able to chronicle the fact that British America has emerged from obscurity into a nation whose influence will be felt and wooed.

The Lady's Friend for October.

"Peep," a beautifully executed steel engraving of a mother and her little girl, opens this number of THE LADY'S FRIEND. The double steel Fashion Plate is also as rich and elegant as usual. Then follow the numerous engravings—some particularly excellent—illustrating the new modes for ladies and children. The music for this number is a new song called "I love thee, dearly love thee"—a popular sentiment, as all will admit. Among the literary contributions we note "Scatter Blessings," by Minnie May; "Two Years Lost," by Emma B. Ripley; "Life is Good," by Miss Annie F. Kent; "The Imported Hen," a comical sketch by H. W. S.; "A Turn in Fortune's Wheel," by Mrs. Hosmer; "Why I didn't Marry Grant Heuson," by Ida Mason (it strikes us that Ida was a little hard on Frank); "Castles in the Air," by Mrs. Anna Bache; "Missionary Work" (in the matrimonial line we see this is), by Frances Lee, &c. &c. Of course there is the usual Work Table, Receipts and Editorials. Price $2.50 a year—two copies $4.00, nine for $10.00, twenty-one for $20.00. Single number 25 cents. Address, Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

MADAM ANNA BISHOP has been making a very successful tour in the lower province since she visited Peterboro. By our exchanges we see that she gave a grand concert on the occasion of the dedication of the new Town Hall at Perth where there were 800 people present. At the Ottawa Theatre and Montreal Theatres, she had crowded houses. At Quebec she gave several concerts under the patronage of His Excellency the Governor General, when at Brockville she was at the dedication of the new Town Hall, where crowds of people went to hear her.

As she closes her tour in Canada on the 15th of October, this last opportunity should not be lost to hear the world renowned cantatrice. An entire change of programme on this occasion. See advertisement in another column.

SAD ACCIDENT.—We regret to have to chronicle the sad death of a little girl of about five years, the daughter of Mr. Andrew Douglas, of this town. On Monday afternoon last she was playing in company with some other children, and went into a neighbors house, where a pail of hot water was standing on the floor, which was to have been used for some domestic purpose. This little girl was walking backwards, ignorant of the pail being there at the time, and fell backwards into it, and, doubling up in the pail, was unable to extricate herself therefrom. A physician was immediately sent for, but all to no avail. The accident happened about five o'clock in the afternoon,—from that time until twelve she was insensible—when death came to her relief.

WE understand P. L. S. Beatty, appointed to examine the Bobcaygeon Road, with a view to repairs by the Government, is now energetically pursuing his labours. He is accompanied by the Representative of the County, F. W. Canada Land and Emigration Company.

The following extract, relating to the half-yearly meeting of the above named Company is taken from the Circular issued by the Canadian Steamship "Bienville."

"The half-yearly meeting of this Company was held on the 14th at the office, Gresham House, London, Mr. Haliburton, M. P., presiding. The report of the directors was submitted to the meeting. It stated that with the view of bringing to a close the negotiations with the Provincial Government, and generally examining into the affairs of the company there, Mr. Montgomerie, one of the board, had left London for Canada shortly after the issue of the last report. Before he reached Quebec, the resignation of the Canadian ministry had caused another change in the Crown Lands Department, and the new commissioner, the Hon. Alexander Campbell very naturally declined to pledge himself to any particular course of action towards the company, until he should have an opportunity of thoroughly examining the several questions at issue. Mr. Campbell, however, went very fully into these matters with Mr. Montgomerie, and promised that their settlement should have his full attention as soon as the close of the parliamentary session would permit. On an examination of the various books of account kept at the Toronto office, Mr. Montgomerie found reason to be much dissatisfied with their want of clearness and accuracy; tasks arising entirely, it should be stated from the inefficiency of the party employed as accountant, and in no degree from any desire or design to mislead. The party in question had been dismissed, and the principal books re-written from the commencement. The local board, in concert with Mr. Montgomerie, appointed in April Mr. C. Russell Stewart as the resident agent of the company at Haliburton; and Mr. Miles, who was re-appointed general surveyor, also undertook to establish his office in the township of Dysart. From the co-operation of Messrs. Miles and Stewart in the company's settlements the directors anticipated the most useful results. By a circular issued in May last, the shareholders would have learned that the directors, acting upon the resolution passed at last general meeting, had fixed the rate of interest for the previous year at 3 per cent. and such interest had been paid accordingly. For reasons explained in the circular of the 30th day of April, the call of £1 per share, referred to in the last report, had not been made in full, but had been limited to 10s, and until the final settlement with the government of the balance that may be found to be due on the purchase of the land, the remaining 10s would not be required. A considerable portion of the call had been placed out at interest. Since the annual general meeting of the company, Mr. H. Farquhar had resigned his seat at the board, and the directors did not propose at present to fill up the vacancy so created. The directors, in a postscript, stated that their negotiations with the government had been settled, and that the result would be stated at the meeting. The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report commented very strongly on the conduct of the Canadian government, which had been characterised by the most unbusiness-like proceedings. The arrangements now made were not so satisfactory as he desired, but at any rate they had got over a great difficulty, and now knew what they were about. Mr. Montgomerie seconded the resolution, and in so doing detailed at some length the results of his visit to Canada and the present position of the company, which he thought very satisfactory. The cost of the purchase of the land had been £44,124. Mr. Stewart hoped the board would now turn its attention to the emigration department, upon the proper development of which depended much of the success of the company. The report was adopted, and the proceedings concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman."

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—A correspondent of the Review signing himself "A Subscriber" to the Sabbath School building which, by the liberality of the people of Peterborough, I put on the St. Andrew's Church lot, request me to give the public a detailed statement of how the amount was expended.

I am sorry to have to inform that "Subscriber" that the names of all the subscribers are not yet given; and I am still more sorry to have to state the reason why they are not all given is that the subscriptions are not yet all paid.

The following general statement must suffice for the public at present:

Total cost, about	$320
Paid on it,	313
Unpaid,	7
Subscribed towards it,	257
Subscriptions paid,	240
Advanced by me, besides my subscriptions,	73
Subscriptions unpaid,	57
Total debt, about	80

The subscriptions unpaid are largely owing by the parties now in possession of St. Andrew's Church, who have refused to pay them—and hence the delay. But, meantime, "A Subscriber" may see the accounts, if so disposed, at my house.

On the other hand, it is right to state that of the $73 a liberal subscriber offers to cancel $16, which I owe him—and yet he has no interest in the building, but that of regard for the spiritual welfare of the young.

Permit me at the same time to return my sincere thanks to those faithful members of my congregation, who in place of the stipend promised me, of which I have been unjustly deprived, have honorably paid me their seat rents and subscriptions for 1864. "$12,—D. McNaughton, Messrs. Johnston & Co.—L. Glover; $8,—T. Menzies; $6,—Hislop Brothers, W. Armot, W. Swanston; $5,—H. T. Evans, D. McDonald Jr.; $4,—Wm. Mercer, F. P. Blair Sr., R. Renfrew; $3,—R. Fitzgerald, S. Redpath, Adam Brown; $2,—Mrs. Craigie.

I may also state that the following subscriptions have been received towards the Sabbath School building: $5, W. Lundy; $2.50, Dr. Pringle. Also, articles: S. Fitzgerald, R. Fitzgerald, Jas. Reid, W. Kennedy.

I have no wish to obtrude my affairs unnecessarily before the public, but I trust you will grant me a place for these explanations which concern the public generally—and which the Review may copy, if so inclined—and oblige, Mr. Editor,

Yours, gratefully,

JAMES S. DOUGLAS.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In the last Review we are told that "Mr. White is still the Editor of that Journal," and that the articles "that I noticed last week," "are the production of his pen." So much the worse that a gentleman of his standing and ability should so far forget himself as to insult the Protestant Electors of this county, as he has done. The truths in the articles in question—both those administered to the Review, and those told about the Catholic Electors, I did not find fault with, not indeed, did do more than merely mention. I was "strongly exercised" as the writers lack of truth about the Protestant Electors. The correspondence has done so much good as to throw the blame on the previous Editor, and not on the one Dame rumour had it, whose recent removal into town, was in consequence, partly of his connection with the Review.

I am Sir,

Yours truly,

A PROTESTANT ELECTOR.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

A terrible accident occurred on the Pennsylvania Central railroad on Thursday morning last. The fast line train going eastward, which left Pittsburg at 8.40 on Wednesday night, ran into the rear end of a freight train on the eastward track at Hollidaysburg station, Juniata Co., Pa., at 4.00 in the morning. The passenger train and standing at the usual speed when the accident occurred. The engine was demolished and the greater portion of the train was badly wrecked. The baggage car was driven into the front of the passenger car, took fire from the overthrowing of a stove, and with three passenger cars was destroyed. The forward car, in which the loss was greatest, contained about 60 passengers, and but seven or eight are known to have escaped. The doors of the car were locked. It was crowded, and partly covered with ice a week of the baggage wagon. The fire in the baggage car communicated to the passenger car, and caused the explosion of the gas receiver. The car was burned up and all on board killed that only the charred remains could be found, which were beyond identification. The conductor was recognized by his keys. Six or seven who still lived were in such physical agony, nothing could be gained from them. The passengers in the third and fourth cars were saved without injury, but the cars themselves were burned. It is thought the lives might have been saved if the doors had not been locked.

THE CHAUDIERE GOLD MINES.—Mr. E H Murney, writing from Quebec to the Belleville Chronicle respecting the Chaudiere gold mines says:—"The diggings on the Gilbert still continue to be very remunerative, and the general yield constantly increasing. Nuggets from 6 to 8 ounces in weight are frequently being found. It is said that since the 15th of June the yield amongst about 300 miners have been from $1,200 to $1,400 per day. Some days the yield has been as high as $3,000. A discovery of far more importance than the alluvial diggings has been made within the last month: an assay was made in New York of some samples of quartz from some mines near the Chaudiere river, and they gave a result $15 in gold, and $22 in silver, or $37 of both metals to the ton, which is very rich. A company is about commencing immediate operations for taking out quartz this fall and winter, and will have a large mill ready for working in the spring. This discovery will cause more attention to be paid to the numerous quartz veins which run through the gold formation, and the consequence will be that before long there will be a good deal of permanent gold mining."

British Columbia and Vancouver Island.

LECTURE BY REV. LACHLAN TAYLOR.

(From the Guelph Advertiser.)

On Thursday night last we had the pleasure of listening to a very instructive lecture by the Rev. Lachlan Taylor, on "British Columbia, Vancouver Island and portions of the neighbouring Islands, British Columbia, and the Gold Fields of Cariboo."

The lecturer began by illustrating the power accruing to England by her colonies. If they were rendered useless, or she was deprived of them, what a change it would make in her power. To give an idea of the gross extent of our colonies, he said, three of them together were more than twice as large as the entire size of Europe, and the same three colonies were more than two and a half times as large as the United States. Mr. Taylor then passed on to the subject of his lecture, and among other things gave the following interesting facts connected with the subjects: Vancouver Island had three different kinds of soil—gravelly, second loamy, and deep black, the last requiring draining—and the average yield being as follows: wheat 25 to 30 bushels per acre; oats 40 per acre; barley from 20 to 40; potatoes 200 per acre, and not excelled in quality in the world. All fruit trees bear profusely, and the fruit is of the finest quality. The wild flowers he had never seen equalled, except in Palestine. Fish and fowl were in abundance, ducks, especially, were in millions. They had organized an Agricultural and an Horticultural Society, and the samples shown at their first exhibition would do credit to any of the older colonies. Mr. Davidson's Lake Valley Farm, of 1,700 acres, 2,000 feet above the level of the sea, and a little above 52 degrees north latitude, was the best in the entire Province of British Columbia. Mr. Davidson had raised from his own farm in 1863—barley, two hundred thousand pounds, which he said he could sell at wholesale at 16 cents per lb., realising $32,000; oats 720 bushels at $8 per bushel, $7,550; cabbages, 1,000 heads, averaging 8 lbs. per head at 25 cents per lb., $20,000, making the gross receipts for the three articles, $36,760. The lecturer was on the spot at the time, and received the statement from Mr. Davidson's own lips. Of course all kinds of farming labor ruled at very high prices, and the expenses were to be deducted after from the gross amount. The lecturer also stated that it was his opinion that not one-hundredth part of British Columbia is arable or fit for cultivation. The trees and timber of Vancouver Island do not embrace as many varieties as our own Canada, but in quality, especially the Douglas Pine, are not second to any for timber in the world. France, Spain, Sardinia, and Holland, as well as Great Britain, have all already received masts and spars from the Island; and the test in the French dockyard at Toulin, between the Douglas and the best Riga or Baltic Pine, resulted in favor of the former. A spar 242 feet long was got out for the exhibition of 1862, but not sent; sections of a Douglas Pine 309 feet long were exhibited at the World's Fair. The magnificent flagstaff in the famous Kew Gardens, London, was a spar sent from Vancouver Island, and the last Cunard steamer, the Cuba, launched in the yard of Messrs. Todd and McGregor, on the Clyde, has been supplied with masts from that Island. The Coal Fields, 70 miles north of Victoria, are the best discovered on the Pacific. Copper is found in abundance, as well as gold. The mines alone are the foundation on which the future prosperity of Vancouver Island must rest. The building material is first class. With the exception of Egypt, he had never seen so many fowls and fish as he saw in Vancouver Island. Salmon was there in millions. But as rich as the island is in fish and game, its mineral productions are such that the former could not be compared to the latter. In the spring of 1858 gold was discovered on the Fraser River. Victoria, the capital of the Island, then sprang into existence, and this town so quickly grew in extent, that in its third year 50 beautiful brick buildings were built in twelve months. It was one of the prettiest towns [illegible] seen in a British colony. The best buildings there had been superintended in the erection by Mr. John Wright, formerly of Guelph, who could come back to a year or two a very rich man, as he was accumulating money very fast. Eighteen per annum was the lowest rate of interest paid, and during his visit there he was offered two per cent. per month. Victoria has several good churches and a school-house, an hospital, and five companies. In winter its population was 7,000, and about 5,000 in summer. Its exports in 1862 were $3,679,328 and in gold alone during that year its exports were $2,167,185. They had two daily morning papers and a little evening daily. The lecturer next spoke of Cariboo. He said it was a land of mountains; that wherever you turned you found rugged rocks, gloomy valleys, and picturesque waterfalls. While standing on one of those mountains there was presented to him the most sublime sight he ever witnessed—below him he could see the landscape for a distance of 100 miles. Going to the mines you had miles of mud, brambles and logs, which the stoutest heart found it hard to overcome. To gold alone British Columbia owned its existence as a colony. The first creek that yielded largely was Antler Creek, in 1861, which produced for some time $10,000 a day. In the same year Williams Creek began to yield, and from a space of 80 by 25 feet in Steel's claim there was washed out £21,000 sterling. The largest amount taken out by one company in a day in 1862 was in Cunningham's Claim, viz: $9,050; but in 1863 the Curry and Diller claim left this far in the distance, 120 lbs weight having been taken out by one drifter in a day, which was worth $17,584. The three partners in the Curry and Diller claim divided $0,000 to each partner, after all expenses were paid, from three hundred feet of ground. The Watty claim of 100 feet, owned by J. A. Cameron, yielded from the 1st of June to the 1st of October, 1863, over $170,000, and Cameron, who was the fortunate owner, and possessed three or four other claims, obtained in the season over 600 lbs weight of gold. These were instances of those who had been successful, but thousands of cases could be mentioned where men had toiled for three or four years and had lost everything they possessed. He instanced Mr. Holt, a carpenter of Guelph, who with others, had sunk over $30,000 in the Cariboo claim without securing anything. Mr. Taylor next spoke of the state of society in Cariboo. The men are lost to every sense of morality, Sunday being the day chosen by them for buying their provisions for the week and for sharpening their tools. He had never heard profanity carried to such a fearful extent as he had there. Gambling was continually going on, Saturday and Sunday, as high as $20,000 being staked at one time. While there he had preached to 300 people in a building that was intended for a gambling hall. The roughest of those who were moved to tears by his appeal to them. Bad as they were he never had a hard word from one of them. He next alluded to the proposed railway to British Columbia, and said he hoped to enjoy a good railway ride with the Hon. George Brown from Halifax to New Westminster. He feared, however, that time would be far distant unless they could get John Bull waked up, as it was he alone who could furnish the money required to carry that object. The whole distance it would have to run is 2,234 miles, and the cost of construction, at a rough estimate, would be $100,000,000. He said it was a lasting disgrace to the Canadian government that the settlers of Red River should so long have been left isolated.

THE enlistment of seamen at Calcutta for the Federal cause in America, has attracted the notice of the authorities there, who are on the watch for the detention of some Federal agents who are believed to have already freighted one ship for the Northern States with unemployed sailors.

FREEMASONARY was first known in England in 944, and was forbidden in 1424; tolerated in 1502, and excommunicated in 1533. The Charity of Freemasons was established 1788. The Grand Lodge of England was founded 1717; of Ireland 1730. Freemason's Hall, Great Queen Street, was built in the year 1776.

THE NEW YORK STATE FAIR.

The Rochester correspondent of the New York Herald writes on the 23rd:—

If the earth had real enjoyment for people would read the narrative of such gatherings with avidity, but the earth is a cold way of from any such flesh like condition and we all rush to the ballots that take us that we have successfully killed egg plants, and read wonders of the competitive which these societies exert in the art of reviving Mose. What is the use of a night over it. In our fever we are deranged, and as we are all so, it is common madness and we are all equal. The agriculturists will have their sweet revenge, for "the soldier tired of war's alarms" will read the "Transactions."

The cattle shown at this are better than at any precedent one. There is then just what the society has struggled through its long years to attain. We have a better and a richer food. If our friends the butchers do show very large figures—if they persist in considering the markets as Dr. Franklin did the carving out the President's chair, as a rising sun, let us be satisfied. They cut up better beeves for us, as the Durhams are infusing their noble qualities over all the States. If this judgment about the kind of cattle is considered rash, let it be palliated by the fact that it is avouched by those who watch every movement of the bovines. I write, therefore, "by authority."

There is an extraordinary hay press here, the effects of which, it is claimed and apparently admitted, will be to effect a revolution in the feeding of stock, as it will make it the object in interest of the producer to send his straw to the better market of the cities, as it gives the product the package in which transportation will be safe and cheap. Of course the inestimable market of the great city is never satisfied, and it accepts all. The genius of our people already anticipates, and think it sees, as well the danger and the remedy, and predicts that, in second come the West will yet make itself easily independent. This is a very practical question, for although Patrick Henry did ridicule the army contractors for calling for beef so relentlessly, the people utter the same cry with the rising of every morning sun.

The horses are in large numbers and in admirable rank and excellence. If the Confederates were within a few miles of us, it would tempt them to a raid—that is, if they could forget the stout hearts and hands that are ready to guard—but, waiving all that, these animals are in such aggregate as to prove that the necessities of the nation in this respect have been in the consideration of practical men—as that we shall wrest for the "fleet steeds that flew," as Lochinvar said. In all these departments the gratifying fact is in general excellence. The whole status has advanced.

There is a ship in model here that was made by a young man who never saw ocean or ship but who was attracted by the notice in the press of one of our New York clippers, and from his detailed measurements made this beautiful fabric. His work attracted the attention of the Hon. Mr. Cornell, and he made the artificer comfortable.

There is a curious ladder here which is a specimen of the upending ingenuity of our people. It begins short and ends tall—pulling itself up in a successive lengthening that would be mysterious in any other land than this young one, where we are all rising.

And the fair is thronged with the ingenuities of the Americans, restless to do something that has not been done. They do the new thing, but, like the Athenians, are they content only to hear it?

It is a grand fair, and proves the invaluable worth of this society, which thus far in its most useful life has known no politics,—has known only the duty of encouraging the culture of the earth.

A FEMALE VAMPIRE.—Livingston, the Rebel spy, was executed at St. Louis on Friday last. The Democrat relates the following incident; "At an early hour the jail was visited by the inevitable Elisabeth Mund, the superstitious Swiss woman, who is afflicted with a 'dancing of the heart,' and believes that she can be cured by sucking the blood of a man who has been hanged. She implored Marshal Coff, with tears in her eyes (she has but one), to allow her to enter the jail yard and obtain a few drops of Livingston's blood. The marshall, remembering her violent demonstrations at the execution of Hanson, told her she would be allowed to come in at twelve o'clock, when she could get as much blood as she wanted. The vampire departed, promising to be back punctually at twelve. When she returned, however, the execution was over, and, for the fifth or sixth time, Mrs. Mund was disappointed."

WEE JOCKYDAIDLES.

Wee Jockydaidles,
Toddlin' out an in';
O bonnie-o curlie,
Mithers' darlin'!
Aye me for' o' mischief,
An' minds on what I say;
My very heart gangs lowp, lowp,
Fifty times a day!

Wee Jockydaidles—
Where's the stampie noo?
She's tumblin' i' the cadgie,
An' knockin' her tha pat!
Noo she eats my sugary bi'o,
An' aff she's like a hare!
Lassie, when I get ye,
I'll reesle ye till ye spair!

Wee Jockydaidles—
Noo she's brakin' dishes—
Noo she's upsides i' the byre,
Chasin' hens an' kye!
Noo she's i' the berryard,
Playin' wi' the Seals;
Feedin' them wi' butter-cakes,
Sangs, an' cuddie tasks.

Wee Jockydaidles—
My heart's quite tashie!
She's tore my tartan auld mitsey,
To mak' a dolly's frock—
There's the goblet cuppy the flee!
The joint o' the wool may sha!
No a tattie ready yet,
And faither comin' in!

Wee Jockydaidles—
Wha's ane tried as me!
See! the hastie's doon at last!
Wasse me for my ten!
O it's angrycome, aweel,
An' cuss'd mak' me gray;
My very heart gangs lowp, lowp,
Fifty times a day!

Wee Jockydaidles—
Where's the smeukie noo?
She's biddin' i' the coal-hole,
Cryin' "Keekyu!"—
Noo she's at the fireside
Pullin' puggy's tail—
Noo she's on the brpun bowl,
Slippin' a' the hail!

Wee Jockydaidles,
Paddlin' i' the shower—
There she's at the windy!
Hand her, or she's oure—
Noo she's slippit free my sight:
Where's the wean at last!
Is the tyre among the kye
Bleezin' sowe' an' tast!

Wee Jockydaidles—
For a' ye gie me pain,
Ye're aye my darlin' tottie yet—
My ain we wean!
An' gin I'm spared to ither days—
O may they come to pass!—
I'll see my bonnie bairnie

I DON'T DANCE.—A plain, unlettered man from the back country, in the State of Alabama, came up to Tuscaloosa, and went to church. He selected a convenient slip and waited patiently the assembling of the congregation. Presently the music of a full toned organ burst upon his astonished ear; he had never heard one before. At the same time, the gentleman who owned the slip came up the aisle, with his wife leaning upon his arm. As he approached the door of the slip, he beckoned the stranger to give place to the lady. The movement he did not comprehend, and from the situation of the gentleman and lady, associated as it was in his mind with music, he immediately concluded that a cotillion or French contra dance, or some other dance was intended; rising partly from his seat, he said; "Excuse me my—excuse me, if you please, I don't dance!"

A FAIR OFFER.—A veteran relates the following:—It once happened that a mule driver was engaged in loading an unruly mule for a short distance, which job proved about as much as he was able to do, and gave full employment for both of his hands. As he was thus engaged, a newly appointed Brigadier rode by, near him, in all the consequential radiance of star-light, when the mule driver hailed him as follows—"I say, I wish that you would send a couple of men down here, to help to manage this mule. The Brigadier, indignant at being so familiarly addressed, sternly inquired; Do you know who I am, Sir? Yes, was the reply, you are General——, I believe. Then why do you not salute me, before addressing me? inquired the brigadier. I will responded M. D. if you will get off and hold the mule. The brigadier retired in good order.

WIT FROM THE PULPIT.—It is related of a certain New England divine who flourished not many years ago, and whose matrimonial relations were composed (but to be of the most agreeable kind, that one Sabbath morning, while reading to his congregation the parable of the Supper, in which occurs this passage: "And another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them; I pray thee, have me excused. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore cannot come,"—he suddenly paused at the end of this verse, drew off his spectacles, and looking round on his hearers, said with emphasis:

"The fact is, my brethren, one would as soon draw a man farther from the kingdom of heaven than five yoke of oxen!"

A rumbstone cutter, contracted the motto, "Let her rest in peace," for want of space, and it stood, "Let her r. i. p."

"I'll commit you—you've a nuisance," said a Justice to a noisy fellow in court." "No body has a right to commit a nuisance," was the cool reply.

Why would a watchmaker be invaluable in a nursery? Because it is always pushing and four pulling to a hand.

A thief brought before a justice of the peace in Vermont, charged with some petty offence, pleaded guilty and was fined severely. I should have made a considerable figure in the world, Judge, said he, if I hadn't been a fool; it's a dreadful pull back to a start.

One of the theories of the Court of Frederick the Great said to the King, "Sire, there is in that pan, cake are so glutton already will cook for new fame?" "Madam," he replied, "for the same reason that you, although on diamonds, still wear rags."

Why don't you put on a silken shirt? said a swell the other night to a companion, "then the girls will run to cut you as they do on me."—"I frequently can't afford to buy a clean shirt, and I don't like to run the risk," was the reply. "Why not if" asked another cobber? "Because, said the other, if everybody's mother isn't a washerwoman."

A beggar posted himself at the door of the Chancery Court, and kept saying: "A penny, please, sir! Only one penny, sir, before your client!"

"Shut up, you," my man!" roared an old attorney passing.

"I promise, sir, the client will not have one when you come out," was the beggar's reply.

H. CALCUTT'S

Compound

Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubiar Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Ontario, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer sourcing. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital and influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

PATENT WATER-DRAWER!

AT BLYTHE MILLS.

You must remember that by buying one of my Water-drawers, you get your water pure, which you cannot do by a suction Pump. I warrant them NOT TO FREEZE, and to stand as long, if not longer, than any Pump; and, besides, you save over fifty per cent. I can sell them cheaper than any Pump-maker in Canada! If anything goes astray by fair play within one year from the time of purchase, I bind myself to re-place it; so you cannot be deceived. Now, any one who is in need of a Pump would do well to get one of my Water-drawers at once. I have two teams out at all times to deliver them, and persons residing at a distance will receive prompt attention by sending a letter to the undersigned

Mr. Henry R. Gray,
Chemist, Montreal.

Sir,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, having accidentally got a needle run under her finger nail. The pain was most intense; but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone in a few minutes.

Yours very respectfully,

W. GIBSON.

Messrs. Henry & Co.

Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

W. BALDWIN.

N. H. DOWN'S VEGETABLE BALSAMIC ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE

WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt.,
Nov. 24th, 1858.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending, indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.

Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS,
COLDS,
CATARRH,
ASTHMA,
CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases "to which flesh is heir," originate from colds, no this may be considered in general preventative of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

ADULTS

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

Holloway's Pills,

Be of Good Cheer! The Sinking may be Saved!

BY THE USE OF

Holloway's Ointment.

THE history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact that ointments, when rightly prepared, have internal diseases entire, the disinfecting, searching and healing properties of the Pills are fully equal to its subjection and cure, and that, with the Ointment, they are

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history written by open eyes, but is even derived from the experience of one victim. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the sick of every country—an unimpeachable record, the like of which has never been collected in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, Well Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a standing medicine to meet the ills and necessities of [illegible] humanity, and one entirely free from [illegible] and other deleterious [illegible], was felt till this all powerful medicine was ushered into the world; HOLLOWAY'S INVALUABLE PILLS have become the recognized remedy of all nations. Their attribute is to PURIFY as well as to cure; they attack the BLOOD on most of the complaint, and thus, by removing the blighted cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the drooping energies of the system, enabling nature to her task of vital and SUBSTANTIAL REFORMATION.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the opposite of the PILLS? They

THE TRAVELLER'S REVENGE.

In the autumn of 1[illegible]2, while the woods were bright with variegated hues which hollow the light touches upon early frost, a mounted traveller was quietly wending his way through a dark lonely forest, in the western part of the State of New York.—He was descending a hill into a gloomy looking valley, through which flowed a shallow but swift running stream; and on reaching the water, he permitted his horse to stop and drink.

At that moment a man came out of a cluster of bushes into the road or bosse path on the other side of the stream.

This man was dressed like a hunter, and carried a rifle on his shoulder. In his general appearance there was nothing that indicated hostility or wicked design. He was of medium size, compactly built, with intellectual features, and a certain air of gentility—seeming rather as one abroad to some settlement for a day's sport than as professional hunter. All this the mounted traveller carefully noted before he crossed the stream to continue his journey, and when they came near together a pleasant salutation was exchanged.

'Fine weather for travelling, sir,' remarked the man with a gun.

'And for the hunting also, I should suppose,' said the other on the horse.

'Yes: there's game enough,' replied the other; 'but I'm not a good hunter, and can only show one deer for my day's work, thus far, and that is almost useless to me, because I have no means to take it away. I would willingly give a dollar for the use of a horse like yours for a couple of hours. If you could spare five minutes or so, I would like you to see the bear. It is only just behind those bushes, some two hundred yards from here.'

'I will not only look at it, but if it is not too heavy, I will carry it for you, seeing that I am mounted and you are on foot,' replied the traveller, dismounting and fastening his horse.

The hunter thanked him pleasantly, and then, as if to make himself agreeable and keep up the conversation, inquired where he was from, whither journeying and so forth, and learned in reply that the latter resided in Albany, and was a merchant in good business, and was travelling partly with the view of making an extensive land purchase for future speculation.

'Well, here we are!' exclaimed the hunter, as the two emerged from the thicket, through which they had slowly forced their way, into more opened wood; 'there we are! and I now will show you as fine and fat a beast as you ever saw.'

He stepped back some eight or ten feet, deliberately raised the piece to his shoulder, and pointed the muzzle directly at the head of the traveller. There was a flash, a loud report, and the victim fell like a log, his face covered with blood.

This might or might not have been the first crime committed by the man with the rifle. But as the traveller fell the rifle slipped from his hands and he shook violently from head to foot; yet he ran to his victim and hurriedly robbed him of his purse, a pocket book, a gold watch and chain, and some curious seals, a diamond breast pin, and a diamond ring, which he fairly tore off from his finger. He then dragged his body into the thicket, picked up his rifle, and plunged madly through the bushes to the road, mounted the horse, and dashed away from that terrible scene.

We must now suppose a lapse of twenty years.

In the Spring of 18[illegible], there lived in the city of New York, a banker and millionaire whom we shall call Edward Stephens. He owned a palatial mansion splendidly furnished, in the very heart of the town, and he and his wife were among the leaders of the fashionable world. They had a beautiful daughter just turned sixteen, who was just about to be married to a foreign nobleman, and great preparations were being made for that event.

One day about this period as the great banker stood conversing with a gentleman [illegible] see him on business, [illegible] suddenly turn pale [illegible] He [illegible] am not guilty of murder—more [illegible] but [illegible] the [illegible] surroundings of wealth! [illegible] and [illegible] I have never been able to tell how I was tempted to [illegible] nature, by that fearful occasion. [illegible] do with me what you will—only [illegible] you in be merciful to my innocent family.'

'I forgive you!' returned the other, extending his hand. 'I forgive you. You have been fearfully punished already, and as God has seen proper to preserve us both, [illegible]

It was perhaps a week from this, that one night the [illegible] was unusually restless. He would lie [illegible] and endeavor to sleep, but [illegible] a panic, caused into the [illegible] and [illegible] ye words into [illegible] and [illegible] deadly [illegible] and trembled as the [illegible] rattled.

He loathed the note—worked one hand [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] into [illegible] by [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] drown the [illegible] utterance [illegible]

'Then he is waiting?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Very well; show him in.'

Soon there was a light tap on the door, and the banker said 'come in,' in an ordinary tone.

The stranger opened the door, advanced a few paces, and immediately withdrew. The latter was a man [illegible] and [illegible] with appearance and [illegible] attire. He [illegible] with [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] a chairman of the [illegible]

'Mr. Edward Vail, I believe?' was the brief reply.

'You got the note, and of course you know my business.'

'You allude to the, I suppose,' returned the latter, producing the letter which had caused him so much [illegible] before.

'Yes [illegible]

'I do not understand it—[illegible] must have made a mistake.'

THE "REVIEW" AND COLONEL MAULTAIN.

Our Toronto [illegible] Tuesday, is reviewing the late Bathurst visit:—"the return of Col. Maultain and defeat of Mr. Perry—endeavors to comfort himself as best he can. That he required a little cheering no one doubted, and that he should try to make the best of the [illegible] was natural. But our view of these [illegible] does not coincide with our neighbors and; on the contrary, we rejoice to see that somebody can joy themselves. Had the [illegible] of the Review contented himself with mention of fact, without misrepresentation, we would have nothing of which to complain—and, therefore, would have left him alone in his glory. But, not only has he declared what is not true, but experience to reiterate what must have been a mutual disappointment to his own, if it really true. To allow him to pass unnoticed and uncontradicted would be an act of injustice to the Member for this County, whose character the Editor of that paper ought to respect; and one silence might be construed into a tacit acknowledgment on our part of the base assertions which we are entitled, had no foundation except in the fertile mind of the Editor of the Review.

His assertion that Col. Maultain pledged himself publicly and privately, in the most solemn manner, to support the Government and to support the Upper Canadian leader of it, the Hon. J. S. Macdonald, is a wilful misrepresentation of Col. Maultain's position and is entirely without foundation, and is not supported or implied either in his address or public speeches; and no one can be found after most diligent enquiry who heard these private pledges to support J. A. Macdonald, individually. In the last issue, but one, of the Review, Col. Maultain denies the assertion; and still, he doubly call upon the Editor to show when, where, or to whom these pledges were made—until he does that we must consider them as the mere outbursts of mental agony in a moment of severe suffering of body or mind.

In Col. Maultain's address, speaking of the present Coalition Administration, he says:—"It has my entire approval; and "should the forthcoming election result fav- "orably to myself, I am prepared to give the "present Administration my cordial support "in carrying out the important objects for "which it has been formed." Here we find he pledges himself to give the present Administration a cordial support in carrying out the important objects for which it was formed; but we find no reference made to any individual of the Government, much less any reference to J. A. Macdonald. Besides, the pledges refer to the carrying out of the objects for which the present Coalition has been formed—without which, it is plain, these pledges are not binding. Every sane mind must at once see that there is a great difference between promising to support a Government and promising to support the individuals or any individual in that Government. No man, by uniting himself with a society, thereby becomes bound to support the individual members, apart from the principles of the society; nor does he thereby pledge himself to anything but the principles of union or bond of such compact. So in this case, Col. Maultain is not bound to support persons but principles; but as J. A. Macdonald has united himself with those in whom he (Col. Maultain) has confidence, during such Coalition, he will be supported, because of these principles. He is not, therefore, pledged to George Brown any more than to J. A. Macdonald, nor J. A. Macdonald any more than to George Brown. As well might it be said that the Editor of the Review has deserted Conservative ranks and joined the Grits, because, forsooth, he now advocates the present Government, of which George Brown is a member—but we know he would scout at such an idea;—yet it is just as reasonable to say he is pledged solemnly to support George Brown as to say Colonel Maultain is pledged to support J. A. Macdonald.

Concerning private pledges, we are assured there have been none. The private pledges referred to by the Review are of the same character as the public ones, and will be revealed by the Colonel himself. They will be found as broad as the public ones, as we have seen these pledges in manuscript, signed by the Hon. Sidney Smith. They have no reference to J. A. Macdonald, only as a member of the present coalition government, and are therefore of the same force and form as the public ones. Our readers will see them next week. The magnified significance of Col. Maultain's silence at the hustings the Editor of the Review would also have us consider as a proof of his pledges to support Mr. MacDonald, but nothing is more easy to account for than such silence. In the confusion and bustle of such occasions many things pass unheard. Many things too, are misheard which are considered most flourishes of oratory, and thus pass off, as a matter of course, which anyone expects to answer, or imagines require an answer. Besides, as Mr. Smith had already agreed to support Col. Maultain, it is presumed he (Mr. S.) had had an understanding with the Col. before he committed himself to support him, and, therefore, there would be good reason why Mr. Smith's pause and question should be overshadowed in a flourish of trumpets and no more. This private understanding will be forthcoming in due time, and then we will find it in the Review that has been guilty of misrepresentation, in order to damage, if possible, his opponent, and malign his character because he chooses to hold views contrary to the would be dictum of that paper.

We regret very much that the moral character of our public men should be so assailed on every political difference that arises. Must their characters be tried and condemned by political opponents who, perchance, practice bribery of morality but the name; by opponents who may be devoid of moral principles themselves, and ever delighted to smash out of those principles in others which they themselves never possessed. The moral character of the worthy member for this county needs no advocacy from us. It stands second to none in the country, and he who tries to separate it, thereby only exhibits the character of the great enemy of true morality, who ever delights in traveling religious channels, and that more especially where it is found in the most eminent degree.

A BARING ROBBERY.

Our Town and neighboring villages are booming concerning a robbery of late. It is only a week or [illegible] since the robbing of [illegible] to-absist a hundred [illegible] dollars. We have to record another piece of the same character to-day. On the night of the 24th ult., the dwelling belonging to H. [illegible] Esq., Ashburnham, was entered by removing some bars that were on a window, then by means of a chisel, apparently, they forced off some boards and then made an entrance into the office. They then forced off the back of the desk and laid it in one of the pigeon holes, took out the cash box and robbed it of its contents, amounting to about $160. The cash box, we learn, was found next day on the window. There is something very suspicious about this affair as Mr. Calcutt always shuts up the large fierce dogs in the brewry, and that they made no side-points significantly. We hope Mr. Calcutt will be able to detect and mete out to the ruffian or ruffians their due desert. Mr. Calcutt, we learn, was from home at the time.

ANOTHER.

On Wednesday night, the residence of Mrs. Baily, Ashburnham, was entered by some of these prowling wolves, by removing a window shutter, and then taking out the window which they carefully laid aside, they were enabled to proceed as far as the kitchen, but could get no further without alarming the inmates, which they feared, as the house is within easy call of Mr. Radgate's [illegible]-mill, where [illegible] night and day. We are glad to say they found nothing to tempt their cupidity, valuables being secure in the main part of the building. Both of those attempts, one on Tuesday, the other on Wednesday nights, indicates a boldness not common among thieves. Like every town, we have a class of loafers that do nothing but lounge about taverns and grog shops. These must live in some way, and that instances of house breaking have occurred so lately must certainly throw a shade of suspicion on some of our sojourners. We hope, for the sake of our good name, steps will be taken to secure our citizens from such wolves, by severely punishing, (when occasion offers) all those who cannot render a fair account of how they obtain their daily bread.

LECTURE IN ASHBURNHAM.

The Rev. Mr. Douglas delivered his farewell lecture as Superintendent of Common Schools, in the village of Ashburnham, on Wednesday evening, 28th ult.,—subject: "A Good Beginning." There were about fifty children present and a goodly number of parents and guardians. The lecture was calculated for children, and the lecturer was evidently at home during the whole of the delivery. The object of the lecture was to impress those present with the fact that no one should consider himself well begun until he was half done. The lecturer gave a good, plain, to all present, remarking that they should not consider anything a good beginning unless it was half done. He remarked, in addressing the teacher, that he would say but little lest he might be considered a flatterer, only, that the proverb had been in a good degree attended to in the Ashburnham School. The ground work or elements he could say were faithfully and substantially taught in every branch, but more especially in Arithmetic and Grammar; and he had only to urge to still hold on, for a "good beginning was half done." At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was tendered unanimously to the Reverend lecturer for his able and instructive address, after which all departed highly pleased. Mr. Douglas carries with him the good wishes of the Board of School Trustees, and, we believe, the people of Ashburnham generally.—Com.

VINCENT CLEMENTI,
Treas. and Sec.

LECTURES.—Mrs. Edgar, of Arkansas, as we mentioned in our last, has been to visit us, and has delivered a course of three Lectures in this Town to highly pleased audiences. Mrs. Edgar is really acquainted with the subjects of her discourses, which she delivered in a free, easy, and pleasing style. Her last one was, perhaps, as great a success as has been delivered here. We are happy to be able to intimate that, at the request of several of our citizens, she will deliver a lecture here again in a few days, of which due notice will, no doubt, be given.

THE LONDON BEARD CASE.—Mr. Cornish, Mayor of London, has been honorably acquitted. Miss Eliza Ann Fortune, to whom it was averred Mr. Cornish had been married, distinctly denies the charge on oath, as also did her father and mother, so far as they were aware. Mr. Stapley asked for a postponement, but the magistrate in the face of this evidence refused to grant it.

BY our exchanges we notice that Woodstock has been visited by another heavy fire. The origin of the five remains a mystery, although vague suspicions are afloat that it must have been the work of some vile wretch. The loss covered by insurance amounts to $12,000, and the loss not covered by insurance $17,000; thus making a total of $40,000 worth of property conflicted at this last fire.

Messrs. Mitchell & Brother announce the completion of their Fall Stock of Dry Goods. The Tailoring Department is still under the superintendence of Mr. E Taylor, who is, we can say, one of the best Cutters in Canada. Parties leaving orders will be sure to get satisfaction. Their Millinery department is also complete.

COUNTY SHOW.—We would remind our readers that the County Agricultural Show takes place in the Town to-day.

Messrs. W. G. Thompson & Co. advertise in this days issue of the Examiner that they have a good supply of Fall Goods on hand.

North Dorset, Smith and Harvey Agricultural Association.

The Annual Show of the above Association was held on the premises of Messrs. [illegible] on Thursday, the 29th ult., and was [illegible] over the surrounding country. The day, fortunately, was [illegible] for the occasion, [illegible] the rain [illegible] the forenoon, and the weather [illegible] cleared, and the remainder of the day was glorious. The Show was a great success, there having been about 500 [illegible] within the room, and the remainder in the field. The Judges' duties were no sinecure, in consequence of the number and variety of the articles exhibited. Among others were 17 specimens of Table Butter, all, or almost all, of so good a quality that no small space of time, and no slight exercise of the palate, were brought into requisition ere the ribands were gained. The Ladies' Work, in different branches, were universally and deservedly admired; as were, also, some meritorious specimens of Water-colour Drawings. Nor must we omit to mention a valuable cabinet, of Minerals, Copper, Lead, Iron, &c.; as, also, of Marble, collected last year by Mr. Robert Strickland—valuable as evidences of the Mineral wealth of this section of the Province. The display of Stock, with one exception, was admirable. We heard it remarked by a gentleman, who had recently attended the Fair at Rochester, that he saw there no sheep at all equal in merit to those exhibited at Lakefield. The exception alluded to was the exhibition of Draught Horses: these was not a good team on the ground—and, by some extraordinary fatality, the first prize was awarded to about the worst; with this solitary exception we believe the awards of the Judges gave unqualified satisfaction. This is the second Show that has been held in Lakefield, and it augurs well for the prosperity of the Society, as well as of the rising village where such admirable accommodation can be secured. The following are the prizes awarded:—

Giving a preponderence of	16,836,014
16,836,014 bushels to Indiana.

But it is to be remembered that Indian corn, in which the produce of Indiana is so much greater in quantity, is much used as food for cattle, while we use large quantities of carrots, mangold, and turnips for that purpose; and from the last census I find that in 1860 we raised in Upper Canada

	Bushels.
Turnips	18,206,959
Carrots	1,905,598
Mangold	547,971
Total	20,659,528

Unfortunately I have not the means of knowing what the yield of Indiana was in these roots, but I have reason to believe that the preponderance of Upper Canada in this respect would quite make up the difference. But Indiana is one of the far-famed Western States, confessedly having great advantages over the great majority of the grain-growing States, in soil and climate.

And comparing Upper Canada and the following states in proportion to their population the results were as given below, decidedly in favor of Upper Canada:—

POPULATION.

New York	3,880,735
Pennsylvania	2,906,115
Michigan	749,156
Ohio	2,339,511
Upper Canada	1,396,091

State of New York	37	bushels per head.
" Pennsylvania	32	"	"
" Michigan	41	"	"
" Ohio	49	"	"
Upper Canada	55	"	"

The address seems to have been prepared with great labour and care, and evinces much ability.

In reviewing our short history, (only the life of a man,) it is wonderful to contemplate the rapid strides Canada is making. A few years ago and our fine fields and orchards were a wilderness, now we are thinking of constructing and establishing ourselves into a nation. Our progress compares favourably with any nation on earth, and the fault lies with ourselves if our march is not upward and onward.

Volunteering Meeting in Honor of, and Presentation of a Silver Tea Service to, Dr. and Mrs. Crowle.

A crowded meeting of the friends and neighbors of Dr. Crowle, took place in the Town Hall, Markham, on Monday, 26th of September, for the purpose of [illegible] the [illegible] Crowle, prior to [illegible] Peterborough, previously the [illegible] Lydiard Crawley, Esq., was called to the chair, and resolutions were passed, of which the following is an attested copy:—

"I. Proposed by the Rev. W. H. Ellsworth and seconded by W. Flemerfelt, Esq., and Resolved,—That Dr. and Mrs. Crowle, now for six years resident among us, have, both as instructors and citizens, so acquitted themselves as to secure our unqualified esteem and respect.

"II. Proposed by the Rev. J. Gordon and seconded by the Hon. D. Reesor, and Resolved,—That while we meet together this evening to give expression to our appreciation of their valuable services, we do so with great cordiality and unanimity; but we feel deeply grieved, at the same time, that the occasion should be one which contemplates their removal from our midst.

"III. Proposed by the Rev. J. H. Lake and seconded by D. Cash, Esq., and Resolved,—That it is the feeling of this meeting that, as our respected friends leave us, they may find in their future field of labor that support which high intellectual attainments and moral worth so justly merit."

These sentiments were then ably responded to by Dr. Crowle, who represented the regrets of the friends delicately alluding to the circumstances which prompted him to this decision.

Signed,

W. H. ELLSWORTH, Secretary. L. CROSBY, Chairman.

PRESENTATION.—On Thursday evening, Sept. 15th, at a crowded meeting, in the Town Hall of Markham, Dr. Crowle, Principle of the Markham Grammar School, was presented with a handsome silver tea service by his pupils, previous to his departure to Peterborough. Hon. David Reesor presided. Mr. John Milne, formerly a student at the Grammar School, on behalf of the pupils, read a very complimentary address to Dr. Crowle, expressive of the respect and esteem they entertained for him, their appreciation of his abilities as a teacher, and the regret they felt at his departure. The tea-service bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Dr. Crowle, M. A., L. R. C. P., Principal of the Markham Grammar School, by the pupils, as a sincere expression of their affection and esteem. Sept., 1864."—Globe.

THE ASSEMBLY.

To our most worthy and esteemed friend, Dr. Crowle:—

DEAR SIR,—It is with mingled feelings of regret and pleasure that we have assembled here this evening: of regret, because we have lost your labors as a teacher; of pleasure, because we once more have the privilege of meeting with you to express our feelings towards you.

On this occasion, allow us, on behalf of our fellow-students of the Markham Grammar School, to offer you our sincere thanks for the kindness you have shown us, and the gentlemanly manner in which you have treated us, since we have attended the school. It is with great pleasure that we take a retrospective view of the short time we have spent under your able and very efficient instructions; but it affords us still greater pleasure when we compare ourselves to-day with what we were when we first became your pupils. Truly may we say, that the happiest period of our lives has been the short time we have spent with you; and if we put into practice the moral and secular truths instilled into our minds by your labors, it will not only prove the happiest period of our lifetime, but the one on which a solid foundation has been laid which will be of the utmost importance, and lead to our ultimate success in whatever sphere or part of the "Great drama of Life" Providence may call us to act.

And now, Sir, like all other unforeseen events which transpire in this transitory life, the time has come—sorry are we to say it—that you are about to depart from us, perhaps never to meet with us again on this side of Eternity. But be assured we shall ever remember you with the deepest feelings of respect and esteem, and ever feel thankful for the privilege we have so long enjoyed of participating in the instructions given by you. There is one thing that must ever prove pleasing to you as well as to ourselves that you leave the pupils of this school entirely satisfied with the progress they have made during your labors with them. You have ever acted the part of a gentleman as well as a scholar.

Nor can we let this occasion pass without expressing the same sentiment of respect and esteem for your most amiable lady. And in token of our respect and esteem and of our appreciation of your abilities as a teacher, we present you with this silver tea service, hoping that wherever you may be, or in whatever situation it may be the will of Providence to place you, your labors will meet with that success they deserve.

And, again, allow us to tender you our most sincere thanks and best wishes; that you may long remain useful in your present profession, and that, through God's blessing, health and happiness may be bountifully in store for yourself and family, will ever be the humble prayer, in sincerity and truth, of the pupils of the Markham Grammar School.

LOOK OUT.—The London Free Press says that $10 and $5 bills on the Bank of Montreal, which are counterfeit, are in circulation in that city. Our dealers would do well to keep a sharp look out for similar currency just now.

SAUGEEN DIVISION.—The Signal says that Mr. Snider, of Owen Sound, has came out as a candidate in opposition to Mr. McPherson.

At a factory in Franklin Mass., a boiler exploded and carried a young girl to the ceiling of the room in which she was working, without seriously injuring her.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—I am sorry to put you to so much unnecessary trouble. But permit me this once more to reply to this "secret friend" who writes in the Review—from no good motive, I fear. I am not aware that it is customary to give any such statement as he requires, as out of twenty cases I have never seen one in any of the newspapers. Besides, I have already stated that the present case is not yet in a condition to be published; and I do not feel called upon to gratify the idle spleen of an unknown subscriber.

* * * * *

I have again to thank those who have honorably fulfilled their engagements, although they may regret the purpose to which their money seems likely to be put. As I leave Peterborough on Thursday afternoon, I trust that none will feel disappointed that I have not been able to call upon them at present. I trust, however to visit this neighborhood about Christmas and fulfil my intention. I have to thank them, also, who have already honorably paid their rent notes and subscriptions, of whom a further list will shortly appear; and, I may add, that if any others wish to follow the same example of christian faithfulness, they may do so by leaving their subscriptions with Mr. Menzies, Bookseller, by whom they will be forwarded to me at Toronto. Let us trust in God, who will, in a little time, give every one his own.

I remain, Mr. Editor, gratified for all your kindness hitherto, and trust that this shall not be the last time that I shall have to do so—though I trust it will be on a more pleasant subject.

Yours truly,
JAMES S. DOUGLAS.
Peterborough, 3rd Oct., 1864.

The Hon. George Brown's Speech.

A condensed report of the speech of the Hon. Geo. Brown on the Confederation question [illegible] Wilmot:—Hon. Mr. Brown said—On behalf of the [illegible] Government, I [illegible] the [illegible] manner in which the first day has been [illegible]. We have all heard of the hospitality of Halifax, but we have found that the reality far exceeds our anticipations. I can truly say there is not one of us who has not had his admiration of your city and Province enhanced by his visit, and, whether you unite with us or not, my wish is that you may go on to the rich future which I see awaiting you. Among the various objections to the union of the Colonies which have been urged, I have heard it stated that we come here desiring a Union for the advancement of our own interests. For me I belong to a party which, to a great extent, have been most prominent in opposing that union to the present time, and I feel assured that if you were in the same circumstances you would have adopted the same course. In these Provinces there are difficulties connected with the constitution of each, but in Canada our constitutional difficulties have been greater than with any of you. The disproportion of the Representation of the Canadas was so great that we felt bound to resist the injustice by placing the proposition for union and the Intercolonial Railway in the front of the fight, and saying that we would agree to nothing until the day came when we would have a fair share in the Government of our country. That day has arrived. Long we fought, and at length light has broken in upon the darkness; and when I hear it said that Canadians came here to escape their own difficulties, I feel happy to reply that our embarrassments have been overcome, and that that statement has no longer any foundation. My friend, Mr. Carter, had the manliness and the statesmanship to say:—"These difficulties must be met, and I will meet them." Such allusions have been made to our dimensions but I believe we have all met on the common ground of patriotism to consider the condition of our country. We have not come here with the desire to settle our own grievances, for they have been settled already to the satisfaction of a large majority of our Legislature, and to the almost unanimous satisfaction of our people. We have come here, when we were about providing a Constitution for our own Province, to ask you whether it is not the right time to form a Union of us all. If you do not like our proposition do not regard it. It has been also said that Canada has an enormous debt, and that we have come here seeking for an opportunity to throw it off. I belong in Canada to what is called the extreme party, though we never see any extreme in ourselves, and I therefore, may be expected to speak the whole truth about this matter. This, we are prepared to show, that large as our public debt is, it is not too large for us to bear without any assistance from you.—We have but to stand still for a few years and the increase of our population, the increase of our trade, and the increase of our crops, will make our debt seem but a drop to the ocean of our prosperity. We have had many discussions with regard to the future of these Provinces, and I believe there is no man worthy of the name of statesman who does not see that our future must be worked out under a common bond. The only question remaining unsolved is "Can we agree on a suitable system of government?" We have all had our troubles with the Colonial Office, and sometimes feel apt to magnify these into grievances, but I believe that if a fair comparison of our condition be made with other countries, it will be seen that no Colonies have ever enjoyed so much true freedom, so much self-government, and so much good government as we. The course of the Home Government has been one of the utmost generosity until it has brought us to this position, that we are independent in reality, and that the only tie between us and England is that happy one which exists between parents and children. I are free to say that there never was a moment in which Canada was so knit in affection to the mother country as now. The question, therefore, of changing our condition is a most serious one, and it has been repeatedly asked, Will not our relations with the Imperial Government be shaken? If I thought this would be the result I would be the last to sustain the proposition for a union, but I believe it will knit us closer than ever we were before. Let us see for a moment what we gain by union. We now present the appearance of four or five Colonies, each acting for itself; unite them and you produce a people of the first importance. A few statistics which I prepared this morning show as follows; In 1861 the population of Nova Scotia was 330,901, that of New Brunswick 252,000, that of Newfoundland 122,638, that of P. E. Island 80,857. In the same year Lower Canada had a population of 1,111,000, and Upper Canada 1,396,091, and I think I may safely say that the increase since then has been at the rate of 15 per cent. That would make our population 3,787,700, and if you take into consideration the inaccuracy of census-taking in a country like British America, you will see that our people number not much less than four millions. There are in Europe forty-eight sovereign States, and of these there are only eleven with a larger population than us; thirty-seven of them have less.—Three of them are so little in advance of us that we can soon surpass them. These are Sweden, Belgium, and Bavaria. Already we are ahead of Portugal, Holland, Saxony, Denmark, Greece, and Hanover; so that it will be seen that if united we would not be the inconsiderable Provinces we are, but would occupya proud and important position. The last census showed that in Upper Canada the male persons between the ages of 20 and 60 numbered 380,935, those of Lower Canada 225,620, those of Nova Scotia 67,367, those of New Brunswick 51,625, those of Newfoundland 35,532, those of Prince Edward Island 14,819, making a total of 693,918. Between the ages 45 and 60 we have 150,000, leaving of military age a male population of 550,000 men. Our importance in an agricultural point of view is greater than many suppose—the land held by individuals amounting to 45,638,854 acres. Of these in 1860, 13,128,227 were in a state of cultivation. You will find that in one year the increase of the value of this land will be $120,000,000, and with the increase in the value of stock it will be $150,000,000. In 1860 our assessed value of property was $550,000,000. There were fishermen in these Provinces in 1860 to the number of 62,256 and 70,000 mariners. The fisheries produced in one year $9,000,000, the ships built last year were worth $2,393,120. This leaves out of calculation our lumber trade which increased last year by $15,000,000. Our united exports last year were valued at $130,000,000, and our united revenues were $13,000,000. No man can look at these figures without being convinced of the advantages which union could give us. It would be no small thing to be a citizen of such a country as ours would be, and presenting such a front we would attract immigration to our shores. I do not altogether concur in Hon. Mr. Cartier's views about the Manchester party, for they have given free trade to England, but I believe that when we become one people that party will view us in a different way. How different, too would our position be at Washington when we seek a renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty if we want it, with a united wish, instead of having conflicting views expressed by the different governments. Our opponents to you is that we offer you a (three) million market. Some one says "give us the facilities to get there." Undoubtedly those facilities will be obtained, for otherwise there could be no real union. United we would offer to enterprise and ambition objects such as have never been offered before. It is true that a great deal depends on the details of the scheme which is submitted. His excellency has endeavoured this evening to seduce us into an avowal of our late deliberations. I believe such would not become us now. The question has been discussed with the greatest harmony and concord, and we have come unanimously to the conclusion that if a union can be effected without injury to the local interests of the Provinces it must be effected. If we can secure such a constitution as will be found thus suitable, I believe we will confer an obligation on our country.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

Sept. 26th.—The rebels captured and destroyed a train of 60 waggons while encamped at [illegible].

Oct. 2nd.—The report that the Federal gunboats are inside the city of Mobile is not correct.

Sept. 27th.—Rebels attempt new mode to advance on Richmond from James river, but was unsuccessful, the enemys works being such as no troops could pass. It is said, in this death the troops were at the very gates of Richmond, and might have entered, but even if in, could not have held it.

The army of James River are now considered fairly in motion, we may hear something in a few days.

General Beauregard, it is said, has accepted the command of Hoods army in Georgia.

Sheridan is stiff pursuing Early.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE WORLD.]

WASHINGTON, September 29th.

The news from Grant's army absorbs everything else of interest here to-day. A movement of some kind has been anticipated every day for more than one week. All that is known here of this advance which it is prudent to publish has already been communicated in an official manner. Intense anxiety is manifested to hear more details.

It is generally believed here that Petersburg has been, or is being, evacuated, and that the rebel troops have fallen back upon the defences of Richmond. General Grant's tenacious hold upon the Weldon road long since endangered the safety of Petersburg, and it is believed that it at last became absolutely untenable. Lee's retrograde movement is supposed to have been discovered by General Grant, who promptly executed a rapid demonstration upon his extreme right, with a view to force the defences of Richmond upon the south side, and, at the same time, lay siege to Fort Darling. Now that General Grant is in motion, we may expect to hear that he has outmanœuvered Lee, and has gained important positions for his new scene of operations against the rebel capital.

Grant is also reported to have out manœuvered Lee, and has gained advantageous positions within ten miles of the doomed city.

General Averhill has been deprived of his command in the valley.

The rebels are concentrating an army of 20,000 in Tennessee—(either Missouri,) and Rosecrans is rushing out to act against it.

What! you standin roun' [illegible]

Waitin while your Country's workin,
[illegible]
Now's the time—your Country's needin,
Risin on you every hour;
She don't want no stingy shirkin,
Shoulders either stout nor brave;
And I tell you plainly and squarely,
That this war must be put through,
Better count grass country fairly—
Fairly another's done by you.

What's the use your money-makin,
All the money you could make—
Why [illegible]

You will come to understand
That the thing that is most payin

THE LAST OF THE SERPENT.

"The serpent, is it?" said Picket in reply. "Sure, certainly, he beats 'em all the blessed Saint Patrick, and how he drave the serpints and all manner of [illegible] the Shannon naybody's sorra for at all; there was one cauld serpint left, who was too cunning to be talked out of the equatry and made to dhrink [illegible]. St. Patrick didn't well know how to manage this fellow, who was doing great havoc, till at long last he bethought himself, and got a strong iron chest made with nine bowlts upon it.

"So, one fine morning he takes a walk to where the serpint used to keep, and the serpint, who didn't like the saint in the least—and small blame to him for that—began to rise and show his teeth at him like anything. "Oh, says St. Patrick, says he, where's the use of making such a piece of work about a gentleman like myself coming to see you? 'Tis a nice house I have got made for you agin the winter; for I am going to outline me whole [illegible] least, [illegible] look off whatever you [illegible] will be glad to observe."

"The serpint, hearing such smooth words, thought that, should St. Patrick and drave all the rest of the serpints into the sea, he meant no harm to himself; so the serpint walks fair and asy up to the chest and the house he was spaking about. But when the serpint saw the nine great bowlts upon the chest, he thought he was sould, and was for making off with himself as fast as ever he could.

"'Tis a nice, warm house, you see," says St Patrick, "and 'tis a good friend I am to you."

"I thank you kindly, St. Patrick, for your civility," says the serpint, "but I think it's too small it is for me," manning it for an excuse, and away he was going.

"Too small!" says St. Patrick, "stop, if you please," says he; "you're out in that, my boy, any how; I can sure I will fit you completely, and, I'll tell you what," says he, "I'll bet you a gallon of porter," says he, "that, if you'll only try and get in, there'll be plenty of room for you."

"The serpint was very shlinty as he could be with his walk, and could not help to try the [illegible] of drinking. [illegible] and [illegible] gallon of shorter [illegible] swelling himself up as big as he could, so he got on the chest, all but a little bit of his tail. "There, now," says he, "I've won the gallon, for you see the house is too small for me, for I can't get in my tail." When, what does St. Patrick do, but he comes behind the great, broad tail of the chest, and putting his two hands to it, down he slaps it with a bang like thunder. When the rogue of a serpint saw the lid coming down, in went his tail like a shot, for fear of being whipped off him, and St. Patrick began at once to bowlt the nine iron bowlts.

"Oh! murder! Won't you let me out, St. Patrick?" says the serpint. "I've lost the bet fairly, and I'll pay you the gallon like a man."

"Let you out, my darling!" says St. Patrick; "[illegible] of malice? Not, you see, I have [illegible] no, an you must wait till to-morrow." And so he took [illegible] it, and [illegible] it [illegible] it is to this hour, for certain; and 'tis the serpint struggling down at the bottom that makes the waves spin it. "What's the living man," continued Picket, besides myself, has heard the serpint crying out, from within the chest under the waves, 'Let me out now yet, St. Patrick, and I'll pay you the gallon like a man.' But, by the holy poker that he were, it never can be. And that's the way St. Patrick settled the last of the serpints, sir."

"Rap, rap, rap!" "Come in," said the country [illegible] [illegible] man appeared and opened the door-sill: "Is Mr. Smith at home?" said he.—"No, sir; he'll be home to a short time, though. Take a chair," said Mrs. Smith. He selected the [illegible] to the door, shouldered it, and went off at a rapid rate.

A man in New York seeing a man driving a team [illegible] of the [illegible] the latter and exclaimed: "Why, what are you about? [illegible] the order is [illegible] [illegible] ing mans there?"

Women are said to have stronger attachments than men. It is not so. A man is often attached to an old hat; "but did you ever know of a woman having an attachment for an old Bonnet?" Echo answers, "Never!"

A fellow, of specious opinions, chanced to pick up a good looking glass on the road, but when he looked at himself he flung it away in a rage, crying, "If you had been good for anything, you would not have been thrown away by your owner."

H. CALCUTT'S Compound Liquid Cooler & Heater! PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the Boiler, at the rate of from 30 to 40 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Coolers. Brewers using one of my Coolers are enabled to brew during the hottest days without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies so small a space, that they can be furnished to every small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat twice the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

A CERTIFICATE WORTH A MILLION.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending, indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day; yet after a [illegible] I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is N. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs, about it. He [illegible] me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

FERNS.

In the cool and quiet nooks,
By the side of running brooks;
In the forest's green retreat,
With the branches overhead,
Nestling at the old trees' feet,
Choose we there our mossy bed.

On tall cliffs that woo the breeze,
Where no human footstep presses,
And no eye our beauty sees,
There we wave our maiden tresses.

In the mouths of mountain caves,
Whence the rapid torrent gushes,
Joying in the spray that laves,
As it wildly foaming rushes.

In the clefts of crumbling walls,
On old ruins sad and hoary,
Filling up the ancient halls
With a new and verdant glory.

Where the shady banks are deepest,
Sheltering from the sunlight's glow,
Loving best the shadiest, deepest,
Where the tallest hedges grow.

In the pleasant woodland glades,
Where the antlered deer are straying,
Lifting there our lofty heads,
There our minute groves displaying.

Then the treacherous marsh's bosom,
Decking with our regal pride,
There alone allowed to blossom,
(Boon to all our kin denied.)

Though we boast no lovely bloom,
That can rival with the flowers;
Though we fling no sweet perfume;
Though no varied hue is ours—

Yet hath nature framed our race,
In a mould so light and fair,
That a beauty and a grace
Shed we round us everywhere.

THE BARONET OF BURRA.

A pit impervious to the light of heaven,
By savage hands scooped from the solid rock,
Where yet the beams of yonder blood-red sun
Never shed a solitary ray.

Such were many of those strongholds of misery which went by the appellation, in Scotland, of "keeps," "donjons," or "pits," the addition of which to their baronial castles was considered necessary, that their tyrant lords might feast their eyes with the writhings of their victims, and solace their ears with their groans. Poets and sentimentalists may affect to mourn over the ruin of the ill-fated Charles-Edward, after Drummossie Muir had been soaked with the noblest blood in Scotland—they may deplore the inhuman butcheries, the unmanly decapitations, and the ruthless cruelties, which were practised alike on the noble and the serf, the hardy mountain warrior and homeless female, even after victory had declared herself in the most unequivocal manner. Undoubtedly the perpetrators of these enormities will be held in infamy until time shall blend with eternity—but all this spilt blood, all the devastations, and barbarities, and spoliations, which fell alike on the offender and the innocent, have been fraught with blessings to our country—to us—to posterity. The rising of the clans was the means of placing the copestone on our temple of liberty, the foundation of which was laid at the glorious revolution; inasmuch as that event induced the legislature, though at the eleventh hour, to expunge from the statute-book that moral and legal abomination—heritable jurisdictions, or the entrusting with the liberty, property, and even the life of the subject, to an unprincipled noble, who often knew no law but his own base impulses, and no morals but such as suited his own interests; who made even religion subservient to his aggrandisement, by teaching his creatures to promulgate and practice the wholesome doctrine of passive obedience and non-resistance. So deeply were the terrors of the great man engraven on the souls of his serfs, that the death of their nearest and dearest relatives was often preferred to the displeasure of the chief. Hence the conjugal exhortation of a certain matron, when her hapless helpmate had been taken from the "pit" to the foot of the gallows. Donald, it seems, possessed the bump of self-preservation in relief; and agreeably to the rules in those cases made and provided, he was "uncommon sweer"—having an eye also to the sublime and beautiful—to shut his eyes for ever on the glorious Highland scenery around him. He thought also on ten or twelve bare-legged Macs, doomed hereafter to swell the tail of their father's murderer, and a tear, for the first time, rolled down his furrowed cheek. "Eye, eye, Donald, my bonny man," cried his about-to-be-bereaved spouse; "gae awa' up an' be hangit, like a shentlemon, an' please the laird."

A chieftain of this school lived, or rather reigned, in the island of Burra in Orkney, some time subsequent to "the fifteen." Haughty in his disposition, and imperious in his bearing, even to his equals; domineering and despotical to those helpless wretches who had the misfortune to live under his protection; combining the revenge of a Shylock with the taciturnity of a mute, especially when it seemed to suit his interest to do so, Sir James Stuart lorded it over his vassals with a despotism worthy of the meridian of Algiers. He was a descendant of Robert Stuart, first earl of that name, who was himself an illegitimate son of James the Fifth, by the famous Euphemia Elphingstone; and hence his prohibition was equal to the haughtiness of his nature and pride of birth. He intrigued for the Court of St. Germains with all the address of an adept; and endeavoured, whenever he could do so with impunity, to thwart the schemes of the reigning family, as well as to wreak his vengeance in every possible way on the aristocracy of the country who adhered to their interests. One of his retainers, being at the Kirkwall fair, chanced to fall in with a recruiting party. The usual "speeches," and the usual libations flowed in on the poor youth with such effect that, ere another sun had gilded the horizon he found, to his horror, that he had mounted the black cockade, an emblem he was taught from infancy to regard as worse than the private mark of his infernal majesty. With returning reason, therefore, and watching the first opportunity, the young recruit tore the hated badge from his bonnet, and bought and obtained his lord's protection. A subaltern and a file of men researched the island of Burra, but Sir James was prepared for them; and the baulked "Hanoverians" returned to head quarters humbled and jaded, while the jacobite partisan bestowed a smile of bitter scorn on them and their employers.

This was not to be borne. The officer of the party claimed the assistance of the civic authorities, and ejectments of the choicest encumbrances which he had deemed under the walls of Malplaquet. But the provost was a man of peace, and, moreover, knew too well the character of the infuriated baronet, to hazard him in his own stead. He, therefore waited until he learnt that Sir James had gone on a shooting excursion; and seizing the first opportunity, he took a boat and four men and pulled to that island, under pretence of a friendly visit to the proprietor.

It so happened, that the first person they met was the individual they were in search of,—namely, the deserter. To poison him and place him in the boat was the work of a moment; and in five minutes more the civic dignitary was pulling away in triumph to the opposite shores of Holm, resolving internally to have his laugh also at the pupils of Marlborough. But he reckoned without his host. An adverse current had set in in Holm-sound, which retarded the boat's progress; and Sir James was a very Argus. In half an hour the baronet's boat was seen turning a headland, its crew straining every nerve, and rapidly gaining ground. The provost's boat grazed the beach; and with all the rapidity that council dinners had left him, he was endeavouring to spring on shore. Sir James, seeing he was likely to lose not only his retainer, but what was far dearer to him—his revenge, suddenly seized his fowling-piece, and lodged its contents in the civic dignitary's seat of honor. Fortunately, however, the distance was so great, that the slugs

Just played list through the skin,
An' did nae mair.

During the confusion the recruit plunged into the water, and was taken on board by his fellow-serfs; while Sir James, with the balcony feelings of an approving conscience went home to dinner. How the provost felt on this occasion, tradition saith not.

But the more tragical part of the baronet's story yet remains to be told. One of the very few families with which Sir James interchanged civilities, that of M'Lellan, situated in the beautiful island of Walls, was one. The lady of the mansion was a distant relation of his own; and thither he and his brother Archibald would repair, to partake of the sports of the muirs—the island abounding with grouse and a variety of other game. The proprietor of this fine estate was a distinguished naval officer; had performed a series of brilliant exploits, both on the coast of Spain and in the West Indies; and had very recently returned to enjoy himself in the bosom of his family. Captain M——— having perceived that shoals of strangers were constantly traversing his estates in quest of game, gave rigid orders, to both servants and tenants, to take by force all fowling-pieces from such as had not his written permission to use them. The haughty aristocrat, and his equally haughty brother, never dreamt that the order applied to them, and accordingly pursued their sport when it suited their convenience. One unfortunate day, however, when the brothers were birding on the confines of Hoy, certain of Captain M.'s servants came in contact with them, and demanded their fowling-pieces. How two such resolute men surrendered their pieces to a few hinds remains a mystery; but certain it is that the servants brought them in triumph to the mansion-house, and delivered them to their master.

When the Captain learned to whom the arms belonged he was quite confounded; and well knowing the implacable disposition of his lady's relative, he dispatched a boat to the island of Burra with the fowling-pieces, and with a sealed letter, containing the most ample apology, and inviting them on all occasions, when they so pleased, to use every liberty on his estate, assuring them that their doing so would be a high compliment. No apology, however, could be listened to by the exasperated brothers; nor were the interdictions of mutual friends at all available for what they conceited to be a mortal affront; and the country rang from one end to the other with their threats of vengeance.

The wind now approached, and Captain M. with his family retired to their townhouse in Kirkwall. Thither also repaired the enraged brothers, burning with revenge, and making no secret of their hostile intimations. Lady M., well aware of the implacable disposition of her kinsmen, prevailed on her husband to keep the house after night-fall. To indulge his wife, whose health was at that time rather delicate, he reluctantly consented, and for several weeks kept within doors, especially after twilight. But weary of restraint, and considering it as dishonorable to his profession, he, at the request of two pretended friends, who, it afterwards appeared, had leagued with the two Stuarts, walked forth one evening, unknown to his lady. He had not been a moment before his own gate, when a bullet whizzed past him and struck the wall. A hoarse voice was immediately heard from the church-yard opposite, exclaiming, "Fire again! the Hanoverian dog still stands." Instantaneously another explosion was heard and the gallant Captain M. was stretched in the dust, mortally wounded.

The dastardly assassins betook themselves to their horses, which were ready saddled; galloped with the utmost rapidity to one of the numerous bays which indent the island of Pomona; embarked on board of a vessel which had been in readiness for the occasion, and arrived safely in London, where by the influence and intercession of certain managed jacobites, then in power, they procured a pardon.

Whilst Lady M., in the depth of her affliction, was bewailing her violent and untimely bereavement, her eldest son, a fine boy about ten years of age, pointing to his father's sword, declared, that if ever he lived to be a man, with that weapon he would avenge the murderer's hand from his body;—and faithfully he kept his word, it not to the letter, at least to a more honorable equivalent.

Many years afterwards, it was discovered that Sir James had been in treasonable correspondence with the Pretender, and after the battle of Culloden his intrigues and letters were brought to light. Troops were immediately dropped down to the Orkney islands to seize on the persons of the rebels, and lay waste their estates; and the cloud which twenty years previous had risen no bigger than a man's hand now came

"Thickening and blackening
O'er his devoted head!"

Young Captain M., who had already distinguished himself in the service of the reigning female, petitioned for, and readily obtained, the command of the steerage fleet, who crowded every inch of canvass for the scene of their destination. The fleet proceeded to Kirkwall; but M——— with a chosen band, left them off the island of Copinsha, and secretly landed on the south side of Burra.

Sir James had that day been out fowling and seeing the red-coats defiling by an unfrequented path to his mansion, instantly suspected the cause, and immediately endeavoured to gain his own house, where he might have kept the party in play, until strategem or succor might have assisted him; but M. sprung from his party like an arrow, and seized the trembling tyrant within an hundred yards of his own threshold. The hoary assassin, on his knees, implored time to take leave of his wife and family; but M. sternly replied, "Such time as you allowed my brave father to prepare for eternity, like time you shall have now!" at the same time he was hurried into the boat, which proceeded with alacrity to Kirkwall. The hands at the helm and oar were in readiness to Edinburgh Castle, where he was tried and condemned; but during the night previous to his execution, he swallowed poison and perished. Such was the unhappy end of one, who, had he had an opportunity, would have waded

Through slaughter to a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy on mankind.

PROBABLE REVOLUTION IN STEAM.—Mr. W. H. James, R. C., whose name is gladly favorably known in connection with the engineering of our railway systems, has, after devoting a whole life to scientific improvements at length succeeded in producing a steam generator and engine of such extraordinary power, in proportion to its weight, the space it occupies, the fuel consumed, and the cost at which it can be manufactured, that not the slightest doubt is entertained by those who have seen the invention in operation, and to whose opinions and judgment confidence can be placed, that when properly and fully understood, appreciated and brought into use, it will by degrees effect a complete revolution in all kinds of steam machinery, and become applicable to numerous purposes for which the present steam engines are totally inadequate. It may be remembered that it was Mr. W. H. James who first suggested to the late Mr. George Stephenson the advisibility of his introducing tubes into his locomotive boilers, with a view of making it suitable for the propulsion of carriages (for which, at that period, they were totally inadequate) for the conveyance of passengers on railways, as shown by an agreement between the parties in the year 1821, ten years before the opening of the Liverpool and Manchester railways, the principal of which improvement has never been surpassed. It will be curious indeed if it should fall to the lot of the same individual, after an interval of 43 years, to be again in the field, and the originator of the second great revolution in steam locomotion, which very likely will be the case if he is properly supported with capital to carry out his present intention. We hope shortly to be enabled to give the details of the invention. Mining Journal.

CAPTAIN SEMMES AGAIN AFLOAT.—An agent of Lloyd's reports that a large steamer is reported to have put into Nieuhep, with signals for a pilot. She changed colors at Bremerhaven, and hoisted the Confederate flag. The pilot who took her to Bremerhaven believes she still remains there. She steams two knots at half speed and is reported under the command of Captain Semmes, late of the Alabama, with 500 men aboard, and is pierced for 40 guns. She is said to have been built at Bordeaux. Lloyd's agent adds that the above information was volunteered by the pilot who took her to Bremerhaven.

A LADY boasted to Archbishop Secker that she took Rousseau's plan of forbidding her children to read religious books till they were twelve years old and could understand them. "Madam," said his Lordship, "if you don't teach them something at an earlier age, depend upon it the devil won't fail to do so."

In the Fens or marshy districts of England, and also in the manufacturing towns, opium is much used. Dr. Alfred Taylor says:—"There can be no doubt of the horrid statement made by almost every surgeon in the Marshland, that there was not a laborer's house in which there was not a bottle of opiate to be seen, and not a child who did not get it some form."

IT appears from a careful and complete report made up in New Orleans, that over fifty thousand "freed" negroes have perished of starvation and misery in that department, during the past two years.

THE equestrian statute of the late Prince Consort has been completed at Hanover. The total cost is about £1400.

WOMEN OF FRANCE.

I am induced to say a word upon the very numerous complaints in females in France, which are too apt to them all heart. The books of statistics of the re-call shops in Paris are kept by women. I do not remember a mother house in the city the countess of which is not presided by a woman. The best-class of all the charitable establishments are only those of the opposite, but these open during the day for the sale of imported pieces. The high opinion and supreme esteem are women. And yet only the women are not allowed in such establishments do are naturally fitted for them, but even in preserves, hard-ward shops, which purely their shops, butcheries, &c., &c. In all these places the trade is kept in a woman, formed in and superintended from the west by a thousand of them. The saleswomen in the confectionary are principally women. I have the pleasure of purchasing, a most daily of a good looking, young person of about twenty-five years. From appearance I would say she is engaged to the conductor of the four o'clock train. Women even guard the stations and seem of the less frequented omnibus. Women are the rule of exchange every afternoon after the Bourse hours, and more members of the opposite sex and disposed of by women than by men. I should like you a courtesy to France. In the porters' lodges of the city there are as many portresses as porters, and a landlord would prefer to take for his service a woman without a husband than a man without a wife. In small houses, where only one person is required, that one person is a woman. Omnibus conductors submit their stay bills at the transfer offices to women for inspection and ratification. Women book you for a seat in the diligence. Women let coaches for rides of Montmorency, and saddle their own. Women undertake the moving of furniture, agree with you as to the price, and you find them quite as responsible as men. Without multiplying instances, you will see what a number of avenues are open to females here, which in England are closed. There are other occupations in which women are employed in France, which I trust and believe would never be accepted by women at home; a brigade of street sweepers contains an equal number of males and females. There are female chiffonniers and old clo' women. A complete establishment of a fruit or vegetable seller consists of a small cart, a man to shout and sell, and a woman and a dog harnessed into shafts to draw. In the country, women labor in the fields, and thresh and winnow in the barns. I might say that, from a motive of piety, I employ an old grandmother to weed on prey and tend a strawberry bed and hawthorn grove, in which I have an ameteril interest considerably that they grow as kind not my own. —Paris Letter.

A VALUABLE WIFE.

The [illegible] institution of women in China is evil [illegible]. Nothing so much astounds as a Chinaman who visits European and American merchants at Hong Kong, as the deference which is paid to the ladies, and the position which they occupy in society. The servants even express their disgust to see ladies take their seats at the same table with gentlemen, wondering how it can ever be forget their dignity. A few years ago a young English merchant was accompanied by his youthful bride to Hong Kong, where the couple were visited by a wealthy mandarin. The latter regarded the lady attentively, and seemed to dwell with delight on her movements. When she at length left the room, the mandarin said to the husband, in his imperfect English, "What you give for that wife of yours?" "Oh," replied the husband, laughing at the singular error of his visitor, "two thousand dollars." This our merchant thought would appear to the Chinaman rather a high figure; but he was mistaken. "Well," said the mandarin, taking out his purse with an air of business, "I pose you give her to me, I give you five thousand dollars. It is difficult to say whether the young merchant was more amazed or aroused, but the grave air of the Chinaman convinced him that he was in earnest, and he was compelled, therefore to refuse then offer with as much pleasing as he could assume. The mandarin, however continued pressing, and went up as high as seven thousand dollars. The merchant afterwards had a hearty laugh with his spouse. When he told her that he had just discovered her full value, as the mandarin had offered him seven thousand dollars for her.

A PROFESSOR of legerdemain was exhibiting in the neighborhood of a colliery, and after performing some tricks, asked the loan of a half-penny. A collier handed him one, which the juggler shortly announced had been transformed into a sovereign, which he exhibited. "Ah" said the collier, "I'll be my bawbee I" added the astonished dollier. "Undoubtedly," was the reply. "Let me it, will 'an I" The request was complied with, and the collier, turning round and round with admiration, at last put it in his pocket, exclaiming, "Now, I'se warrant ye'll no turn it into a bawbee again."

LAW REFORM.—A Scottish Magistrate in the Times proposes that the laws of England and Scotland should be the same, and that the Supreme Court of the whole island should be in London, and the whole of the judges sit in one building. He adds —"The thing would be very difficult, but not so difficult as the Thames Embankment, while it would be certainly more useful than the Wallace monument."

ADVICE.—How to make a watch keep time.—Never wind it up, it will then keep the same time all the year round.

Spinsters take notice! The improved sewing machines have a "feller" attached to them.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1864.

CONFEDERATION.

Already we have the united wisdom of British North America convened at Quebec to consult and determine upon the matter of [illegible] a remedy, in full or in part, for the evils which we have felt in the management of our affairs. These evils had increased to such magnitude as to require something in the shape of a change, and a full stop might have been put to public business, or at least the Canadian portion of it. Every year, for sometime, these difficulties had been increasing, and no remedy could be found to effectually check them, nor could any band of unity, among the governing parties, be formed that was satisfactory to the people of Upper and Lower Canada.

The people of these Provinces are Christian in order, truth, habits and predilections. The blood of Lower Canada is more purely than that of Upper Canada. At the time of the union the preponderance of population was with Lower Canada; in 1861, about 20 years after, Upper Canada had an excess of population over Lower Canada of 300,000, with all appearance of that excess being increased very much in time to come. The isolating customs of the language, religion and customs of the people of Lower Canada prohibits a healthy increase by immigration to them—as those coming to settle in our country naturally look for free institutions, equal advantages with those around them, the modes of educating their children, and the right to educate them in that way that may appear best to themselves. In all these things we have had, and continue to have, those advantages in a pre-eminent degree, and to this fact we may attribute our healthy progress—which at no time in our history had had more hopeful signs of continuance and increase than at the present. We look forward, therefore, with some anxiety for the consummation of those plans that are in contemplation. It would be premature to offer any remarks now—we expect the wisest have very little precipace in these matters. But as there seems to have been, at the Charlottetown Convention, an almost unanimous desire for Confederation, we may reasonably conclude from the state of public feeling in this Province, nothing will be offered by the Canadian authorities to damp these desires, or in any way retard the consummation of that which is so much needed. The people of the Maritime Provinces must, necessarily, have strong tendencies towards union with Upper Canada. Those Provinces are settled with the descendants of English, Irish and Scotch emigrants, with a few, probably, from the neighboring Republic—these naturally look to British institutions and connection as the most progressive, and freest, and most protective—hence we might expect their sympathies to be towards a national and commercial union with those who have sprung from the same stock, and who look to the same source as a guarantee for future progress and protection. Therefore, as far as Upper Canada and the Maritime Provinces are concerned, we have no fear but that terms of confederation can be arranged satisfactory to both parties, and just to all. But is Lower Canada likely to be satisfied? Will she be willing to place herself in a position where she cannot have supreme control, which she has held so tenaciously heretofore? We think not. She is already astir; and although the originators of this new movement may at first appear unworthy of notice, or only worthy of contempt, yet the writers of L'Union Nationale may make themselves felt in the present crisis. They have already convened meetings which have been numerously attended. The object this new party seems determined to contend for, is, independence of Lower Canada; that these, free from outside interference, the English settlers might be compelled to seek some more congenial climate beyond the pale of French domination. Then these "true descendants of Catholic France," would establish an independent French Empire in British North America. Such schemes are too wild to be entertained by the more intelligent, but they would appear to be a part of an old plan to compel Upper Canada to seek a repeal of the Union, which, if obtained, would have left them "masters of their own destinies."

To embarass the present Government they urge on all French Conservative papers to aid them in supporting on the Government three conditions. First,—That the plan of Confederation shall not be submitted to the people (after its definitive settlement) for six months. Second,—That the people will vote directly, not by representatives. Third,—That a majority of the members for Lower Canada must vote for it before it be adopted. If these were consummated the result would be obstruction and delay, if not the defeat of all our plans, eventually; and then we would be supplied with the continuance of the evils of the past, at least, and, in all likelihood, an increase of them, which is by no means desirable. If the difficulties are not now settled it will not be because of any unwillingness on the part of Upper Canada. All depends on the sincerity of the Lower Canada anti-confederates, who, it is to be hoped, will reject all the offers and demands of this ultra French Catholic party.

Mr. McDougall was in North Leeds on the 4th inst. Mr. Bell, who is about to retire, held the matter before a number of his constituents assembled at the annual Agricultural Show of that county. Mr. McDougall also addressed those present. From the North Leeds Advance we learn there is not likely to be any opposition to the Provincial Secretary. The writ for the new election will be issued forthwith.

We publish to-day, at the request of Col. Haultain, his reply to the unwarrantable assertions of the Editor of the Review, in a late issue of that paper, in reference to the pledge said to have been so solemnly made by him. It will be found to be a complete refutation of all the vagaries of the Review, which were only the result of an undue spleen.

Mr. McGrath, brother of the [illegible] will appear next week.

The Coroner's Jury have returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against Muller.

The County Agricultural Show.

The Agricultural Society of this County held its Annual Exhibition on Thursday last. The day was [illegible] the show in the town part of the day greatly keep farmers and others who resided at a distance, from supporting it, and kept those who came considerably under more than desired, within doors. The number of entries was 536, being in advance of former years. The Horses, Cattle and Farming Implements were exhibited near the Railway Station. Ladies' work, Fine arts, Manufactures and Produce were exhibited in the Town Hall.

HORSES.

The show of horses was reasonably good, although, to heard Barney say, by no means as good as expected. There were a large number on the ground, but it was evident that greater care is needed in reference to improving this very useful animal. Mr. John Ludgate carried off the first prize for farm horses. Mr. Thos. E. Fitzgerald the first for carriage horses, the same horses, we presume, which took the 2nd prize at North Douro, Smith & Harvey Agricultural Show, held at Lakefield. Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald was awarded the first prize for single Horses, Mr. Scott the 2nd. The carriage horses were smart and rather smaller than we would wish to see them, but of a class well suited to our Canadian habits—fastness being more in demand than symmetry and size.

CATTLE.

Some Durhames shown by Mr. John Walton, Smith, who deserves much praise for the attention he gives to this breed, were deservedly admired. Mr. Joseph Walton also exhibited Devons that drew a good deal of attention. The other grade cattle were of a good quality; the severity of the day, however, we suppose, limited the number exhibited, and because of this it is, perhaps, unfair to draw comparisons with former years.

SWINE.

The number exhibited was not very large, but what were shown were very good.

SHEEP.

The number of sheep shown was large and of a very good quality.

IMPLEMENTS.

Messrs. Whyte & Hamilton, and Mr. Wm. Helm exhibited some steel plows which were deservedly admired, and, perhaps, equal to anything in the plow line ever manufactured here.

IN TOWN HALL.

Of the various articles exhibited in the Hall, we must say but little, as we must confess ourselves unable to express any decided opinion. The oil paintings by Miss Josephine Caisse and Miss Edwards are, by judges, considered well executed. The varieties of fancy work require more space than we can allot to even name them, and the trouble of getting even a passing glance at them was such as to rob the view of much of the pleasure to be derived from close examination. The hall is too small for such occasions, but by arranging all to proceed in one direction a great deal of the bustle would have been removed and the place made much more comfortable.

FRUIT.

The quantity of fruit shown was not large.

DOMESTIC MANUFACTURES.

This class of produce was not largely exhibited. Butter was in considerable quantity and of a very excellent quality. Mr. Jas. Mann got the 1st prize for firkin Butter. Mr. I Garbutt obtained the prize for cheese, which was of a very good quality. Mr. E. Mann obtained the prize for fall Wheat, Mr. George Johnston for spring. A kind of wheat obtained from Kentucky, we learned, was exhibited by Mr. F. Birdsall. It was an excellent sample, is said not to rust, the straw, which was also shown, is of a very nice striped greyish color, this wheat was highly recommended by the judges.

Messrs. Hopkins & Donnelly exhibited some neat Harness. Mr. S. White, some boots, but in neither of these was there much competition. Not much home made cloth was shown.

A very handsome turning lathe, and a knitting machine were to be seen, both manufactured at the establishment of Mr. W. Helm, of this Town, which certainly were a credit to his establishment, the workmanship was very neat.

A very valuable Cabinet of minerals, collected by Mr. Robert Strickland, were shown, consisting of specimens of Copper, Lead, Iron, Coal and Marble, which evidence the mineral wealth of this section of the Province; we learned that all, or nearly all were obtained from the immediate neighborhood, so to speak, of this county.

Lakefield School Examination.

The quarterly examination of this rising School, now under the control of Mr. W. J. Smyth, came off on the 30th ultimo, in the presence of a good number of most intelligent visitors. There were 75 pupils in attendance, who acquitted themselves with much credit in their several classes. Taking into consideration the too crowded condition of the School—that one teacher has to meet the educational requirement of 70 or 80 children daily—that there is not sufficient room for adequate classification—it was acknowledged that the result of the examination was highly successful, and reflects credit of no ordinary description on the teacher.

At the close of the exercises, valuable prizes were awarded by the following gentlemen:—

By the Rev. Vincent Clementi, B. A., Incumbent of Lakefield, for good conduct: Harry A. Nicholls and Ines Amelia Wait.

By the Rev. E. L. Koyle, for general proficiency: Francis A. Coates and Wm. Smith O'Brien.

By Lieut. Col. Strickland, for Spelling: Thomas Jas. Bird.

By E. Beatty, Esq., for Geography: Harriet B. Warren.

By Robert Cassement, Esq., for History: Ines Amelia Wait.

By W. J. Smyth, for Grammar: Andrew Richmond Knox.

By Mr. Samuel Sherin, for most improvement by children under 8 years of age: E. M. Koyle.—Com.

VOLUNTEER RIFLE MATCH AT LAKEFIELD.

The first Volunteer Rifle Match held in the County of Peterboro, came off in the village of Lakefield on Friday last.

There would, in all probability, have been a larger number of companies represented but for the very unsettled state of the weather. As it was, but four furnished chaldiates to compete for the offered prizes, viz:—the Peterboro Rifle and Light Infantry companies, the Millbrook Light Infantry Company, and the Lakefield Light Infantry Company. It is satisfactory to find that each of these places was successful. Lakefield having carried off the 1st and 4th prizes, Millbrook the 2nd, and Peterboro the 3rd.

The weather was, during the period occupied by the friendly contest, more favourable, save for the prevalence of too high a wind, than was anticipated; and it is gratifying to know that the day passed off most agreeably, without a single contretemps.

At the termination of the match an adjournment took place to Blakley's Hotel where Capt. Leigh distributed the prizes as follows:—

Priv. Ball, Lakefield Comp:	1st prize	$20
Priv. Rice, Millbrook "	2nd "	12
Priv. Craig, Peterboro R. C.,	3rd "	Enfield Rifle.
Priv. Gordon, Lakefield Co,	4th "	$5

A substantial repast had been prepared at the Hotel, to which, grace having been said by the Rev. V. Clementi, the gallant Volunteers did ample justice; and the proceedings were brought to a conclusion by hearty cheers for the Queen, the different companies, and lastly for Capt. Leigh.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

The conflicting telegrams cause us to receive what news we get with caution. There has, however, been some fighting near Richmond. The Confederates attacked General Butler's lines and claim to have re-captured what positions they had lately lost. They also claim to have captured 500 prisoners, 9 pieces of artillery, and between 300 to 400 horses. On Friday the greatest part of the fighting was done. The Confederates fought hard, and were only brought to a stand by Abbott's 2nd brigade, one half of whom are armed with repeating rifles. General Lee is said to have commanded in person, and had determined to make a heavy impression. The entire loss of the Federals does not exceed 300, killed, wounded and missing; and that of the Confederates is estimated by General Butler at 1,000. The Confederate General Gregg was killed during this engagement. Since Friday there has been no fighting whatever in this department.

General Sheridan, in one of his despatches, says he has left the whole country where he has passed untenable for a Confederate army, as he has destroyed over 2,000 barns filled with wheat, hay and farming implements, and over 70 mills filled with flour and wheat, and killed and issued to his troops not less than 30,000 sheep. Having performed all desired, General Sheridan is said to be withdrawing,—but this is from a Confederate source, and needs confirmation.

Kentucky has also been the scene of action near Saltsville. General Burbridge says, (Oct. 8th): "We attacked and drove the enemy from his works, and held him in check in spite of superior numbers. Our ammunition gave out, but we held the position till night and then withdrew the command."

ASHBURNHAM.

The Municipal Council of this Village met on the 3rd inst. Present: Robt. D. Rogers, Reeve, and Messrs. H. Bennett, Wm. McGregor and H. Calcutt.

On motion of Councillor Bennett, P. Sargent's account for repairing Town Hall was ordered to be paid.

The Council adjourned to meet the first Monday in November, at Seven o'clock.

North Douro and Smith Agricultural Show.—Omissions in printed list of prizes. 12 yards home made cloth, 2nd prize Joseph Trenham. 16 yards home made Flannel, 2nd prize Mrs. G. Fitzgerald. Stocking yarn, 2nd prize Mrs. W. J. McKibbon. Mittens, 2nd prize Mrs. G. W. Robinson. Crochet Work, 1st prize Mrs. Clementi, 2nd do. Miss B. L. Walsh.

Patent Lantern.—We have received from the establishment of Mr James Reid of this Town, one of Archer & Pancoasts improved patent convex reflector lanterns, for which he will receive our thanks. This lantern is a decided improvement on anything we have heretofore seen, and is just the thing for dark and muddy weather. It is made to burn coal oil, and is capable of throwing as much light as half a dozen candles.

The passengers of the "Damascus" on her late trip, have presented a testimonial to the Captain and Officers, thanking them for their kindness, and commending their coolness and good seamanship.

....The largest cotton mill in the United States is in Baltic, Conn. Its entire length, including wings, is 954 feet by 68 wide, and it contains 1,750 looms. The mill is owned by the Rhode Island Sprague.

....It is stated that the ship Courland arrived at Boston last week from Antwerp with 251 passengers, of whom 230 enlisted before they landed.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, Oct. 3rd, 1864.

Present: His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Teale, Hamilton, Mallett, McNaughton, Chambers, Parnell, Leonard, and Lundy.

The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was received from the Warden, informing the Council, that the county council had appropriated $35, towards repairing the Boundary between the town and Smith, East of George Street, and asking the town to appropriate a like sum for the same purpose.

A communication from Capt. Poole, informing the Council, that his Rifle Company having obtained an iron target for ball practice, and intending to have a county shooting match, were anxious to raise $200.—On behalf of the Company he solicited a subscription from the Council.

A petition from John Costello, asking the Council to indemnify him for his improvements on the land south of the Town.

Two petitions were read, one from Spalding & Co., and one from Jacob Atkin, each asking for a shop license at a reduced price, when it was moved by Mr. Lundy and seconded by Mr. Leonard, that the said parties do get a license at half price.

A petition from Hugh Allen, asking assistance for Mrs. Lowry and child, was received.

A communication from James F. Deanis' town, informing the Council that Mr. T. Hazlitt had instructed him to institute legal proceedings against the Council for injury received by a horse of his in June last, at a Bridge on Simcoe Street.

Mr. John Delaney petitioned the Council to make a side walk on Bethune Street, from Charlotte Street to his Hotel.

Accounts amounting to $933 29, were referred to the Finance committee.

A petition from Mr. J. McBurney and others asking a side walk to be laid on the north side of Hunter Street.

Applications for the office of Collector were received from Wm. O'Donnell, Wm. Cumming and Thomas Donnelly.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of Wm. Arnott's account for $6 25 and Wm. Larkin's account for $18, but could not recommend the prayer of the petition of James O'Brien.

Mr. Hamilton moved that the side walk on the North side of Hunter Street be put in repair; motion lost.

The Treasurer was instructed to deposit in the hands of Mr. Wm. Brownscombe, $4 for the benefit of Mrs. Kelecher; $4 each for Mrs. Derry, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Lowry, to be given at the rate of $1 per week.

On motion of Mr. McNaughton, Messrs Lundy, Toole and Chambers were appointed as a special committee to superintend the erection of a new Bridge at the junction of Aylmer and Brock Streets.

A By-law was passed, appointing Mr. Thos. Donnelly, Collector for the present year.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Peterborough, 10th Oct., 1864.

Sir,—Will you have the goodnes to publish the enclosed letter which I addressed to the Editor of the Review, but which he has thought fit not to publish, as stated in the Review of the 7th inst.

It would be well for Mr. Thomas White to remember that abuse of myself, however gratifying to his own mind, proves nothing but the malice that dictates it.

Your obedient servant,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

Peterborough, 3rd Oct., 1864.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Your leading article of the 30th ult., though not wanting in its usual abuse of myself, is entirely deficient as regards the proof of your assertion, that "Mr. Haultain goes to Parliament pledged not only to support the Government as a whole, but pledged, in the most solemn manner, both privately and publicly, to support the Upper Canada leader of it, the Hon. John A. Macdonald,"—and which I have declared destitute of the truth. I think I have a right to require of you to answer these two questions:—

1st. When, and to whom, did I, in private, solemnly pledge myself to support Mr. Macdonald, as separated from the Government as a whole?

2nd. When, in public, did I do the same?

And unless you can give a satisfactory answer, your readers will only have had another instance of the recklessness and malevolence which characterizes your attacks upon my conduct, character and motives.

In your article of the 30th you have not even attempted to prove on what occasion, "in private," I made the "solemn pledge" you charge me with—and your attempt to prove it as solemnly made in public will not tend to increase confidence in your most positive assertion, when seeking to gain a political end. It is not enough, in proof of so strong an assertion, merely to say that Mr. Sidney Smith said so, and that at a crowded public meeting, when his words might have never reached me, and not adduce in support of it one word of my own uttered either in public or in private. Solemn pledges, as to a future political course, are not given in silence, and especially when repeated allusions are made during the canvass, as to the non-political nature of the contest. I had no need, in order to gain the support of leading Conservatives, to declare myself a supporter of Mr. Macdonald, otherwise than as a member of the Government as a whole. Mr. Dennistoun, whose honorable conduct towards myself in the late contest I cannot too highly mention, (a happy contrast to your own) was deputed, without the slightest solicitation on my part, to offer me their support, requiring no pledge of any kind, if I would consent to contest the county against all comers, and this was publicly intimated on many occasions. Mr. Sidney Smith required no such pledge from me when he equally unasked for, promised me his support. Not one of the Conservatives that supported me, I venture to say, ever dreamt of asking or of obtaining from me such a pledge as you accuse me of having so solemnly made. No one will suppose that you were ignorant of these facts; and, therefore, in the absence of one word from myself, either in private or in public, that I had withdrawn from the political position I had hitherto held, I think I may justly charge you with recklessness, if not with worse, in making the statement I have taken exception to and have declared destitute of truth. And in the face of the above facts, what is the feeble ground on which you have attempted to support such an assertion; "that I solemnly pledged myself in public and in private," &c. You quote the following from Mr. Smith's rambling speech at the hustings:—"'But I have to say to Col. Haultain that if he will now declare that he has no confidence in John A. Macdonald and that he will not support him, I will at once ask to be relieved from my promise to give him my support.' A pause. That's the talk with the bark on it. There will be no misunderstanding our true position hereafter." My previous conversation with Mr. Smith—the unmistakeable language of my address relative to our leading public men, of course not excluding Mr. Macdonald—and at every meeting—my public approval of their conduct, and my promise of cordial support—all rendered it unnecessary for me to say another word in reply to Mr. Smith, at that time. In order that the ambiguity or uncertainty might exist, it will not be out of place to refer to the double position now occupied by our leading public men. For instance: Mr. Brown is not only a member of a Coalition Government, formed of both political parties, but he is the recognized leader of one of these parties. In like manner Mr. Macdonald not only forms one of the same Government, but is, also, the recognized leader of the other party. In one sense, therefore, it is quite clear that the Conservative who supports the present Government is a supporter of Mr. Brown; and, in the same sense, the Reformer who gives in his adhesion to the same Government is a supporter of Mr. Macdonald—without, in either case, or in the smallest degree, compromising their political position or principles; on the other hand, any one to declare himself a supporter of Mr. Brown or Mr. Macdonald as separate from the Government as a whole, would be asserting a political preference for the one over the other. In the former point of view, it has been a satisfaction to me to be able to speak approvingly and cordially of those of whom I have not been slow to say hard things when I thought it necessary. But it is, obviously, in the latter sense that you charge me with having "solemnly pledged myself in private and in public." The only attempt you make to prove such an assertion, one that so directly affects my political honesty, is, as I have said, to quote certain words uttered by Mr. Smith. Whether these were the words he made use of or not, I do not remember; but assuming them to be correct, in what respect do they separate Mr. Macdonald from the Government as a whole? Had Mr. Smith so intended it, he was bound to myself and to his audience so to have stated it. But such was not his intention, and his words were, in substance, only a repetition (except the elegant metaphor,) of what he had said to me in private—which, together with my reply, he has put in writing at my request. It is as follows:—

"I said to Col. Haultain: Of course I understand you do not draw distinctions between members of the Government, and will not say you have confidence in Mr. Brown and no confidence in Mr. Macdonald—if you do, I cannot support you."

Col. Haultain replied: "I am prepared to support the Government as a whole—make no distinctions, and have nothing to do with the past. I believe the gentlemen who now form the Government are acting patriotically and ought to be supported, and I am prepared to give them my support."

Here, as throughout my canvass, I carefully protected myself from such a pledge as you charge me with—a charge so palpably contrary to fact that many have been surprised that I took any notice of it. I dealt with the Government as a whole. The Government, as to its formation and the object of it, was the question before the Electors, and not in the smallest particular was it a choice between Mr. Brown and Mr. Macdonald. I unhesitatingly adhered to this view of our political position; and I challenge you to make good your words, to show where, by word or implication, in private or in public, I solemnly pledged myself to support Mr. Macdonald, as distinct from the Government as a whole.

I cannot close this without an expression of regret that you should have adopted so offensive a style when seeking to damage me as a political opponent. Believe me that it is generally attributed to envy and disappointment; and of this you may be sure—what I wonder you do not perceive—that damage is done not to your opponent but to yourself.

Your obedient servant,
FRED. W. HAULTAIN.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Sir,—One very striking point has, no doubt, occurred to you in this discussion which is just now going on in the Review, between the Editor of that paper and Col. Haultain; I mean the little despicable spirit of bitter spiteful malignity which has so far characterised not only the Editorials of the last few issues on the subject, but all the articles published during the election, of which our present member was the subject.

Surely, Mr. Editor, there must be something at the bottom of all this. The Editor of the Review must have been grievously troubled or crossed in some way, to make him snarl and show his wrath as he has lately done. Report assigns as a reason for all these occurrences that a very near and most particular friend of the Editor of the Review, a certain Mr. Number One, has for a long time been watching out for a chance to run for our County—that his fingers have been itching and his teeth watering for it, and that it has been the darling scheme of his life, and the grand object of his hopes and aspirations for some years past:—that, not very long since, his friends, and among them a certain notability, urged upon him to offer himself—and that, quite lately, when the prospect of a vacancy in the representation of the County seemed certain, and the matter was under consideration, lo and behold you, our reported friend who wears the physical phylacteries was, to the very great disgust of the Mr. Number One, induced to come out for the County, by which means our poor little friend, the anti-pharisee, had his hopes dashed. These circumstances, Mr. Editor, if true, (though I wont myself vouch for them) do, in a great manner, account for the milk that is contained in the cocoanut.

I cannot help saying that it is a great pity that the Colonel ever took any notice of these spiteful articles in the Review.

Your obedient servant,
Q. E. D.

Dear Girls: Keep cool. A blessed fate awaits ye, one how. If ye have got red hairs ye had better exchange it for black or light hairs, they tell me is going to be mode monthly next year. Don't hav enything tew do with the boys unless they mean business. If ye don't know how to skate, ye mite as well go on [illegible] pennsey at once, for you [illegible] out.

Ballads for Bad Memories.—A frequent excuse put forward by persons asked to sing is the declaration "they would be delighted if they could remember the words." As words in the present style of singing really matters very little, we give the following verse as a sample of the kind of thing that may be sung by people with short memories:—

Oh, if I had a lumtv tum lumty tum too
In the land of the olive and fig,
I would sing of the lumty tum tangol to you
And play on my thingumy-jig,
And if in the lumty tum battle I fall,
A tumti tum's all that I crave;
Oh, bury me deep in the whatyoumay call,
And plant the thingumbobs over my grave.

Put Him in the Stable.—A capital story is told of Judge Tappan, a Senator in Congress who is unfortunately cross-eyed. A number of years ago he was the judge of a newly organized country court in the eastern part of Ohio. In those days of primative simplicity or perhaps poverty, the bar-room of a tavern was used as a court-room, and the stable as a jail. One day during the session of the court the judge had occasion to reprimand two lawyers who were wrangling. An old looking customer who sat in the corner, listened apparently with great satisfaction to the reproof, and presuming an old acquaintance and the judge's well known good humor, sang out, "Give it to them, old gimlet eyes?" "Who was that?" inquired the judge. "It was this ere old hoss," answered the chap, rising himself up. "Sheriff," observed the judge, with great gravity "take that old boss and put him in the stable."

A green, good natured, money making up-country Jonathan, who said everything drily, got things fixed, and struck up a bargain for matrimony; and the parties agreed to employ a country justice to perform the ceremony. The worthy squire commenced by remarking that it was customary on such occasions to begin with a prayer, but he believed he would omit that. After the knot, he said it was customary to give the couple some advice, but he believed he would omit that also; it was customary to kiss the bride, but he would omit that. The ceremony being ended, Jonathan taking the Squire by the button-hole, said, "Squire, it's customary to give the magistrate five dollars—but I believe I'll omit that."

A 'Cute Paddy.—A good story is told of an Irish cotter, who was sent to the stable to bring forth a traveller's horse. Not knowing which of the horses in the stalls belonged to the traveller, and wishing to avoid the appearance of ignorance in his business, he saddled both animals. The traveller pointed out his own horse saying, "That's my nag." "Certainly, per honor; I know that very well; but I didn't know which was the t'other gentleman's."

A country fellow came to the city to see his intended wife, and for a long time could think of nothing to say. At last, a great snow falling, he took occasion to tell her that his father's sheep would all be undone. "Well," said she, kindly taking him by the hand, "I'll keep one of them."

Cheap at the Money.—A shilling subscription having been set on foot to bury an attorney who had died very poor. Lord Chief Justice Norbury exclaimed:—"Only a shilling to bury an attorney! Here's a guinea; go and bury one and twenty of them."

"Did any of you ever see an elephant's skin?" asked the master of an infant school of his pupils. "Yes, sir," was the reply of one of the pupils. "Where?" inquired the instructor of youth. "On the elephant sir," answered the child.

Says the immortal Artemus Ward, "You may differ as much as yu please about the size of a young lady's figger, but I tell you candidly, if she has forty thousand pounds, the figger is about as near rite as you will get it."

A gallant was lately sitting beside his beloved, and being unable to think of anything to say, asked her why she was like a tailor. "I don't know," said she, with a pouting lip, "unless it is because I'm sitting beside a goose."

A man, hearing of another who was a hundred years old, said contemptuously, "Pshaw! what a fuss about nothing! Why, if my grandfather was alive we would now be a hundred and fifty years old!"

A town-crier took in charge a lost child, and proceeded to hunt up his parents. On being asked by a lady what was the matter, he replied, "Here's an orphan child, missin, and I'm trying to find its parents."

A little girl, walking with her mother in a graveyard, reading one after another the praises of those who slept beneath said, "I wonder where they bury the sinners!"

Why are Grosbeaks like Maiden Ladies?—Because, no matter what their face [illegible] they persist in remaining under forty.

Question and Answer.—Boy.—"Please sir, tell me the time?" Crusty Old Gent.—"Yes, sir, bedtime!"

Our politicians say it is sweet to die for your country, but far sweeter to live for it, and sweetest of all to live on it.

New explanation of the "golden mean." To have gold and be too mean to use it.

The Ladies' Best Companion in a Ball-Room.—A gentleman.

A Softener.—A woman's tears soften a man's heart; her flatterers his head.

H. CALCUTT'S Compound Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1863.

Having obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old-fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to supply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel,

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

HENRY'S VERMONT LINIMENT.

READ THESE

CERTIFICATES.

Montreal,
April 6th, 1860.

Messrs Henry & Co.

Your Vermont Liniment has cured me of a Rheumatism which had settled in my limbs, and for which blessing you may well suppose I fell grateful.

T. Quinlan.

South Granby, C. W.

Mr. Henry R. Gray, Chemist, Montreal.

Sir,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, having accidentally got a needle run under her finger nail. The pain was most intense; but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone in a few minutes.

Yours very respectfully,

W. Gibson.

Montreal,
Dec. 13th, 1860.

Messrs. Henry & Co.

Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I have frequently used it for Bowel Complaint, and I have never known it to fail in effecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarhœa summer complaint, and disorders of a similar character I have also found it a never failing specific for Colds, and for affections of the head. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

N. H. DOWN'S VEGETABLE BALSAMIC ELIXIR.

A CERTIFICATE WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ:

Waterbury, Vt.,
Nov 24th, 1858.

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately, the patent medicines of the day: yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence; that medicine is Rev. N. H. Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. Woodward, M.D.

Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS, COLDS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases to which flesh is heir, originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

Adults

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

☞ Sold at every Drug and country store throughout Canada.

ARE YOU IN AGONY?

A WELL SPRING OF HOPE FOR ALL!

CAN BE FOUND IN

Holloway's Pills.

Be of Good Cheer! The Sinking may be Saved!

BY THE USE OF

Holloway's Ointment.

The history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact that wounds, and in whatever shape fastened diseases exist, the disinfecting, searching and healing properties of the Pills are fully equal to its subjection and cure, and that, with the Ointment, they are

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history written by one man, or even derived from the experiences of one nation. It consists of a compilation of testimonies from the sick of every country—an unimpeachable record, the like of which has never been adduced in favour of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick

The want of a sterling medicine to relieve the ills and necessities of the suffering portion of humanity, and one entirely free from mercurial and other deleterious substances, and consequently free from all powerful medicine was removed into the world; Holloway's Invaluable Pills have become the household remedy of all nations. Their attribute is to prevent as well as to cure; they attack the cause on more of the complaint, and thus, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-invigorate and restore the drooping energies of the system, assisting nature in her task of vital and functionary reformation.

Disorders of the Stomach

Are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to send a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the bowels, regulate the liver, bring the retained or irritated stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs upon the blood itself, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

Is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this harmless but effective preparation. At the two epochs of life to which the female system undergoes the most important and critical changes, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements can at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatever form disease attacks the liver, it is repelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistable curative. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organ, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a celerity which astonishes the sufferers and their friends. Let the sick whom the faculty have abandoned, resort with confidence to this powerful anti-bilious agent, and a restoration to health and activity will be the unvarying result.

Dyspepsia, Diarrhœa, Weakness, &c. &c.

The terrible bodily and mental pangs which characterise Dyspepsia are at once mitigated by the Pills. Diarrhœa, constipation, headache, physical prostration, nerv

Select Poetry.

THE SLEEPING WIFE.

My wife! how calmly sleepest thou! A perfect peace is on thy brow; Those eyes beneath their fringed lid Keep stars behind a cloud hid; Thy voice is mute, and not a sound Disturbs the tranquil air around; I'll watch and mark each line of grace That God has drawn upon thy face.

My wife! thy breath is low and soft; Scarcely its sound I listen oft; The lightest leaf of Persian rose Upon thy lips might find repose. Sacred be thy slumber, that I guard My trembling hand upon thy breast, In sudden fear that envious death Had robbed thee, sleeping, of thy breath.

My wife! thy speaking face now seems To share the tenor of thy dreams: Methinks thy gentle spirit plays Amid the scenes of earlier days; Thy thoughts, perchance, now dwell on him Whom many thou hast lain; or in the dim And shadowy future strive to pry, With woman curious, earnest eye.

Sleep on! sleep on! my dreaming wife! Thou livest now another life, With beings all'd with fancy's birth,— I will not call thee back to earth. Sleep on, until the car of morn Above the eastern hills is borne; Then thou wilt wake again, and bless My sight with conscious loveliness.

Miscellaneous.

Great Western Railway of Canada.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

The report to be presented to the meeting on the 5th of October states that the receipts on capital account during the half year amounted to £1,183 18s. 10d., and the total receipts on the 31st July, 1864, were £3,218,356 15s. 2d. The aggregate expenditure to the same date amounted to £3,075,004 5s. 7d, leaving a balance to the credit of capital account of £144,352 9s. 7d. The outlay on capital account during the past half-year consists of additional sidings laid down at sundry stations, say jointing 14 miles of rails—the proportion of expenditure chargeable to capital in rebuilding in stone and iron the wooden bridges over the core of the River Thames, west of London—outlay on account of rolling mill at Hamilton, &c., amounting altogether to £16,159, 15s. 7d. The revenue account for the past half-year is as follows:—Gross receipts, £349,939 19s. 9d; working expenses, including maintenance of way, fuel, insurance, and rent of suspension bridge, £140,189, 16s. 9d.—balance £174,721, 8s. 11d. From this there has to be deducted—Interest on government loan, £17,498, 5s.; interest on company's bonds, &c., £33,228, 1s. 7d.; loss on the conversion of American currency, £14,025 3s. 7d.; renewal of rails, sleepers, bridges, &c., £31,263, 11s. 8d.—total, £126,015 1s. 10.; leaving balance from the half-year's working of £48,706, 7s. 1d. In the 4th revenue account a further reduction is made for the estimated loss on the balance of American funds in hand if converted into gold at the assumed rate of 250, which would amount to £11,904, 14s. 1d., which would leave £6,831, 14s.; to this has to be added the surplus from last half-year, £4,129, 9s. 8d, making a surplus of £10,951, 2s. 8d., which is insufficient to permit the declaration of a dividend. The conversion of American funds, in which the loss of £14,825, 3s. 9d. has accrued, was made at the average rate of 1744. It will be seen that the balance of American funds not converted amounts to $339,863,72, which is deposited in the Bank of Commerce, New York. When the accounts were made up, gold was quoted at 250, and at this assumed rate, the loss, if converted, would have been £11,904, 14s. 1d. in addition; since then the gold rates have fluctuated considerably. During the past half-year 38,785 passengers and 1,535 tons of goods have been carried in excess of the corresponding period last year; and the aggregate train mileage shows an increase of 32,076 miles; but the comparative expenses of the coaching traffic in relation to the receipts have been diminished 0,97 per cent., and a similar reduction has been effected in the expenses of the goods traffic of 0-10 per cent, while the aggregate cost of locomotive power, notwithstanding the increased mileage, shows a decrease of £427, 17, 9d., or an actual saving of 1 03 per cent., or 1 12 per cent. on the gross receipts. The working expenses of the last half-year are 44 51 per cent. of the aggregate receipts as compared with 45 65 per cent. of the preceding half year, and 46 50 per cent of the corresponding half-year, thus showing a reduction of 1 99 per cent. on the corresponding half year. The economy in the locomotive expense is mainly attributable to the large saving effected in the price of fuel, amounting to the item of £1,063 2s. for the half year. It is also gratifying to be able to state that the permanent way and rolling stock generally are reported to be in very good condition. The gross receipts for the six months ending July 31, 1864, are £314939, 17s. 2d. against £293,067, 5s. 9d. for the corresponding half year of 1863, or an increase of £21,872, 9s. 5d. The traffic of the line has been conducted with great regularity. The shortness of the grain crop last year has been severely felt, but the increase in the lumber and other branches of freight business has enabled the company to show an increase in their local business. The rolling mill at Hamilton has been completed and brought into successful operation; and the engineer promises a considerable economy in the cost of re-rolling old rails. His original estimate of £17,000 will be executed by £4,500, owing to some improvements in the machinery and construction being considered desirable. At the report of the board, in May last, the President, accompanied by Mr. Fenner, proceeded to Canada, in order, by a personal inspection of the railway and its connecting lines, to make themselves acquainted with the country and with the mode of conducting the traffic, and to expedite what circumstances affecting the company's interests in a variety of ways. From the knowledge of the company's affairs which has been acquired by this visit the board anticipate the best results. Their interviews and conferences with the representatives of American lines resulted in a convention of the leading connecting railways being called, at which the absolute necessity of advancing through rates, to mitigate in some degree the loss occasioned by the depreciation of American currency, was forcibly urged; the result was an immediate increase and a revised classification of freight, and it is hoped that an advance in passengers rates will follow. It has been clearly demonstrated to the board that the future prosperity of the Great Western of Canada under the existing circumstances of surrounding competition is unsepa'able from the promotion of a more expeditious and economical transport of through traffic than at present exists. There are several measures in contemplation for accomplishing this object; but the first desideratum is to secure an unbroken gauge, so as to avoid the delay and expense of loading freight consequent upon the double transhipment in its passage through Canada, by laying an intermediate or third rail between the Canadian railway gauge of 5 ft. 6 in., as was originally intended when the Great Western of Canada was designed. The American roads between New York and Boston and Chicago have shown their sense of the value of this facility by offering to contribute material aid towards the cost of its construction, which the company's engineers estimates to amount to 700,000 dols. The board does not hesitate to recommend that this outlay be undertaken, and that the details to be left to their discretion. The board are prepared to pay off the 6 per cent. bonds falling due October 15th next, or to renew them at the same rate of interest for a period of seven years.

AN AMERICAN TRAGEDY.

The Laporte (Indiana) Democrat contains a long account of the arrest of a man named Steitz, in that county, for a murder committed in August of 1861—nearly three years ago. Steitz was building a saw-mill a few miles north of Laporte, and had in the employment a man named Von Jessenda, both being Germans. These men had frequent quarrels about money, which Von Jessenda alleged that Steitz owed him for work done, and refused to pay. The two men during the warm weather were in the habit of sleeping in a hay mow. On the morning of the 19th of August the old quarrel was renewed, and the men got to scuffling in the straw, and finally both fell through to the barn floor, Von Jessenda not being yet dressed. He ran to the house, his hand bleeding, Steitz following him, and, as soon as he came within reach, struck him a severe blow on the head with an iron bar, knocking him down senseless. Being near the cellar-way when he fell, Steitz kicked him down into the cellar, and, fearing that his work was not fully accomplished, he followed down and pounded the body with a board for some time. The whole transaction at the house was witnessed by Mary Steitz, who was aroused from her sleep by the noise at the door. She endeavoured to dissuade her brother from his purpose, but he rudely thurst her back into another part of the room. After he had beaten the body for some time, he came out of the cellar, leaving the body where it fell. He then left the place, and did not return till the next day. As soon as Mary Steitz could dress herself and get ready, she went to a house where Jacob Frandsen was working, to whom she was engaged to be married. She told him all that had happened, and that she was afraid to remain there any longer unless he was there. They agreed to get married soon, possibly the next day. The day after the occurence they went back to the house, and remained there, Steitz also returned that day or the next, and the night after his return, Frandsen and Mary heard him working down in the cellar, and at one time heard a dead, heavy noise, like the falling of a heavy body, which they supposed to be caused by Steitz throwing the corpse into the grave which he dug for it. During the time he was occupied at the burial, he came up stairs four or five times, and drank whiskey in order to nerve himself for the work. The Frandsens agreed to say nothing about the matter, on account of the disgrace it would bring upon the family. But later Mary wrote to a sister, a Mrs. Brown, in Germany, stating what had occurred. After a time the Browns immigrated to Indiana, and an old quarrel between them and Steitz was renewed, when Brown threatened to expose the murder. Steitz dared him to do so. The Frandsens, fearing what had occurred, thought it was time to unveil the whole matter to the authorities, and upon their information Steitz was arrested. On digging in the cellar, only a small portion of the body was found. On being asked to make a clean breast of the matter, Steitz did so, stating that he had subsequently taken up the body and burned it.

HOW TO DIE PREMATURELY.

Begin life with flattering prospects; work hard and gain confidence. Be ambitious in bringing yourself forward and accomplish some end which will make you popular and help your name. Mingle with the eminent and honorable, and by your manners, your ambition, your talent, win the honor of becoming "one of them." Then, let some fancied cloud pass over your brow. Become dispirited, and let imaginary ills hover about you. Analyze in a false light every word, look, smile, that may be given by your most intimate friends, and discover in them a lenient coolness, dislike and irony. Quaff till your brain is bursting with excitement, and defy your fancied enemies to steal from your lips so sweet a friend. Drink day after day, until your potations are observed by others—till you win the name of a "jolly fellow"—till you stagger in the streets. Drink till your eyes are swollen and red, and the cheeks puff out. Mingle then with the low—drink there with the mean, and repulse the hand that would redeem you. When your purse gives out, tell your associates good-bye; speak of life as a miserably burlesque upon a better place, and that is the place too good for yourself. Totter along—feebleness no one on your way—still drinking on, borrowing funds; and off some cold morning, while the cocks are crowing, and busier, sensible people are getting to work, doing their share of the destiny of creation, be found lying up to the corner inside by some prominent gable end, sleeping the sleep that knows no waking. That's the way—we've seen it tried.

Curious Superstition among the Natives.

A curious superstition was spreading among the natives of Upper Wanganui, of which a resident gives the following account:—On the occasion of the fight at Atwaiwa, "Captain Lloyd's blood was drunk by the natives that killed him," and after having finished their orgies, they cut off his head and burned it. Next night the Archangel Gabriel is said to have appeared to those who had partaken of the blood, and desired them to disinter the head and dry it in the old Maori fashion, in order that the Captain's spirit, speaking through the head, might become the medium of communication between the Almighty and he carried through the island as a banner under which a crusade against the pakehas was to be preached. This was accordingly done, and the head is asserted to have spoken and propounded the new creed, as well as appointed Te Ua, of Ngaruawahi, Hapanapa, of Taranki, and Matene Rangiuira, of Waganui, as its chief priests. The following are the principal articles of the new faith. Pot professors were to be called "Peimaire" (good and peaceable) and the word "Boo," pronounced short, like the barking of a dog, was to be their sacred watchword, the rapid utterance of which would ward off all danger, even to the extent of causing aimed weapons to glance from their bodies in battle, and bullets aimed at them to change their course and rise into the air. The proselytes were to be initiated by drenching water in which the head had been dipped, or which had been poured over the head, and took an oath to destroy every white person without any distinction of age or sex; till all are killed or driven from the land. The professors of the new faith were to be under the special protection of the Virgin Mary, who would be personally present among them; and they were to be assisted in their task of driving out the pakeha by the Archangel Gabriel and hosts of angels; and as soon as the task was completed, these heavenly messengers were to teach them all arts and sciences known to the Europeans. The professors would be enabled to learn English or any other foreign language perfectly in one lesson by observing certain forms—simply standing for a given time in a certain position, under a flag of a peculiar color and pattern, hoisted on a flagstaff of certain dimensions. The priest assumed to have acquired this power, and Matene lately, when at Wanganui, got possession of a piece of newspaper in which some article purchased in town had been wrapped, and pretended to read it aloud in English, and afterwards translate it, and persuaded the chief so adroitly that one of the Wanganui assessors present, a very intelligent native, who from his boyhood has had intercourse with Europeans, was deceived into becoming a convert, and has since been deprived of his office in consequence. All the European creeds were to be regarded as false and done away with. All bibles and other books relating to them were to be destroyed; the observance of the Sabbath was to cease, all days being regarded as holy; and marriage and its obligations were to be dispensed with, in order that the race of believers might increase the faster, and become as the sands of the sea in multitude. The fact that the extraordinary powers promised have not been conferred was accounted for by its being necessary that the head should visit the whole island. How far the professors of the new creed and its priests have been self-deluded, it is hard to say; but the death of two out of the three leaders (Hapanaia at Sentry Hill, and Matene at Mouton) may cause the delusion to die out. Nevertheless, the importance of securing Captain Lloyd's head is obvious, as one may well be made of it for mischievous purposes by any native possessing ventriloquial powers.

JEALOUSY AND REVENGE.

The Paris Tribunal of Correctional Police has just tried a married woman, of respectable appearance, and about thirty years of age, on a charge of having wilfully injured a young needlewoman, named Giraud, by throwing a quantity of sulphuric acid on her face. The defendant who is the wife of an architect, was married in 1851, and lived happily with her husband until May last year, when she was informed by two anonymous letters that her husband had formed an illicit connection with the woman Giraud. In answer to the President's questions, the defendant stated that, on acquiring positive proof of her husband's infidelity, she used every means in her power to induce him to reform his conduct, but in vain, for he persisted in visiting his mistress, and spent on her the greater part of his income.—Unable to endure this treatment any longer, she determined to take vengeance on the person who was the cause of her wrongs, and, having procured a bottle of sulphuric acid, she watched her husband on the 7th June last, and saw him enter the woman Giraud's lodgings. After waiting a few minutes, she knocked at the door, and when it was opened by her rival, she threw into her face the acid which she had procured for the purpose. The consequence was that the woman was dreadfully burned, narrowly escaped the loss of one eye and will be disfigured for life. When the husband, who had been sub mised to a witness, stood forward to give evidence, the President said that he could not be heard against his own wife, and, after severely reproaching him for his conduct, ordered him to withdraw. The woman Giraud, who demanded 15,000 fr. damages, was also examined in Court, she pretended that she did not know her lover to be a married man, but this was disproved by positive evidence. After hearing counsel for the defence, the Tribunal declared the charge proved, but, owing to the extreme provocation endured by the prisoner, to only six days' imprisonment, 16fr. fine and 500 fr. damages.

Wonderful effects of Water-cure Principles.

A FEMALE TRANSFORMED INTO A MAN. The Utica Herald relates the following: About 5 year ago the wife of Mr. Z., a prominent citizen of the village of New Berlin, repaired to a fashionable water cure, in this State, for the purpose of undergoing a treatment of her bodily ailments, leaving the husband at home with a young woman as his housekeeper, in her absence. It was the good fortune of Mrs. Z., at the water cure, to secure the services of one of the nurses, whose name was Sallie M. Monroe, who was large, stout, handy and careful, and under her kind administration, Mrs. Z. soon so throve in health, that she was able to come back to New Berlin in a few months, essentially benefitted in condition. She brought home with her the faithful nurse, who continued to bathe and douche her in her own house. Miss M., also, under the recommendation of Mrs. Z., received similar services as a nurse, in the water-cure way, to several respectable ladies in that village, and was much esteemed for her skill and usefulness. In a few weeks Mrs. Z. discovered that, in her absence at the cure, her husband had been oblivious of his obligations in the matter of marital fidelity, and she is said to have indignantly commenced proceedings against him for a divorce. Mrs. Z. was a nice, good man, as the world goes, but not being able, unfortunately, to deny the particular impeachment, he made no defence, and permitted her, unopposed, to obtain a bill of final separation. Mrs. Z. was consoled during the progress of the divorce suit by the sympathies of her nurse, who was scarcely one minute from her side. But by-and-by Miss Monroe went away to New York upon business. She returned to New Berlin again this spring, metamorphosed and disguised—or rather undisguised, for she was clothed in the habiliments of a man throughout—hatted, booted breeched and bearded—looking, acting and being a veritable man. She was now Dr. Monroe, and her cards of business and visiting were "S. M. Monroe, M. D." In explanation of this grand 'presto change,' Sally alleged that it was only during her stay in New York city that her masculinity of soul had been made known to herself throughout the scientific examinations of distinguished surgeons! She had been a man all her life without knowing it. S. M. Monroe, M. D., at once commenced paying honorable attentions to Mrs. Z. as a lover. He was accepted—they were married by a clergyman at the village of Cooperstown, and left new man and wife in the christian town of New Berlin! There were some good women in the village of New Berlin also, who startled somewhat when the transformation was announced. Mr. Z. contemplating, under the advice of counsel, to take measures to open the divorce case and to knock the bottom out from under. Public feeling has softened a revulsion, and is now wholly on his side. He is well and favorably known in Utica. Incredible as the story is, it is nevertheless true, and is another realization of the remark,—"Truth is stranger than fiction."

MASONIC INCIDENT.—During the first raid of Morgan, the celebrated guerilla chief, (lately killed), into the State of Kentucky, about fifteen hundred Confederate soldiers—Texan Rangers—were quartered on the plantation of Col. Metcalf, near Carlisle. The Col. was absent from home in the Federal army. The only white persons upon the place were Mr. E. B. G., formerly of Stanstead, Eastern Townships, and his wife, who, at the time, were in charge of the plantation. Mr. G., in spite of all entreaties or representations, was seized and hurried off to Cane Ridge, about ten miles from Carlisle, Morgan's headquarters. After a brief interval he was sentenced to be hung as an Abolition spy. With tearful haste the gallows was erected and Mr. G. led out to execution—Looking around despairingly for succor, his eye chanced to fall upon Col. Gano, the leader of the band. Some happy impulse prompted him to give the Masonic sign of distress. No sooner had this been done than Col. Gano rushed forward with every mark of affectionate zeal—released Mr. G. from custody—assured him of his safety—and at once sent him home, accompanied with a guard of twenty soldiers to protect himself and family during the raid.

Mr. G., who existed these facts to-day, is well and favorably known to many of our Masonic readers.

THE CONFERENCE AND UNION.

The Conference at Quebec, we believe, is progressing favourably. The resolution asserting the expediency of a Union of the British American Provinces was assented to unanimously, indicating the spirit with which the delegates enter upon the work with which they are entrusted. The time has come when we must provide against weakness in our own position, as also against the danger of being observed by any power which might desire to do so, and which our divided and isolated positions would have rendered more easy than would be if united. The absence of intercommunication between the provinces had the effect of deadening whatever relationship, so to speak, there really existed; and the continuance of such a state of things would, no doubt, completely estrange even those who otherwise would be one people, both because of their consanguinity, and their common desire for continued connexion with England, which, to them, is a guarantee for liberty both civil and religious, such as union with no existing power would warrant them to hope for, or expect.

But are we to imagine that the Confederation, Federation, or Legislative Union, of these Provinces, or whatever other name we may choose to designate our Union by, promises to be arranged and completed without some opposition. Or are we to expect that all will be positive gain without any disadvantage or drawbacks? If so, we will find ourselves disappointed, at least, in some degree, and that in both these respects. Already we hear of a "feeling in Lower Canada" that seems to be in opposition to Legislative Union. As we have intimated before, Lower Canada is not likely to hold that preponderating influence in a Union of the whole Provinces that she did in the Legislative Union of Upper and Lower Canada. Nor is it likely she would be able to obtain that undue share of public funds which she has done, heretofore, for Lower Canada improvements and public works. We may, therefore, reasonably expect a little opposition. We think, however, such opposition will be found futile, and that even Lower Canada will assent to the wishes of the majority. There is great danger in giving way too much to gain the assent of malcontents. Our statesmen have need to look more to future stability and advantages than present conciliation. Our position is now one of the most critical, we are now about forming a constitution for what we hope to be a British Nationality in America. It is therefore of more importance to have rightly defined lines of liberty and justice in our New Constitution, than even present sectional satisfaction, for without these, complete liberty, political, civil and religious, and perfect justice to all concerned, no nation can stand — where these are not, discontent will grow up, and the seed of disruption, thus sown, will bear fruit in its season, as seen in the present state of the United States; and we believe no people were ever more of one mind on these points than the people of British North America are now, nor do we think any more favorable time for ensuring these blessings to all is likely to present itself in our future history. At the same time every local interest must be amply secured, every guarantee given in the constitution that the people of every nationality shall have their heart cherished custom respected, for more can be done by seeking to enlighten, and ennoble by educating, and respecting, than by enacting laws against what may appear injurious or pernicious in our customs or superstitions. And here it is where our legislatures will find the greatest difficulties. The Roman Catholic dreads every thing that appears like Union with protestantism, whether that Union be merely local or general; as, for instance, with what folly and disadvantage to themselves do they establish wherever they can, a system of separate Schools, which tends to separate the people in all these to some, if possible. Witness too, the restricted trade of Roman Catholic Countries, and the growing restriction, so to speak of their trade, as protestantism increases, which may, in some degree, be traced to their dread of commingling with any unless those of their own creed. In giving way to this feeling in regard to Lower Canada, they may grant them too much, or in restricting them too closely they make them discontented, or in giving them too much, British protestants among them may not receive that protection they require yet, notwithstanding some parties may suffer we are persuaded the most reasonable and satisfactory way will be to leave the local affairs to local or Provincial legislation. The general assembly of the Federation taking cognizance of those matters that more or less concern all. It would manifestly be unjust to any one Province to be restricted in matters of local improvement or outlay by any other, or to be forced in any way to bear the expenses of merely local matters of any other but its own. We would, under such a state of things, be no better than before, but worse; and to talk of a "double majority" is mere twaddle. It is impossible to work such a system, and we could only be providing trouble to make any provisions for it in regard to local matters. Every form of Government has its weak points Hence to talk of Federation being a failure because of its weakness in the United States, in the eyes of some, shows that they who talk so, attribute to Federation what ought to have been attributed to Slavery in part, and the absence of properly defined lines of State privileges or rights, showing when State sovereignty commenced and when it ended. The first evil we have not and the second we can remedy without any connection. To talk of Legislative Union without the grievances of the past exhibits a degree of short sightedness that very few would be willing to be knowing. In a Legislative Union, local as well as general matters would necessarily have to be attended to, and could we expect that members from the West would understand the requirements of the West, or Members of the West be able to decide what would be best for the East. And should the far West seek and obtain a majority and when sitty would it be to talk of a general Assembly legislating on local matters for Vancouver Island, and British Columbia. The folly of such a scheme is visible on the very face of it. The more completely each province has the management of its own affairs the more stable will be the Union—the more united the people.

AMERICA.

There is no particular change in the operations round Richmond. Grant is said to be entrenching his position, building Forts, and cutting a canal, and until these are completed, no move of importance may be expected. The Confederates, however, are said to be massing their cavalry with the supposed intention of making a dash on the Federal forces on the Weldon Railroad.

Hood's army is in the neighborhood of Dalton, 70 miles from Atlanta, and about 25 from Chattanooga. This has caused considerable alarm, as this is one of the principal depots for Sherman. He is said to be closely followed by Sheridan.

At Charleston, yellow fever is making its ravages. Col. Harris, Chief Engineer of Beauregard's staff has fallen by it.

Beauregard assumed the command in Georgia on the 7th.

There has been great sensation in Baltimore caused by the seizing and closing, by orders from the War Department, of a number of large business houses, no definite cause is assigned, but they are said to be because of contraband trade and mail carrying to the Rebels.

Maryland is henceforth to be a free State. The new constitution has been adopted. In the Election contests the victory is claimed by both parties, but the returns are not yet complete.

To all appearances Lincoln's re-election is certain, unless Grant makes some false move. From the tone of the American press we would suspect the excitement to be intense in reference to the Presidential campaign. The war never is nothing abated and from the advanced state of the season, we may expect another year of its continuance, as the belligerents will, no doubt, be soon forced to provide winter quarters.

Henry Ward Beecher, announces to his congregation that he will preach politics on Sundays until election.

The following is from rebel sources:—

FROM BELOW RICHMOND.

From the Richmond Dispatch. Oct. 12.

Yesterday, although the day was propitious for military movements, all continued quiet, and from the lostiest Confederate lookout nothing could be seen but the line of blue blouses plying the shovel and pick; for "dig, dig, dig," is the Yankee motto, as though they were tearing up Virginia's green bosom to spite her noble sons who withstand them so valorously. Many of the miscreants are doubtless unwittingly, but voluntarily, digging their own well earned graves.

FROM PETERSBURG.

The situation in front and around Petersburg is unchanged. Every indication points to the Boydton plank road as the next point of attack by the enemy. They appear to be preparing for a move. The federals in that quarter are engaged in their favorite pastime of burning houses and maltreating non combatants.

We learn from the Petersburg Express that desertera still come into our lines in considerable numbers. Not long since the desertions from a New Hampshire regiment became so frequent and alarming that it had to be removed and another from the same state moved to the front in its stead. Ere the lapse of many days the same condition of things was observable in the new regiment, which was supplanted at once by a loyal command from the abolition State of Massachusetts. From this last regiment the desertions became more frequent than before, and now it is said to have been relieved by a fourth.

Chief Justice Taney of the Supreme Court of the United States is dead.

We have to apologise to the Branchmen of Protection Fire Company, of Peterborough, for not noticing at an earlier day, and, also, thanking them for their kindness and hospitality on a recent occasion. The chair was occupied by Capt. McNaughton. There were about fifty persons, principally firemen, present. After discussing the relative merits of the different good things provided, orders were given to "make ready" for the first toast—not "Jump her, boys, jump her"—but that one which is always drank by British subjects on all occasions, viz.: "Our Gracious Queen." The other loyal toasts having been disposed of satisfactorily, in their order, the toast of the evening was proposed, also from the Chair, viz.: "Our Hosts;" this was the signal for tremendous cheering and wild applause. After silence had been restored, Mr. W. H. Wrighton, 1st Branchman, rose to respond—which he did in a neat, elegant, pithy, and eloquent speech. Messrs. Kincaid and Geo. Mitchell, 2nd and 3rd Branchmen, also responded. The proceedings were enlivened by the presence of Prof. Jenkinson's performance on a Harmonium, provided for the occasion. A Glee Club was, also, present, composed of Messrs Bradbeer, C. Philp, Wrighton, Brophy, Jas. Kennedy and others, who performed a variety of comic and sentimental songs—all of which made it one of the most pleasant and agreeable evenings ever spent.

The Peterborough Fire Company appears to be a "permanent fixture," and it cannot well be otherwise, from the character and respectability of its members. It is composed principally of young men who have, comparatively speaking, little stake in the Town, but who are ready and willing at all times to leave their respective avocation, and in the dead of night their slumbering couch, exposed to the angry winds and storms—braving the fierce and frowning elements for the purpose of protecting the property, and, perhaps, the life of some unfortunate fellow citizen. As members of a community they are beyond reproach—humane, kind, and charitable; as Firemen, prompt, ready, willing, and energetic on the first call of the "tocsin." We are informed that it is the intention to establish a Debating Society in order that the young men may find a more edifying way of spending the dull monotonous winter evenings than loafing promiscuously "about town"—thus making it not only a Company for the preservation of life and property, but an institution for the propagation of intelligence, knowledge and usefulness. We wish them every success.

ACCIDENT.—A portion of the rank below the citadel in Quebec, fell on Thursday last. Three houses were smashed to pieces, four of the inmates were killed and two others severely injured.

SCRAPICISM.

"This useful and interesting exhibition opens in the Victoria Hall to-night. From the reading we have seen in our Montreal exchanges, we are satisfied that the account was very interesting and well calculated to enlighten the inhabitants of temperance and morality.

The following testimonial is from the Wesleyan Minister at Cumsmere, who had the pleasure of seeing the panorama last Saturday evening at that place:—

"This evening I have had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Vezey's Panorama. I consider the exhibition of those paintings calculated to impress the mind with a sense of the awful effects of vice, and to lead persons to awake up to the claims of morality and virtue. Those of young Lee convey a lesson to the teacher and the taught, and thus cannot fail to impress the mind of the young, and may tend to the reclaiming of even the abandoned drunkard.

J. C. PHILP,
Wesleyan Minister.
Cumsmee, October 15th, 1864."

NARROW ESCAPE.—The furniture warerooms of Mr. John Brown had a narrow escape of being burned on Monday evening last. About eight o'clock the attention of some people who were passing was directed to the building by the reflection of a light through a window, in the third story, the doors were broken in and by the aid of a few pails of water the fire was easily put out. The Fire Company were promptly on the ground but their services were not required. It is supposed the fire was the work of an incendiary.

ROWDYISM.—There appears to be a spirit of rowdyism prevailing in our midst which ought not to be tolerated. On Saturday night last some of these prowlers took a gate from the yard of Mr. James Best on Water Street, thereby allowing cattle to get into his garden and destroying the trees &c. On Monday morning the side path on the Bridge crossing the river was strewed with boards which had been torn therefrom.

THE NORTH LANARK 'ADVANCE'.—Through Omission, we neglected to notice the receipt of the first number of a Journal with the above name, published in Almonte, in the County of Lanark. It professes to be "Liberal Reform," is neatly printed, contains a good share of reading matter, and its editorial indicates ability. We wish the Advance every success.

ROOM PAPERS, &c.—Wm. N. Kennedy has removed his room paper depot to the store next door to the Stewart House, on Hunter Street, where he is receiving a large stock of Room Paper, Decorations, &c. Having bought them at reduced prices, he is prepared to sell them at a great reduction on former rates.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

A LETTER FROM THE WAR.

Head Quarters Cavalry Forces,
MORGANZA, Sept. 14th, 1864.

FRIEND BROCK,—When I left home, nearly a year ago, I promised you that I would write to you soon and often—but how have I kept that promise? Not at all, for I have not even penned a word to you, previous to this, and I am almost ashamed to do so now. To enter into any detail as regards my life, or how I live, would, I think, be simply useless—for you must have heard from my father everything with regard to that. But here I stop and say: What shall I write? Ah! I have it: I will give you a brief illustration of the battle of Pleasant Hill, which occurred on the 9th of April, 1864.

On the 8th of April some six or seven thousand of our troops were met by an overwhelming force of the rebels; a conflict instantly took place at a small town which went by the name of Sabine Cross Roads, which resulted in our troops being driven back to the main army at Pleasant Hill. Preparations were immediately made for a coming engagement. Batteries of cannon were planted, rifle pits were dug, regiments were stationed, and everything went on all night as lively as possible. In the morning trenches in front of the cannon were filled with men and covered with fresh cut grain, so that the glasses of rebels could not see—that before they could take these batteries they would have to encounter 10,000 bayonets. About 10 o'clock the enemy advanced, shelling the woods as they slowly felt their way. About noon their skirmishers discovered our position. The slope and field in front of our batteries was about one mile in length and half a mile wide. On the edge of this field the rebels threw out batteries and regiments, but no sooner were they seen than they brought on them a rain of death; the regiments were swept away like chaff—the horses at the guns were killed—cannon dismounted—and the carriages blown utterly to pieces. About 4 o'clock the first column advanced with slow and steady steps toward our batteries, but as soon as it reached the middle of the field they were met by such an iron tempest that few lived to reach the shelter of the woods. A second column were seen advancing with rapid steps towards our death-dealing cannon; hundreds were mown down, but the remainder pressed on; another sheet of fire lighted up the scene, and the iron hail was more than they could stand, and into the woods they went. About 6 o'clock column after column was thrown rapidly into the field: with shouts and yells they pressed towards our cannon; many pieces were opened upon them, and shell and grape went tearing through their lines; treading on the dead, they, with unwavering steps, still came on over the field of carnage; every discharge of our guns made great gaps in their lines, but closing up they pressed forward. Already they had began to ascend the slope; just then up sprang the men in the pits and a stream of fire darted from thousands of muskets, and dashing forward met the foe: without wavering, they continued the conflict, but it was in vain—they were unable to bear up under the impetuous attack of our men—they turned and fled in utter confusion. On the fleeing columns our batteries continued to play with frightful effect, until they were beyond our reach.

Don't fancy when you read this that you have seen a battle field, for it is impossible for the mind to pourtray without the eye seeing, what a battle is between two contending forces—the sight is one of terror and appalling splendor. Our regiment suffered severely during the day; six were wounded out of my company, and some company's lost more. We have had fighting, more or less, before and since then, but none so severe. Our Colonel is at present at Saratoga, very badly wounded. My life here is one of ease, but dangerous, not so much from the enemy as it is from disease: men are constantly dying at the rate of one per regiment every day.

CHARLES E. SHAW.

WHOLE number of sheep in Ohio—4,500,000, and this years wool will be 19,000,000 pounds, worth $15,000,000. Throughout the West the Farmers are taking the money they get for the wool and investing it in more sheep, as wool growing is very profitable just now.

The Brantford Courier, says that Dr. Bown, M. P. is seriously ill; he has been attending to the relief of a number of emigrants who are suffering from ship or typhus fever, and he to is now lying in the worst state of the fever, there being little hope of his recovery.

GREAT SALE OF JEWELRY.—We have just inspected, at the office of Arrandale & Co.'s Agency for European Manufacturing Jewelers, a large assortment of fashionable and valuable jewelry, consisting of gold and silver watches, chains, bracelets, ladies' sets, rings, &c., all of the newest and most fashionable patterns. We also noticed a large quantity of silver plate, consisting of goblets and drinking cups, cruet-stands, fruit-baskets spoons, forks, &c. We understand that the whole of these newly-imported articles are to be disposed of on a novel principle, giving great advantages to buyers, and affording extensive employment to agents. Our readers will find all particulars in our advertising columns; and as we know the firm in question to be very respectable, and thoroughly worthy of public confidence, we recommend our friends to read their advertisement.—N. Y. Albion, Sept. 3, 1864.

THE CROPS AND PRICES OF 1864.

Barley, in September last, brought an average of 60 cents per bushel of 48 lbs. in Toronto, or equal to 50 10 per 56 lbs. whilst [illegible] was only [illegible] per 60 lbs. [illegible] Spring wheat, the difference [illegible] 40 cents more, since the [illegible] little [illegible] the difference still 10 per cent in favor of barley, as compared with Spring wheat. This shows a most unusual advantage for the cultivation of barley; but, if farmers generally were to sow all barley, and little or no wheat, the relative prices would very probably change.

Now it is estimated by those most conversant with the grain trade, that the crop of barley in the two Canadas this year is about six millions of bushels, of which five millions will go to the States. This, at the estimated net return of only 80 cents in gold, will yield four millions of dollars in gold, which would be a very sensible relief to our monetary and financial interests.

It will thus be seen that in this year, which is generally deemed a dull one, the barley interests is remarkably prosperous; and we may add, that no other kind of grain is very depressed. Wheat is bringing about an average price. Peas and oats are higher than usual. Wool and butter have brought high prices, and there is no domestic interest suffering severely, except the lumber trade; though, this is a very important one.

A merchant from the townships informs us that there is a great deal of money coming in there from the States for butter and other produce, and the crops have been generally good. He sees no cause for complaint this season.

If we turn from home products to the import trade, we find no overstocks of any kind to speak of, except, perhaps, teas and dry goods; and of these, the overstocks are confined to Montreal, and are mostly in hands that will not sacrifice much, being able to hold for another year.—Montreal Witness.

MR. DISRAELI ON THE AMERICAN WAR.—In the course of his speech at Aylesbury on Wednesday, Mr. Disraeli, referring to the American war, said:—With regard to the civil war in America, I would rather not say much. But when it broke out I was dining at a table of a similar character—I think in Buckingham. Great anxiety was manifested to know what would happen in America, and I took the opportunity of saying—being obliged to give my opinion—that that war would be a very long war. The general idea was that it would be a very short war, and the American Minister of State announced it as a war of ninety days. I ventured to say that it would be a long war, because the causes of that war had been for a long time in preparation. I therefore did not believe that it would be a short war, and the causes of that war are causes that do not lead to short wars. The emancipation of a race, the creation or the defence of national independence, or the maintenance of a great empire—when causes of this kind lead people to enter into war they must not be confounded with those comparatively small causes which have brought about the generality of European wars in modern times. (Hear, hear.) When nations go to war to what they call retain a frontier, or employ an army, these are causes necessarily of a brief duration, because their frontier is rectified or not, and the army which wants to be employed has either a sufficient number shot or promoted, and peace naturally takes place. But the issues in the American war are vast and profound, and it is not to be supposed, when men enter into struggles of that kind, they will throw them aside like children tired of a new toy. I therefore have great hesitation in believing—I cannot bring myself to believe that we are so near peace in America as is supposed. The fact is that there are occasions when the destinies of nations demand wars, when war is the only solution of difficulties which perplex the ordinary means of human wit, and the struggle in America is a war of this kind. I do not look upon the peace demonstrations that we have read in the new-papers, although some have operated them as proofs that we are near a settlement, as anything than mere electioneering devices.

A CHEMICAL IMPOSTOR.—A clerical Impostor and swindler has lately been practising upon certain people in Kingston, and through a mistaken good nature is not denouncing him to the police, he has got off scot free, he none the less deserves exposure. The person came here and represented himself as a Baptist clergyman, and furnished a number of most excellent recommendations, the only drawback to their value being that they were forgeries. He offered to relieve the Rev. Mr. Waits, of the Baptist Church, for two weeks, and preached once during the minister's absence. The man ingratiated himself into the good graces of Mr. D. D. Calvin, took tea at the family table, and was requested by Mr. Calvin to lecture to the people of Garden Island. The reverend gentleman, however, said he had an engagement to Kingston which he must prefer, and returned to the city to carry it out. His "engagement" consisted in "raising the wind" by a speculator but not so honest a process as lecturing to the Islanders. In short, he took the criminal step of forging an order for ten dollars on the proprietor of the Burnett House, using the name of the firm, Calvin & Brock, as a signature in a letter purporting to come from Mr. Calvin. He also got twelve dollars from the exchange office of Mr. Jones, on a forged order of Mrs. Watts, and borrowed money from another person, who suspecting something wrong, demanded back his money under threat of exposure. The fellow promptly repaid, but immediately decamped. He is supposed to have gone to the United States, whence he came. Here he gave his name as the "Rev. M. Armstrong," but he is known to have taken the names of "Armitage" and "Taylor" as well, and probably will adopt other aliases to serve his nefarious operations. The man is clever, but an utter scoundrel. The sermon he preached is said to have been eloquent and sermon-like.—Kingston News, 5th inst.

NEW WHARF AND ELEVATOR.—The enterprising firm of J. G. Beard & Sons, in order to enable them the better to carry on their extensive business, have found it necessary to construct a new wharf and grain elevator. These works are situated in rear of St Lawrence market, and when finished will be an addition to the harbour. The wharf is a fine substantial structure, being composed of very heavy timbers and first-class pine plank. Its total length is something over six hundred feet. On the extreme outer end of it stands the new elevator. This building is constructed of oak and pine, is 62 by 76 feet in size and when roofed in will be about 100 feet in height. Its foundation consists of 240 piles, driven together in gangs of nine, each group being firmly bound with iron bands and rods. These piles are protected by a large square crib filled with earth, stone, and scrap iron from the Rolling Mills. The general plan of the building is similar to that of the Grand Trunk elevator recently destroyed by fire, the bins being composed of two inch pine planks, about ten inches in width, laid flat on each other, each plank projecting about two and a half inches over the outer edge of the one immediately beneath it, thus making the bins assume the form of a V. The whole structure is bound together with iron rods, and will be made fire-proof by being covered with Canada plates on the outside. There will be room for about 175,000 bushels of grain in the bins, while in the storeroom beneath several hundred barrels of flour can be placed. The total cost of the wharf and elevator will be from $30,000 to $40,000. The work is being superintended by Mr. Daniel McDonald, who expects to have the store ready for the reception of grain by the setting in of winter.—Globe.

POTATOES.—The Boston Traveler says that potatoes have been offered in Boston at eighty cents a bushel. The price of potatoes in New York, last week, was upwards of three dollars a bushel.

The number of persons convicted in the Recorder's Court at Montreal, of offences during the week, was 214.

CONTEST TOWARDS THE LOWER PROVINCE DISEASES.—

[illegible] Province of Canada, [illegible] the Maritime Provinces [illegible] Newfoundland, a letter from [illegible] Esquire, Manager of the Colonial Life Assurance Company, dated Halifax, Nova Scotia, 4th February, 1864, having been [illegible] Company's Office [illegible] till the [illegible] remember most cordial terms] [illegible] and other gentlemen—on motion of Hugh Munro, A. Mackenzie, seconded by [illegible] Mitchell, [illegible] "That this handsome letter be entered on the minutes, and that the thanks of the delegates be tendered to Mr. Brydges, and that Dr. Tupper, as the chairman of the meeting, be requested to convey the same to him accordingly." This act of courteous liberality on the part of Mr. Brydges will meet with unanimous approval.—Quebec Chronicle.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The cooling of the medical schools are constrained to admit that Holloway's Pills banish disease from the stomach, liver and bowels, without reducing the strength of the patient. This is the greatest medical triumph of the nineteenth century. Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York and No. 244 Strand, London, and by all druggists. If the nearest of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, 80 Maiden Lane, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on any other person's make. 25c., 62½c., and $1 per box.

SICKNESS IN THE ARMY

In the 8th Maine, 32d New York, 2d Rhode Island, 2d Maine, 2d Vermont, 9th New York, 3d, 4th, and 8th Pennsylvania, several Michigan, Indiana and Wisconsin regiments, Sickles' Brigade, and over 100 other regiments, have acknowledged, through their surgeons and officers, that RADWAY'S READY RELIEF have scores of times saved the lives of soldiers when all other remedies failed. Sergeant C. P. Lord, of the 8th Maine, Dr. Tingley of Sickles' Brigade, Capt. Whitlock of the 32d New York, Genl. Hall of Sickles' Brigade, and hundreds of others, testify that Radway's Ready Relief, in every case where it has been used in the diseases incidental to exposure of climate, perfected cures where the surgeons of the regiments could do nothing. Let every soldier procure this remedy.

THE ARMY WORM.—This pest is making sad havoc among the wheat and other crops, in various parts of the country, and we are unable to advise as to the best means of getting rid of them; but for the cure of colds, rheumatism, Burns, Cramps, Pains, Neuralgia, and all pains of the body, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is decidedly the best. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, price 25 cts per bottle.

CARRY THEM FOR YOUR DEFENSE.—A box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers can be carried in your vest pocket. They stop a cough in five minutes, and sore throat in an hour, and cure a cold in one day. 25 cents a box. At all druggists.

OXYGENATED BITTERS.

Testimony from J. C. Barter, Collector of the Port of Ogdensburg, New York.

Gentlemen,—I had been much afflicted, for the greatest part of the year ending at last midsummer, with a singular derangement of the bowels connected with occasional attacks of Dyspepsia. During the last summer, I accidentally took up a paper containing testimonials respecting your Oxygenated Bitters. In one instance, where relief had followed their use, I found my own symptoms and condition so accurately described, that it determined me upon trying them. I accordingly procured, and have used several bottles; and find la renovated strength and health, satisfactory evidence, that in my case they have accomplished all that I could wish.

Very respectfully, your ob'dt servant,
J. C. BARTER.

None genuine unless signed I. BUTTON on the wrapper.

A Life Without Tea.

A Scotch minister, who cared about no nonsensical things (except now and then a raspberry tart, of heathens might cross his mind), on one occasion being taken seriously ill, called in the doctor, and notwithstanding him first "not to draw a long bill, for he couldna afford it," offered him the nature of his complaint. After feeling the patient's pulse, looking at his tongue, tapping his chest, &c., the doctor declared that he was starving himself.

"Keep, doctor," said the minister, "ye're a witch; for Jeanie (his housekeeper) gaed awa two days sine, and I've no had a pickle o' brose sine."

"Why, minister, mon, ye maun hae some beef tea."

"Lord, doctor, I hae nae tea in the house, nor beef neither; ye maun be a fool to think o' finding ony here."

"Well, minister, I'll send ye some beef tea doon."

The doctor sent down the beef tea, and next day called to see how his patient was getting on.

"Well, minister, how are you the day?"

"Heigh, mon, I'm awfu' bad; of a' the physick I ever took in my life, the beef tea beats a'. Why, mon, it wadna stay wi' me ava; it made me worse than my mettick."

"Why, minister, I'll try the beef tea myself."

So, putting some in a skillet, he warmed it, tasted it, and told the minister that it was excellent.

"Man," says the minister, "is that the way you sup it?"

"What other way should it be supped? It's excellent, I say, minister."

"It may be gude that way, doctor, but try it wi' the cream and sugar, man! try it wi' that, and see how ye like it."

H. CALCUTT'S Compound Liquid Cooler & Heater!

PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.

I am also prepared to supply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel,

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

T. QUINLAN.

South Granby, C. W.
Mr. Henry R. Grey,
Chemist, Montreal.

Sir,—I am most happy to state that my wife used Henry's Vermont Liniment, having accidentally got a needle run under her finger nail. The pain was most intense: but by using the Liniment, the pain was gone in a few minutes.

Yours very respectfully,

W. GIBSON.

Messrs. Henry & Co.

Having on various occasions used your Liniment, I am happy to say that I have always found it beneficial. I have frequently used it for Bowel Complaint, and I have never known it to fail in effecting a cure. I think it the best medicine I ever used for Diarrhœa, summer complaint, and disorders of a similar character I have also found it a never failing specific for Colds, and for affections of the head. I always recommend it to my friends, and would not be without it in the house for any consideration.

W. BALDWIN.

N. H. DOWN'S VEGETABLE BALSAMIC ELIXIR.

A CERTAINTY WORTH A MILLION.

An Old Physician's Testimony.

READ!

Waterbury, Vt.,
Nov. 24th, 1858

Although I do not like the practice of Physicians recommending indiscriminately the patent medicines of the day; yet after a trial of ten years, I am free to admit that there is one medicine before the public that any Physician can use in his practice, and recommend to the public with perfect confidence: that medicine is Rev. N. H. Down's Vegetable Balsamic Elixir.

I have used it myself with the very best success, and now, whenever I am troubled with a Cough or Cold, I invariably use it. I can cheerfully recommend it to all who are suffering from a Cold or a Cough, for the Croup, Whooping Cough, and all diseases tending to consumption, and to the Profession as a reliable article.

I am satisfied of its excellence beyond a doubt, having conversed personally with the Rev. N. H. Downs about it. He informed me of the principal ingredients of which the Elixir is composed, all of which are purely Vegetable and perfectly safe.

J. B. WOODWARD, M.D.
Now Brigade Surgeon U. S. Army.

This old, time-tried, standard remedy still maintains its popularity. When all others have proved inefficient, the Elixir alone continues to give satisfaction.—Use it for

COUGHS,
COLDS,
CATARRH,
ASTHMA,
CROUP,

Incipient Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

Thirty years ago the Elixir first made its appearance; and even then, in its primitive and imperfect state, produced such extraordinary results that it became, at once, a general favourite. Many have made it, what it really is, a Family Medicine.

For as more than half the diseases to which flesh is heir, originate from colds, so this may be considered a general preventive of all diseases, by removing the primeval cause.

ADULTS

Should always keep this Family Physician at hand; and by its timely use save hundreds of dollars that would otherwise be swallowed up in discharging doctor's fees.

☞ Sold at every Drug and country store throughout Canada.

Price 25cts., 50cts., $1 pr. Bottle.

ARE YOU IN AGONY?

A WELL SPRING OF HOPE FOR ALL!

CAN BE FOUND IN

Holloway's Pills.

Be of Good Cheer! The Sinking may be Saved!

BY THE USE OF

Holloway's Ointment.

THE history of these great Remedies is the most wonderful medical revelation that the world has ever known. It establishes the all important fact that wherever, and in whatever stage internal disease exists, the distributing, searching and healing properties of the Pills are fully equal to its subjection and cure, and that, with the Ointment, they are,

The Great Ambassadors of Health to all Mankind.

This is not a history thrown up with toils, or even derived from the experience of the patient. It consists of a compilation of testimonials from the chief of every country—an irrefragable record, the like of which has never before appeared in favor of any discovery or invention since time began.

These Mighty Healers, World Known and World Tried are a Boon to the Sick.

The want of a medicine that will purify the blood, and one entirely free from mineral and other deleterious properties, was entirely felt till this all powerful medicine was ushered into the world. Holloway's Ointment has here become the unanimous theme of all nations. Their attribute is to embrace as well as to cure; they attack the cause or seat of the complaint, and then, by removing the hidden cause of disease, re-instate the whole system, causing nature to be her task of work and rejoice by the restoration.

Disorders of the Stomach

are the sources of the deadliest maladies. Their effect is to vitiate all the fluids of the body, and to spread a poisoned stream through all the channels of circulation. Now, what is the operation of the Pills? They cleanse the stomach, regulate the liver, bring the relaxed or irritable stomach into a natural condition, and, acting through the secretive organs upon the blood, cause, change the state of the system from sickness to health, by exercising a simultaneous and wholesome effect upon all its parts and functions.

Woman in all her Difficulties

is invited to test the regulating and restorative powers of this harmless but effective preparation. At the two epochs of life in which the female system undergoes the most important and critical changes, the Pills will prove a positive safeguard against evil consequences. They are also confidently recommended as a specific in every disorder to which females are exclusively subject.

Be it Understood,

That the above statements can at all times be verified by the written testimony (extending through a quarter of a century) of tens of thousands of unimpeachable witnesses.

Bilious Maladies, &c., &c.

In whatever form disease attacks the liver, it is repelled and exterminated by this searching, painless, and irresistable remedies. Bilious remittents, bilious purging, and all the ordinary disorders of the organ, indicated by pain in the right side and between the shoulders, yellowness of the whites of the eyes, weakness and debility, &c., are relieved and removed by the remedy, with a celerity which astonishes the sufferers and their friends. Let the sick whom the faculty have abandoned,

OLD ABE IS GOOD TO CRACK A JOKE.

Air—Johnny Fill up the Bowl.

Old Abe is good to crack a joke,
Brighto, hooigno!
He has as glorious pic-nic gotten,
Brighto, says I!
But there's no cause to jubilate his cabinet crumble
And though he's hard to beat over Little Mac,
Yet we will go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

Our eagle for Abe sharp beak may do,
Brighto, hooigno!
But pigeon—most of all their corps,
Brighto, says I!
Then we, confederates, wise you whisht,
Lest for the nigger here to fight,
Oh, we all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

"We've broken the rebellion's back,"
Brighto, hooigno!
Bill Seward always he heard it crack,
Brighto, says I!
His stump some broke on three years ago,
But we see the tale of slaughter slow,
And we all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

No end of the war can ever come,
Brighto, hooigno!
We shall hear the roll of the mud'roon drum,
Brighto, says I!
Until at the head of all we place
The chosen chief of a manful race,
And we all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

Four millions of dollars every day,
Brighto, hooigno!
For the nigger war we are forced to pay,
Brighto, says I!
The arm of valor and battle
Are driven to make every freeman fool,
We should all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

To Sherman, Farragut, and Grant,
Brighto, hooigno!
Who up their ever conquered cities plant,
Brighto, says I!
We'll fill the bumper and pledge the toast,
And to serve them the end they need the most,
We all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

With Mac at the head of our weaponed clans,
Brighto, hooigno!
No "political dodger" would mar their plans,
Brighto, says I!
And then face Parroust, Sharman, Grant,
Declare that Mac is the chief they want."
And we all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

To all our heroes in the field,
Brighto, hooigno!
Knowing how to use, but not to yield,
Brighto, says I!
We fill the bumpers and pledge the toast,
And to give them the end they need the most,
We all go Mac inland—
Johnny, fill up the bowl!

TERRY FINNEGAN'S LETTERS.

(From the Latch-Key.)

To the Hon. Mosher McGee, down at Quebec, Minnesther of Agriculthure or elsewhere.

STANLY STREET, 14th Octr., 1864

So yez are all sittin down there wid closed doores! Well, begarra, small blame to yez, if any; bekase some of yez, at laste, will cut a handsome figger in regard to the same coi-feiberashun that's goin to pave the shtreets wid goold, if not make turkeys chew tobacco and swallows build their nists in ould man's beards. Sorra may care, any way, for the divil a bit of me's atected but you and John A., will build your own in so far as the tongue and an ould thrick goes; and you know very well that under exisin circumstances, that's aquel to playin the knave or the five fingers when your last tuppony bit is on the table. What I have been thinkin of lately, howsomdever, is, that mayor John A., or the President of the Council may out-run you for the bit of the ribbon or in your race after Frank Hincks by the way of Barbadoes,—they ben Scotch, d'ye persave, and havin somethin like a tail to their coats, while you wear a very "round-about;"—and a tail, d'ye understand, aquel to a kite, is very, very useful in a journey of this descripshun. Of course, bad luck to the thing short of a Prence will do you, if not a rale out and out King intirely. I wonther that you're not satisfied wi a simple viceroy, it works so well in Irelaud; and besides, y-u see, if we had that a me and a Castle here, you might manage to secure a nice little inthrance of your own,—a privilege which O'Brennan, of the "Connaught Patriot," intimates you enjoyed in Dublin upon very comfortable terms, and at a period, too, when most of your friends were playin "hide and go seek" wid the Saxon authorities of Ireland. Be St. Dunos, I never directed it, Darcy; nor do I up to this present hour, whatever your inquiry may say on the subject; forgetful and all as you some times are. I can't bleeve that there's even one dhrop in your body anthcue to the dearest inthrests of the ould, ancient sod. There's for you, me bouchal; and be garvarry I say what I think.

I see by the names in the papers, that yez haven't many Irish down amongst yez there just now, although our mutuous creed is decently represinted. Prince Edward Island is particularly fortshunate in this connexion, it havin sint to the Conference a Pope and a Palmer; so that yez wont want a scallop shell if you're short of tumblers at night, or absolu-hun in the morain when you are repentin wid your eyes shtrin in out of your head and a couple of quarts of tale forninst you in a mash. Maybe I'm not up to the mishanah! In troth, then, it's I that am; for many a time I sat down to a jigget hot breakfast of saw-dust, wid my tongue rattlin in my mouth like one of Fanny Elsler's castenetts, and I begin to relisen the conversation of a sympathetic friend across the table, who, wid a pale-faced timge of melancholy morality, was descantin upon some presumed defects in the constthruction of the human stomach, and the wretched state of his appetite. Och! me jewel, but I'm the boy that knows the inmost outs of it; and that, many and many a time, had a boxin match in my sleep wid a goggle-eyed chap sixteen foot high, as black as the ace of spades and wid every tooth in his head big enough to make a doore for a duck-house.—Thiggintha?

Do you ever get a letter from home, now? Faix I suppose you dont; for it is very little time you have to correspond wid your friends, barrin when you're out; as which inthrests prevint I lave you always sthrap an affectionate line to the upper strathum of them; but as you must get through the brickin shall, had ever to the very hazy they keep you even then. Of coorse, people up here, that used to have money a plinty, and you afore you got enough out of, injured your economary, "ah ave magna ad mala" as poor Busby Mullingsaid to on, when he was about to substitute for a Roman exposi, a duck egg and a couple of bangels for the Gracchi, I say, they cant expect to be bother thrated then those that first taught you how to blacken a lorrin wid your pastres; although the ever-shamed schoolmasth goes round, under the shape of the Catholic clergy, to make them so.

Catholic's alive at laste. Upon my conshinse, when all is said and done, I think you are not far out in not bein over profuse wid your pin. "Litthera scripta manent," as I have often told you afore and b ne sowl. I dont wonther at your not likin to see the ghost of what you say or do, upon paper. And another thing, avourneen, and what I never mintioned till now, and that is, that I have a letter or so from the late archbishop Hughes of New York, on the subject of this writin, which would intherest you very much if you only saw it, and maybe prompt yourself to fight shyer still of an ink-bottle than you have ever done yet, wid all your cunshun.

I'll not confuse you wid any more of my gnatther at present, but I'll ax you to purshue as quietly and as honestly as circumstances will admit the arduous labors in which you are now engaged. It's a pity poor Mike is not wid you bow-smasher, for its lonely you'll be so that fir-in crowd that'll be about you either hours. I wonther will you be able to get fair play for us at all—if you think of it. Hair, I have my doubts in that same relashun, not only bekase your own imminory is gettin a little short but I'm beginnin to have my mi-givins of John A.'s himself, touchin some grievances that he well knows ought to have been remedied long and long ago. Hups! yer soul you!—the divil may care; there is as good fish in the sea as ever was caught; and any man, nomatther what his creed or country, that attempts while in power to exercise through caprice-acea or design, on this side of the atlantic, any three son of the sod who may have honest and regen claims upon him, by the bones of O'Oncell, he shall suffer the pains and penalties of many a bittther hour, nomatther how walled in by wealth or po-sesshun, or sustained by jaun or edicashun.—I think that'il do.

Your lovin cousin,
TERRY FINNEGAN.

JOE BOWERS' WEDDING.

In the County of —— "away up in the mountains," boasts one of the best Judges of California. On the bench he is firm, decided and prompt, not caring a snap of the finger for either the applause of friends or the muttering of enemies. He is, perhaps, the most devoted man to the law in all creation, and has his head so full of what he terms "judicial talk," that he not unfrequently finds himself making learned charges, and passing sentences outside the court-room.

On a recent occasion the Judge was called on to exercise the "power and authority in him vested," in the case of a young couple who desired wedlock. Of course he consented to perform the pleasant duty, and on the appointed evening was promptly on hand at the hour at which the affair was to come off. The room was crowded by the beauty and fashion of the town, and none looked more dignified or happy than the Judge himself, who was dressed within an inch of his life.

It is customary, on occasions of the kind referred to, for the good folks of the mountain towns to pass around the wine quite freely, to their everlasting credit; we will add, they think it no harm for one to manifest his interest in the joyous event by getting "tiresly." The Judge is an ardent admirer of the fair sex, having in the course of his life led the third one to the altar. To use his own language, he is a "great believer in weddings," and that he should become a little mellow amid the glorious scenes of the evening, was not to be wondered at by those who knew him intimately. He had the weakness of all good judges—he would take his "tod."

The wine had passed round and round and round—the music had ceased—the time for making Joseph Bowers and Nancy Harkins one, had arrived. Every heart throbbed with the most delightful emotions. The young gentlemen desired to know how Joe would stand it, and the young ladies were anxious to see how Nance would suffer the anxious shock. Others, again, who had closely observed the turn of affairs during the evening, fixed their attention upon the Judge, to see how he would come out of the scrape.

At length the trying moment was announced, the Judge rose very cautiously from the chair which he occupied in one corner of the room, and casting his eyes over the company, he singled out the Sheriff of the county, who was present as an invited guest. The Judge had just imbibed enough to make him forget the nature of his business. He was full of his "judicial talk," and required nothing but the presence of the Sheriff to start him. Looking sternly at that officer, he shouted,—

"Mr. Sheriff open the Court and call order!"

A general scatter followed this command, in the midst of which the Sheriff took the "Court" by the arm, and led him to his seat in the corner; at the same time informing that august personage of the mistake.

Everything now bid fair for a pleasant and sudden termination of the affair, until another annoyance, which was nothing else than the absence of the bridegroom, was observed. It turned out that he had just stepped across the street to join his friends in a parting drink; but before his return, some cool-blooded wag had whipped into the ear of our old fogy the cause of the "delay in the proceedings." Instantly the chair in the corner snored, and in that direction all eyes were fixed.

"Mr. Sheriff," shortly hooked the Judge, "bring Joe into the Court on a capias," (the Judge had his own way of pronouncing the word); then addressing the bride, who had stood in the foreground and hung her head in deep confusion, he added,—"I s'pose you are the plaintiff? Well, don't take on. Summons and writs will be presented in the fore Court."

The wag in the corner thought of all. The Judge was again made to see his mistake, and would have been considerably set back, had it not been for a corrective in the shape of "ebery drop of the critter," which he had early applied.

In a few minutes all was ready to right down earnest. The bridegroom had arrived full of joy. The excitement was intense. He evidently felt every inch a Judge.

"J-J-o-o B-B-o-w-e-r-s," commenced the man of law, in that distressing style of speech with which he was invariably troubled when under the influence of liquor, "J-J-o B-B-o-w-e-r-s, stand up. Have y-you anything to s-say why-why-why s-s-entence——"

"Stop, stop, stop, Judge," shouted the Sheriff from the back part of the room; "you are not going to hang the man, but marry him."

The Judge drew a long breath and blinked rapidly, but stood his ground well. Recovering himself, he proceeded,—

"J-J-o-o B-B-o-w-e-r-s, do y-you take Nancy H-Harkens for y-your wife, so help me God."

This was a tolerable effort, and Joe nodded assent.

"N-Nancy Harkens, it now remains for this C-Court to——"

Here the Sheriff again interrupted the Judge, reminding him of the real business of the evening.

"Now N-Nancy," resumed the Judge, after being set aright, "d-o y-you t-take Joe B-Bowers for a husband t-to the best of your knowledge and b-belief, or d-do you not?"

"You can bet I will," softly answered the light-hearted Nancy.

The Judge then took the hands of the happy couple, and joining them, wound up as follows:

"It now r-remains for this here C-Court to pronounce you Joe B-Bowers and y-you Nancy Harkens, man and wife; and—(here the Judge paused to wipe the perspiration from his face),—m-may G-God-ornity h-have mercy on y-your s-s-souls! Sheriff remove the culprits!"

The company roared. Joe and Nancy wenkened. The Sheriff was taken with a leaving. The Judge let himself out loose in a glass of applejack. It was the greatest wedding ever witnessed.

CAPTURE OF NANKIN.

The following intelligence is taken from the Overland China Mail of the 12th of August:—

In our last issue we stated that preparations were being made for the successful attack of Nankin, and we have now to report that the city was taken by the Imperialists on the 17th ult. For many months past, in consequence of the almost unvaried success which had attended the operations of the Chinese army under its foreign leaders, the Taepings had evidently begun to lose heart, and the accounts received state that the chief of their "Coolie kings" committed suicide when he heard that Colonel Gordon was present before the walls of the city. We have already stated that the latter officer had, with the sanction of General Brown, gone to Nankin, for the purpose of making a survey of the Taeping defences. This, we believe, he did, going within fifty yards of the walls. We have not yet received full particulars of what followed from the attack upon Nankin made upon Gordon's advice, as the Shanghai mail for Europe has not yet arrived in Hong Kong; but the likelihood is that the mere terror of Gordon's name operated in promoting the capture of the city. The attack was made simultaneously by land and sea; the first actual entry being effected at or near the Taeping gate. Before night of the day on which the place was entered the rebels were completely surrounded near the centre of the city, but we cannot say whether many were killed. The Chung Wang who escaped from Soo-chow, and from Chung-chow-foo, has again made good his escape from Nankin. He is allowed to possess much military ability, and he evidently exercises discretion in difficult emergencies. It is unfortunate that on the present occasion this "fighting king," as he is called should have eluded the besieging army with 2,000 of his troops. From such a leader any amount of mischief may yet be anticipated, as the Chung Wang is both resolute and clever. We cannot reasonably doubt that this force of 2,000 men will form the nucleus of a fresh rebellion in other districts; for we presume that the experience which the Taepings have of foreigners will render the old districts tolerably safe. The Taepings' list of pleader is most of all to be feared; their education to brigandage during the last twelve years must have gone far to unfit them for the more sober habits of industry; and though foreigners may have now no more fear from them, they may still continue to give serious trouble by remaining together to arms even in gangs of two or three thousand.

THE THUMBS GOING ABROAD.—Gen. Tom Thumb has taken state rooms for his family and suite on board the steamer City of Washington, which leaves for Liverpool Saturday, Oct. 29th. The General retires for ever from public life at the close of the present engagement at the Museum. The Thumb family are to make the tour of Europe in their private capacity. They intend stopping a few weeks in Great Britain and France and spending the Winter in Florence and Rome. Commodore Nutt and little Minnie Warren will continue to give their public exhibitions in this country.—N. Y. Tribune.

A man named Foley had a ball given to him in Boston last Saturday, for the benefit of his sick family. On going home from the ball with the proceeds ($218) in his pocket, he was robbed and murdered.

Mysterious Murder in New York.

Men and their surroundings, even of murder surrounded by mystery as in the present, the scenes and the actors are in large cities, and for the time create considerable excitement; but almost every murder will out" has passed into a proverb. There was the case of Cole, who pushed the body of his victim, Ashton, in a box with stone, and shipped it on board a vessel bound for New Orleans, and directed to some parties on the Mississippi river, whom, had it arrived, detection would have been almost impossible. But in the appearance of the detectives the box was traced from Cole's room to the ship, by means of the mixture, and the crime was then exposed. So in the case of Professor Webster; his attempt to burn the body of Parkman in his laboratory led to the discovery of the murder.

In our vicinity recently there has been a very remarkable case of this kind, involving, perhaps, in more mystery, and certainly more curious in its details than usually surround the most mysterious murders. Several portions of a human form have been found at different places on the East river and the bay within the past few weeks. The last portion which comprised the head, showing evidence of a pistol shot in the temple, having been picked up on Monday at Port Hamilton. The discovery of these dismembered parts tends to the following conclusions:—First, that a murder has been committed, and that death was produced by a pistol ball. Next, that great caution was exhibited by the perpetrator or perpetrators in so dissevering the portions of the body as to render identification exceedingly difficult. Next, that the victim was then dismembered within a very short period after death; that the same wrapping or enamelled table cloth and paper was on all the portions found, and that each part—even the head, which still shows distinctly the features, color and character of the hair and natural expression of the countenance—was in a state of preservation. These facts establish that the crime was of recent commission. The dismemberment were not made with the skill of a surgeon, but rather in the uncouth and horrid manner of one anxious to hurry up a job which was painful and exciting. One part was found at the foot of Little street, Brooklyn; another at the foot of Corlears street, New York; another in Gravesend bay, and another the head—near Port Hamilton, localities far apart, and apparently warrants the suspicion that they were deposited separately at those places, although it is true that the current of the East river might have carried them to those several places, if they had been thrown into the stream above the highest point at which the first portion of the remains was discovered.

Up to the time the body has not been identified; and, with the exception of a young man named Meachem, who left Lovejoy's hotel on the 30th ult., and has not since been heard of, no suspicion appears to be abroad as to who the victim of this mysterious crime may be. We can hardly suppose, however, that much time will elapse before the police authorities can obtain some clue. The Mayors of Brooklyn and New York have offered rewards of $1 000 each for information as to the murderer. This ought to bring forth some intelligence from so no quarter. It is extraordinary that a crime of this kind could have been committed in the midst of the city, and yet the police be unable—as it would appear they are—even to suggest a theory as to the identity of the victim or the probable locality or commission of the crime. Now that the head is in possession of the coroner we presume that the difficulty as to the individuality of the remains will be easily overcome; and it is to be hoped that the vigilence of the police authorities will insure a clearing up of the whole terrible mystery.—Herald, Oct. 19.

IRRIGATION ON A LARGE SCALE.—The Edinburgh Review is giving an account of the great improvements which the British are making in India, notices the system of works for irrigation. These works, it is said, are vast, in extent and benefit. The Ganges canal, one of the principal, has no less than 898½ miles of main channel, with 1952 miles of distributing water courses, besides many hundred miles of minor channels. It irrigates an area of 1,471,500 acres, and its beneficent waters will protect from the risk of famine a tract of country containing a population of 6,500,000 souls. It is estimated that in the famine of 1860—1,229,543,840 pounds of grain were grown by the irrigations which it afforded. Other canals are from 100 to 500 miles in length, and render fertile vast tracts of land that would otherwise remain almost barren wastes. In the Presidency of Madras nearly all the great rivers have been intersected by weirs, which retain for irrigation the flow of fructifying waters that would else flow out to sea. The increased production is reckoned by millions of pounds in value. These works were constructed at a great outlay, and are justly regarded as triumphs of engineering skill and wise statesmanship.

MEDICAL.—The, generally-received opinion, that most malignant diseases are the result of the development within the blood of certain animal or vegetable germs lately received confirmation by the queries of M. Donné. This eminent man placed a quantity of the pus from a malignant pustule, and placed it under the microscope, when it presented thousands of those vegetable forms known to botanists as bacteria. To assure himself that no mistake had been made, he dried the remainder of the pus, and introduced it into the blood of an animal, and the latter was attacked by disease of the spleen, and died in five days. An examination of its blood showed numerous bacteria.

In conversation a man of good sense will seem to be less knowing, than doing, and choose to be set a level with others, rather than appear with the superiority of his genius.

REFORM AND CONSERVATISM.

The changes that have been going on during the last few months of our history, are of such a magnitude that few, very few, are fully understood there. The consequence is that the more open-minded have determined to sit still and await a more settled state of constitutional excitement, and a more generally diffused national public opinion in question.

The Conservative press remains any of victory; because recently in this constituency [illegible] of the Electoral Division that has just taken place. But this is looking too much as we argue. A part of the Reform press, too, has been waiting on it as they had been bitten with some [illegible] but they can discern the position of the times. It is no mark of Reformation, when we consider that all the candidates that proposed themselves for the suffrages of the people (in Upper Canada, at least) declared themselves in favor of those [illegible] Reformers have so long and [illegible] sought, and which, at last, they are about to [illegible]. It is of no significance by what name a man may designate his political creed, if it differs nothing from that of Reform; and the fact that Conservatives are attaching the idea of Reform to their creed, speaks volumes for the victory—not the defeat thereof.

At the late election in this County, both candidates expressed themselves as holding one set of views on politics, and Mr. Perry claimed to have been brought up in the Baldwin political school; and this he did because he well knew that even old Conservatives were becoming alive to their own interests, and were now advocating Reform! If he, therefore, wished to obtain one vote even, he must ally himself with Reform. Is not this a sign of victory for Reform, and of defeat of the opposite view? Mr. McPherson and Mr. Ball are in favor of Representation by Population—showing that their views are Reform—for when did ever Tories talk about granting this boon of justice to Upper Canada, which, by the way, she has at last obtained? Thus viewing the passing events with a careful eye, we see that there is no cause for alarm, but, on the contrary, rejoicing—as Reformers are about to realize those very things for which they have so long sought, viz.: justice to Upper Canada and the right to control her own affairs, independent of French domination or interference. It is only the countenance of a certain class of politicians that causes them in any way to attach partisan feelings to the members of the Legislative Council. The sincere well-wisher of his country desires to have that part of our Legislative machinery free from political bias, that thus they may be prepared to give a fair hearing and just decision on all matters coming before them. This, we are glad to see, is the prevailing opinion of all the candidates themselves, and how their election can be considered death to Reform, we are at a loss to determine.

We would also remind our croaking brethren of the Reform press to wait patiently to the end—throw no obstacles in the way of those who are engaged in the good work of harmonising and consolidating our country and government. And let them remember that after the present difficulties are settled, and our new Constitution arranged, there will be plenty of work for Reformers still—work that, perhaps, will require their united efforts and wisdom to steer our ship of State safely in her (we hope,) glorious future.

THE ENGLISH LAND COMPANY.—We hear that the mills at Haliburton, in Dysart, are nearly completed, and will, in a few days, be in full operation. It may be taken as an indication of the feeling that prevails in the neighboring townships to the English Company's settlement, that the parties who are now the proprietors of these mills are both Reeves of adjoining townships. Mr. Lucas is the Reeve of Anson, and Mr. Gaines the Reeve of Minden, both of whom are settlers at Haliburton. The news from this important section of our county is of a very hopeful character, and we are informed that during the past few weeks more than twenty Peterborough men have taken up land in Dysart, with a view to immediate settlement. Upwards of a hundred men are now at work on the Company's roads,—great energy prevails.

ROBBERY.—The Hastings Hotel in Port Hope was robbed on the 15th inst. by a colored man named Robert Walsh, who was in Mr. Hastings' employ. The rubber took from the drawer of a bureau in Mr. Hastings' bedroom, two tin boxes, one containing notes, guides, some silver watches, a masonic jewel, a chain, and a number of valuable papers. In the other there was $300 in gold, also Canadian and American bills, in all amounting to about $400, besides a number of other papers.

THE CANADIAN HOUSEHOLD.—This is the title of a new monthly from the press of Lovell & Gibson, Montreal; the publishers are D. D. Robertson & Co., Toronto. It is devoted to social and moral reform, temperance, literature and instruction. The Household will commend itself to Canadian readers, both old and young. We wish it every success.

MR. HEATHFIELD'S CONCERT.—By referring to our advertisements it will be seen that Mr. Heathfield is about to favor the music loving portion of our inhabitants with a concert. The well-known musical talents of the gentlemen mentioned in connexion with the concert is enough to insure a full house, and we are sure the lady amateurs will fully satisfy the highest expectations. Let none shade at home on Tuesday night.

MR. MALCOLM.—We recommend attention to Mr. Malcom's advertisement in another column. Individuals desiring such property would do well to call and see him at an early opportunity.

Progress of the Conference.

[From the Globe's correspondent.]

Quebec, Oct. 21.

"Notwithstanding the [illegible] of the Conference to prevent [illegible] to their proceedings, [illegible] doubt that the position of the [illegible] administration, as [illegible] strengthened, than [illegible] The Governor General to be appointed by the Crown, and to be advised by a cabinet under the British Parliamentary form of Government; the Upper Chamber to be composed of 76 members—24 from Upper Canada, 24 from Lower Canada, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 4 from Prince Edward, and 4 from Newfoundland. The members to be appointed by the Crown for life, and in the first instance to be selected from the present Legislative Councillors. The Lower House to be composed of 194 members, of whom Upper Canada is to have 82, Lower Canada 65, Nova Scotia 19, New Brunswick 15, Newfoundland 4, Prince Edward Island 5. The members to be elected for five years. The representation has been adjusted in this way: It was assumed that Lower Canada had a fair share of the representatives now. The problem was then worked out, if Lower Canada, with a population of 1,111,000 has 65 members, how many should Upper Canada have with her population. The same course was taken with respect to the other Provinces. The representation to be re-adjusted every ten years—Lower Canada always retaining 65 and no more. The Lieutenant Governor of each Province to be appointed by the Governor General, under the advice of the Federal Cabinet. The constitution of the local legislatures to be determined by the existing Parliaments—uniformity being found impossible. The Conference met this morning at ten o'clock, and instead of adjourning at two, sat till six p.m., when it adjourned for the night to enable the Finance Ministers to prepare statements of the financial position of each Province."

From the above we may infer that the proposed union of the Provinces is likely to be a Federal one. By such, each Province will have the management of its own internal affairs. This is the only wise course, and the only one that would be satisfactory to the people generally. We do not see that the word by which we designate the form of the new Government, can in any way interfere with the objects of good government, viz.: the removing of causes of discontent, and the administering of justice to the governed. Neither can the word have any effect on the loyalty of the people of these Provinces; nor can it diminish their attachment to the Crown of Great Britain because of its use in the United States. Every form of government must have some head, by whom respect for law and order may be enforced, and who may represent such government (which, in one respect, is but another name for the nation) in its treaties and various relations with other nations. In our new connexion it is not proposed to make the head of our government differ from that of the old, unless it be in an extension of one prerogative, as, for instance, the appointment of Lieutenant Governors. And as the Crown is still to have the appointment of Governor General, our connexion with Great Britain will not be affected in the least by a Federal Union. Neither does the word Federal imply or express weakness, nor does it contain in itself the seeds of disruption or rebellion. The present civil war did not arise out of the idea of Federation, but out of slavery and alleged encroachments on State-rights. The North desired to abolish slavery, the South to retain it. In the struggle, perhaps certain rights were abused, at any rate this was the alleged cause why the South seceded, which led to the war now ravaging the neighboring Republic. And as the Southern Confederacy has still continued the Federal system, we may justly infer that it was not the form of government or its name that caused its secession. And as for weakness, we may take either North or South as an instance of unexampled strength, when we consider with what tenacity they still hold on, what courage they exhibit, and what numbers they can still send into the field. We may safely assert, very few, if any, of the Governments of Europe could have carried on such a bitter strife on such a gigantic scale, without showing greater signs of weakness than either of them yet does. The failure of the American Republic must therefore have proceeded from some other cause than the form of their union. But whatever that cause was, it is our duty in our own case to provide against it as fully as possible, and the best way to do that is to establish perfect liberty and justice to all, remove causes of discontent, and have moderation in public expenditure.

While therefore our governmental plan is the same, only more extended—while our Governor is appointed as before by the Crown—while our people elect their representatives in the same way—while not one of the prerogatives of the Crown is being invaded, but, on the contrary, strengthened by our Federation, or Confederation rather,—where are the signs of Republicanism? Where is the danger to British connection? We can see none yet, nor are we likely to be able to see any for a long time to come.

THE FIRES.

On Friday night, as the orderly and peaceably disposed inhabitants of the Town were preparing for their nocturnal slumbers, the "midnight bell" with its iron tongue announced that something was up. We cannot say a fire, as nothing was consumed. It was soon discovered that an edifice owned by one "Tom Walsh," and jointly occupied by him and several other individuals, for whose character very little can be said, except that they dealt considerably in spirits and largely in billingsgate, to the no small annoyance, we believe, of those who dwelt near them. After parties got to the scene of confusion there appeared to be considerable trouble to find where the fire was (perhaps where it should be), as there were no signs of fire outside, and several, by the aid of candles, were trying to discover fire inside. It appeared evident, however, that the house must be destroyed, as every effort was being put forth to demolish it. Now, it is has been intimated, the persons occupying the building were of a disreputable character, and if the respectable people in the vicinity were in dread of waking up some night to find themselves surrounded with flames, surely assert ought to have been to the authorities for their removal, instead of the disgraceful and unlawful course pursued. If such things are tolerated, it may soon be that no man's property will be safe; and the respectable and disreputable may alike suffer, if, perchance, a few may but take umbrage at any one. It is easy to see how a cry of "fire" may be made the pretext for destroying a person's property. As Journalists we owe it as a duty to the community to lift our voices against such defiance of law—against such apparent rowdyism, and for the sake of our Town we hope we shall never witness such a scene again.

We persons have insinuated that the Fire Company were implicated. In justice to them we have to state that we believe such insinuations have no foundation whatever. The noble band who volunteer their services we believe are too high-minded for Constable to disgrace in any such acts. Besides, Capt. McNaughton has authorized us to say, that if any person will give him the name of any member of the Company who took any part in it, steps will be immediately taken to expel him from the Company.

About midnight another alarm of fire was sounded. A frame building on Hunter street, adjoining "Arrowsmith Hotel," had also taken fire. The Firemen were promptly on the spot, and although the fire had made considerable headway, it was soon drowned out, leaving the wooden walls standing. While the engine was in operation, the Captain informs us, some scoundrel cut the hose in two places with an axe. After the fire was completely extinguished and all had left, it again started and was burned to the ground. The fire is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The building was owned by S. Dickson, Esq., and we hear was partially insured.

On Tuesday night about 10 o'clock another fire broke out in the bakery belonging to Mr. A. Ward, west of the old burying ground. The bake-house and an adjoining stable and sheds were consumed, and whatever was in the bakery, as very little was got out. Mr. Purcell, who occupied the house close to the bake-house, had his effects removed, expecting the house would also be consumed, but it was saved. We have not learned particulars, but expect that the fire originated some way from the bake-oven. Praise is due to the Firemen for their energy in keeping the fire under, forcing it to succumb in a few minutes from the time they got their engine and hose arranged.

THE ST. ALBAN'S RAID.

This little place situated a few miles from our frontiers, in the State of Vermont has become somewhat notorious. Many of our Canadian readers would, perhaps, have lived and died in blissful ignorance of even its existence but for the robbery of the banks of some of their contents. The perpetrators were Southern refugees, who went over the lines and surprised the inhabitants and bank agents—took $200,000 and decamped. Several of them have been captured, and the utmost effort is being put forth to capture the whole band, in which we hope they will be successful, as such daring violations of Canadian hospitality should not go unpunished. But why make such a fuss about the affair? Our American neighbors are breathing vengeance, retaliation and slaughter against us because we permit such things to be. What folly to blame where there is no cause. Could Canadian authorities do more than they have done, in using every means to aid the American authorities to capture and drag the robbers to justice? We really think the best way is to never get into a difficulty until it is well considered how to get out of it. The Americans rushed into the present civil war rather thoughtlessly, and we trust, will not rave about acts that would be likely to bring fresh and untold troubles to themselves, before they have settled their present strife. The following are the chief things concerning the raid:—

THE ST. ALBANS' RAID.

We are indebted to the kindness of the American Consul, for the following additional particulars:—There were 23 persons concerned in this robbery, and the amount taken from the bank is $223,000, a portion of which, though the exact sum is unknown, has been found upon some of those arrested.

The rumour of the shooting of the girl is untrue, as also that any one has been shot on this side. Morrison died yesterday morning. The necessary papers for the extradition of the 12 captured in Canada have been sent to St. John's.

THE ATTACK ON THE ST. ALBANS' BANK.

Just previous to the attack Mr. Bishop, the assistant cashier, was sitting at a table by a window counting money, and noticed two men, who eyed him closely, pass by; shortly after these two men entered the bank, and he went towards the counter to ask their business, whereupon each man presented a brace of revolvers at his head, and informed him that he was their prisoner. On the right of the public office, close to the counter, was the open door of the Directors' room, to which, though much surprised, he sprang. He gained it, and had almost succeeded in closing the door, when the two men sprang over the counter and prevented him. The pistols were again presented at his head, and he was informed that if he made any resistance or noise his brains would be blown out. They then told him that they had come for the money of the Bank, that there were 70 of them, and that the whole town was under their control, and asked for the Gold, to which he replied that he had none in the Bank. They refused to believe this, and again threatened to blow his brains out, upon which he informed them that there was some silver, and at their demand he opened a safe in which it was kept, and pointing out it, told them that it was there. Immediately they proceeded to pull out the bags, but finding them too heavy to carry away, contented themselves with filling their pockets. Three had by this time come in, and the outer door being locked, one of them guarded it, while the others ransacked the large safe, which always stood open during business hours, filling their haversacks, vest pockets and boots with the money they found. There was one drawer, however, which they could not open, and to do so they demanded from the cashier the key, he had none, but told them it was a private door; they once more threatened to shoot him, and had their pistols cocked the whole time; finally, on his telling them they could break the drawer open if they wanted to, they did so, but finding in it nothing but private papers, left them.

While this was going on, the handle of the outer door was turned by some one, and the guard opening it, found a merchant outside, who wished to pay a note. He was seized by the collar and his money demanded. On his pleading that he was a private citizen, and did not understand what they meant, they compelled him to had to them the money he had brought to pay the note. Again the handle of the door was turned, and a merchant's clerk, who had come for the purpose of making a deposit, was pulled in and compelled to disgorge.

About this time Mr. Bishop heard some pistol shots fired, and looking out of the window, saw men on horseback galloping in the street. Upon the discharge of the pistols, three of the robbers went away, leaving two to guard the men in the Bank. After a few minutes, one of these left, speedily, followed by the last of them, who retreated, backing out of the doorway. As soon as they were gone, the cashier locked up the bank and left.—Witness.

ST. ALBAN, October 20.

We have arrested two of the robbers on this side of the line, and have them in gaol, with considerable money on their persons. Six more have been taken at Stanbridge or Farlingsburg—among them their leader and about $60,000 of the money. The whole country on both sides of the line is alive with zeal to arrest them. Our Governor is much pleased to hear that the Canadian authorities are so prompt.

FRIGHTFUL TRAGEDY.—A MAN CUTS HIS MOTHER'S THROAT.—On Saturday night one Charles Heyburn, at Clarke's Coffee House, London, murdered his mother by cutting her throat with a razor. The Jury found that the act had been committed under the influence of insanity.

EARTHQUAKE AT MONTREAL.—On Friday, about 4 o'clock p.m., the Witness says several shocks of an earthquake were supposed to be felt in the city. The second occurrence of the kind during the last fortnight or three weeks.

The Presidential Election is fixed to take place on Tuesday the 8th November.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

There is [illegible] fighting in the valley. The [illegible] made an [illegible] and almost routed [illegible] Gen. Sheridan came up, it is said, in time to save defeat, and turned the whole into a victory, with a loss to him of 5,000. The Confederates lost it is supposed, 10,000. Longstreet was not in the valley as reported. The attack was made by Early with the hopes of raising his lost name and fortune. Petersburgh and Richmond are quiet. Price is still causing alarm, but there has been no fighting in his locality. Sherman and Hood are manoeuvering without coming to action. The southern press says Sherman is in a critical position,—time only will tell.

The N. Y. World says there is a rumour of another draft of 300,000 men being made after the election. It is also intimated that Richmond will get leave to remain as she is to May next, as while Gen. Grant is largely reinforced, it is by raw recruits. But as much is now reported would advise our reader, to wait for the confirmation of such reports.

THE AFFAIR IN THE VALLEY.

New York, Oct. 21.—The World's account of our defeat in the Shenandoah is in the main similar to that of the Herald. Of the victory subsequently gained over the then victorious rebels the correspondent states:—

At 10 o'clock, a. m., after our lines had rested on the crest of a hill to the right, and near Middletown, and after Torbett had swept into the enemy and cut almost himself on the right of the infantry, in the face of the fiery shelling, the results, other than the fact that we had won a victory by holding our own, were of a gloomy character. We had been driven out of a splendid position, had lost heavily in prisoners, had lost 16 pieces of artillery, 34 ambulances, all the medical waggons and medical supplies of the 9th corps, several headquarters' waggons, yielded more than two miles of battle-field, lost many of the finest officers and men, and killed and wounded were by which around. A lull—the army, relinquishing the attack, used artillery very actively.

At this moment a faint cheer re-echoed along the lines in the rear. Gen. Sheridan, who had ridden post-haste from Winchester was approaching, and his arrival created wild enthusiasm. Beginning at the left of the line he rode along the whole front of the army waving his hat, amid uproarious cheers. Retreat was stopped in an instant.

Every nerve was strained to get the army into offensive position, and at 3 o'clock the whole army, with the 6th corps in the centre, 19th on the right Cook commanding on the left, Merritt's cavalry on the extreme left, and Custer's division on the extreme right, made a magnificent charge which swept the enemy off the face of the earth before it everywhere.

The enemy had actually begun to throw up breastworks, and was preparing to go into camp when this charge was made. He was driven back at double-quick, through Middletown and across Cedar Run, thence pursued by our cavalry through and beyond Strasburg.

Forty-three pieces of artillery and some guns, taken from us during the day, were re-captured at Strasburg; also, over 100 waggons and ambulances, and caissons innumerable.

The rebel general Ramseur was captured in an ambulance seriously, if not mortally, wounded. About one thousand prisoners were picked up along the road.

Two hours of daylight would have given us the work of an incendiary. The burning was owned by S. Dickson, Esq., and we hear was partially insured.

We have arrested two of the robbers on this side of the line, and have them in gaol, with considerable money on their persons. Six more have been taken at Stanbridge or Farlingsburg—among them their leader and about $60,000 of the money. The whole country on both sides of the line is alive with zeal to arrest them. Our Governor is much pleased to hear that the Canadian authorities are so prompt.

Speeches at the Quebec Dinner.

EXTRACTS FROM DR. TUPPER'S SPEECH.

[From the Globe.]

Dr. TUPPER said—Mr. President, gentlemen—I gladly avail myself of this opportunity to return thanks on behalf of myself and co-delegates from the Province of Nova Scotia, for the kind and hospitable manner in which we have been received in this country. I feel that our thanks are not only especially due to the Ministry of Canada for the very hospitable and generous manner in which we have been received, but that they are also alike due to the city of Quebec, the city of Montreal, and the city Toronto. In fact I may say to the people of Canada, who of one accord seem to join most heartily in rendering our visit up this great Province agreeable as well as useful. (Loud cheers.) I feel not a little embarrassed in rising to address you. The magnitude of the question which has called the delegates from the Maritime Provinces to this meeting is one which actually appals me to contemplate, when I reflect that from the time in which the immortal Wolfe decided on the plains of Abraham the destiny of British America to the present, no event has occurred in importance or magnitude the one which is now taking place in this ancient and famous city. * * * * I need not say that its importance is one which it is impossible to overrate. Misrepresented as the public mind in the Lower Provinces was on this question, the visit and the statements made by the gentlemen connected with the Government of Canada, have aroused a large and marked degree of attention, which I believe will by thought with the best consequences to the whole British Provinces. (Loud cheers.) I believe these gentlemen, in order to lead the public mind of the Lower Provinces to an appreciation of this question, took the opportunity to place before us statements of the vast resources of this great colony of Canada, I may, perhaps, be excused if I invite your attention to some of the facts connected with the growth and increase of the Lower Provinces. (Loud cheers.) It is true you have a magnificent country, embracing an immense territorial area; it is true you have a comparatively large population of 3,000,000; it is true you have land teeming with inexhaustible resources on every hand; but as was observed by your able and talented Minister, Mr. Cartier, great as is your country, large as is your population, inexhaustible as are your resources, the Maritime Provinces have something to offer you equally essential to the constituting of a great nation. (cheers.) We shall bring into the federation with Canada, a territorial area of 50,000 or 60,000 square miles, and an additional population of 800,000 souls; and I need not say to the gentleman who has just sat down, and who has made such complimentary allusions to the Lower Provinces, that the prospect of the addition of a population of 800,000 souls must necessarily excite the attention of the manufacturers of Canada. (Cheers.) We shall bring a full revenue to the common purse of something like $3,000,000, and when I tell you that Nova Scotia has something like doubled her revenue within the last six years, you will understand that we do not require a union with Canada to draw from her resources. We should add, at the same time, to the trade of the common federation, something like $3,000,000 in our exports and imports. I need not tell you how much Canada owes to the mighty St. Lawrence; but this highway, great and magnificent as it is, is but an imperfect one, inasmuch as it is closed to all commerce some five months in the year, not to speak of the humiliating position in which this great country is left, when we feel that you are dependent upon a foreign, if not a rival state, for access to the ocean, one of the essential requirements of commerce, without which no country can be permanently great. (Cheers.) You can readily understand how important it is that Canada should obtain means of access to the ocean, open not for five months but for twelve months in the year—means of communication not only with the ocean but with the parent State. (Cheers.) * * * * I would ask you, too, to contemplate the inexhaustible wealth of the ocean which surrounds the Maritime Provinces, in the fisheries which we there have; but it is not only in that respect that the Maritime Provinces will be glad to show you that they will be able to bring something to the treasury of British North America. If you look at the colony which I have the honor to represent you will find that its mineral resources cannot be replaced on this side the Atlantic. You will find a vast country occupied by as valuable coal deposits as are to be found on the surface of the earth. You will find iron mines in the Province of Nova Scotia which, in quality, will successfully rival the finest Swedish iron. You will find iron and coal associated with limestone. In fact, you will find in Nova Scotia all those chief natural characteristics which have made Great Britain the chief commercial mart of the world. There are, also, our gold mines not yet developed. Still they are valuable, and in illustration of their worth I may tell you that the receipts from rents and royalties have, within the last six months, enlarged to the extent of $20,000. You will thus understand that our gold mines afford prospect of remunerative employment to the large population which will inevitably be attracted to them. (Loud cheers.) When you look at these facts, you will easily understand that the confederation which shall unite the British American Colonies, which will give a common aim, and unite by a common bond the whole people, will tend to enhance their credit—to place them upon the exchanges of the world in a far better position than we can hope for in our present divided state. * * * * I believe the time has come when the statesmen of British North America is unworthy the position he occupies, who does not feel it his imperative duty to devote his most earnest attention to the solution of the great and important question, how the lives and property and peace of the inhabitants of British North America may not only be preserved, but guaranteed against any assault. (Cheers.) Occupying the official position I do in connection with the Government of one of the Provinces, it would be wrong for me to say a single word on this subject liable to misconception or misconstruction anywhere; yet I must say that no one who regards the changed aspect of affairs on this continent within the last few years, can fail to see that unless we are to be dependent on the generous forbearance of our neighbors, we must be prepared unitedly to co-operate for the common defence of our country—(cheers,)—and I must say also that I do not believe the time has come when Great Britain is indifferent to our defence. I am not one of those who fancy their is any large or influential class of statesmen in Great Britain who are insensible to the great advantage and importance of preserving the British American colonies as part of the empire. It may suit the Manchester school and doctrinaires like Goldwin Smith to put forth the contrary notion, but I speak under the deepest conviction of the truth of what I say, when I assert that the statesmen who have charge of the Government of the British Empire would be thrust from place and power the very moment they should propose a policy so fatal to the greatness of the Crown and the dignity of England, as would be the casting adrift of her colonies. (Cheers.) * * * * I believe the day is far distant—I believe the child is not yet born who will live to hear the proposition authoritatively propounded by any Cabinet in Great Britain of the abandonment of the British North American colonies. (Loud cheers.) I believe a blow struck which would assail the property or liberty of British America, would bring to the nation all the powers of the British Crown—all the force of that magnificent army and gallant navy on which we confidently rely for protection. But, at the same time, the fact that this is in the temper of the British mind, the sentiment of the British Empire, instead of rendering us supine and indifferent, should nerve us with increased vigour to place ourselves in the position in which we can best co-operate with the brave army and gallant navy of Great Britain for the defence of this portion of the British Empire. (Cheers.) * * * * The question, at all events, is of that magnitude which requires that any hostile expression or opinion should be suppressed, and that the public should be ready to give it that calm and dispassionate consideration without which it is impossible that any member of Government, however able he may be, can bring it to a satisfactory issue. Dr. Tupper having then expressed his thanks for the [illegible] which had been tendered him and his colleagues, [illegible] been received in this country and Newfoundland, resumed his seat amidst loud and prolonged cheering.

Interesting Extradition Case.

IN RE ASHER WARNER.

ARGUMENT IN CHAMBERS YESTERDAY.

(Before Mr. Justice Hagarty.)

From the Leader.

The prisoner was, as appears from the depositions, charged before Mr. White, as United States Commissioner at Albany, with issuing forged 50-cent notes, or as commonly called postage currency, and by him committed for trial at Cleveland Ohio. A verdict was given against Warner, but this decision was appealed against, mainly on an understand, for technical grounds arising from the construction of the act of Congress authorizing the issue of this peculiar currency. Awaiting the decision in appeal, the prisoner was admitted to bail, when he took French leave, preferring towards proceedings from this side of the lakes.

The American officials were not slow in using their remedies, as the sureties were at once proceeded against and the amounts secured, extracted. In August last Warner was followed up to the County of Essex, and on the information of Earle Bill, Deputy Sheriff, R. F. Payne, United States District Attorney, and others, brought up before a magistrate, in pursuance of the Extradition Treaty, and of the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, cap. 89, and 24th Vic., cap. 8.

The offence charged was proved to the satisfaction of the magistrate, and the prisoner was committed to await the pleasure of the Governor General. Before, however, the prisoner was given up to the United States authorities, a habeas corpus was issued by his Lordship, and this is now returned by the Sheriff of Essex, together with two warrants from the magistrate who committed the prisoner to his custody, and a warrant under the Great Seal of this Province, directing the delivery up of the prisoner to the United States authorities, and the prisoner also appeared in Court in charge of the Deputy Sheriff of Essex and a bailiff. In appearance Warner is not prepossessing, as the left side of his face is disfigured, and one eye destroyed, apparently by cancer or chemicals. He is a man forty years old apparently.

J. W. Gwynne, Q. C., aided by G. D. Boulton, now moved for the release of the prisoner, and commenced by reading from the depositions to show, 1st—That the matter was not such as was contemplated by the Act which speaks of persons who "being charged" with the acts specified should escape, but that the matter had already passed from a charge to a conviction, the sureties had been made to pay the forfeiture on their bond taken after such conviction. The acts refer to such evidence as shall warrant commitment for trial and the charge must therefore be made here before the trial. To escape from justice after conviction is a new crime, but the prisoner is not charged now with that nor could he be delivered up for it.—After conviction in such case, new evidence would not, according to our procedure, be permitted to be brought forward against the prisoner, but the records of Ours are the sufficient proof.

2nd. That the utterance of forged currency such as that charged does not come within the meaning of the statute, but that the "paper" there referred to can not be considered powers of attorney, deeds, postal currency, or any thing but such as is properly called negotiable paper in commercial countries.

3rd. That the first warrant of the magistrate is invalid on its face on the same ground as that in Anderson's case, was held bad by the Court of Common Pleas three years ago (H. U. C. C. P. Reports) viz., because it directs [illegible] "to take the prisoner till directed according to law," and does not refer to the Extradition Treaty as decided to be necessary. This objection would already have been a fatal one, but it was discovered by the magistrate before the return to the habeas corpus was made, and a new warrant drawn in proper form lodged with the Sheriff which, together with the warrant under the Great Seal, are returned to the Court as the grounds for the arrest and detention.

Mr Gwynne argued that the second warrant could not cure the defects in the first, and that the arrest must be taken to be under it; also that the patent issued on the 1st instant was mere waste paper, as it is provided by sec. 4 of 24 Vic., cap. 6, that the warrant shall issue under the hand and seal of the Governor, meaning his privy seal as a magistrate exercising his power and discretion in place of Her Majesty. This new [illegible] of the Great Seal is an abuse of it, and as this patent is not signed by the Attorney General, it seems really not to have been properly considered, but to have issued through some official blunder.

At the conclusion of Mr. Gwynne's argument, his Lordship said he felt great difficulty in seeing what jurisdiction the Judges in Chambers had to review the magistrates' decisions under the Act. Justices of the Peace, County Court and Superior Court Judges are all spoken of in the like terms, and made equally judges of the facts brought before them under the Act. If he [illegible] reverses this magistrate's decision, what is there to hinder his being called upon next week to review a similar decision of one of his fellow Judges? He, indeed, felt the utmost possible doubt as to his jurisdiction if the warrant were regular on its face.

Mr. Boulton contended that this matter was decided in favor of the power of the Superior Courts to review by the decision in Re Anderson 20 Q. B. U. C., and by the Act of 24 Vic.

S. Richards, Q. C., with whom was R. S. Payne, Esq., C. S. Dist. Atty. of Cleveland, Ohio, appeared for the prisoner, and he argued that the only jurisdiction his Lordship could assume was such as the Superior Court Judges had in England in 1791, or such as our statutes have since conferred on Judges in Chambers. He contended that the magistrate or person taking the evidence was the proper and only judge of its sufficiency, and that if the proceedings were on their face regular, no court or judge should interfere between him the Governor General and the demanding power. If this were not so then on a release of any such prisoner by a Superior Judge on review of the evidence, an action of trespass would lie against the committing magistrate. The magistrate having committed and the Governor issued his warrant, the functions of the Court are at an end. (Here U. S. authorities were quoted from the text books in support of this argument.) The case is still properly before the Court in Ohio for adjudication, and is therefore properly within the purview of the Act, and the action taken on the bonds against the sureties does not alter the prisoner's position. If the first warrant of committal were irregular in form, that was entirely remedied by the issue of the second, and as to the "Patent Poetry.

WHY?

A flood of darkness and of night,
To damping your efforts?
What [illegible] bitter gourds
In [illegible] for a time,
To a few rough suggestions;
Or censure from some brilliant mess,
To a few simple questions.

Why is it that our gentle friends,
Fair devotees of fashion,
For routine and manœuvre meetings,
Have such a yearning passion?
Those queer and empty fingers shaped,
So skilful in imitation,
Must strike the balance soon between
The ha and the ostrich.

Why is it that our gay young men,
Unused to life's reverses,
Disdain to toil, with hands or heads
As empty as their purses?
They sweet down and billiards,
Acquire little money
And all that 's great and good on earth,
Their little soul despises.

Why is it, that those payments days,
When hands were rarely handled,
When gentle hearts were made to live,
Not subject to be ruffled?
Must sit me before at the gate,
To guard a child's devotion,
To make her pliant heart to bend
According to their notion.

Why do it, reader, who to learn,
Attentively perusest,
The weekly news which knowledge gives,
And common sense diffuses—
That you, the gabbling, editorial
Be honest, fair and civil.
Oh yah about the printer of his dues,
And chance the very devil?

Why is it our gentle friends
(The writer 's an example)
Can't treat the world to something new,
The above is a fair sample
Of new ideas, all hatched before—
Not unlike those flighty pigeons
Who come from earth, describing life,
In the celestial regions.

What is the difference between a church organist and the influenza? One knows the stops, and the other stops the nose.

Julius, said one nigger to another, is you better dis morning?

No, I was better yesterday, but I'se got oberdat.

What branch of education do you have in your school?

Willow branch, Sir: the master has used most a little tree.

Jack, your wife is not so pensive as she used to be.

No, said Jack, she has left that off, and turned expensive.

When you see a man on a moonlight night trying to convince his shadow that it is improper to follow a gentleman, you may be sure that it is high time for him to join a temperance society.

On a recent holiday Irishman with characteristic obliquity of speech, after smashing his head, said:

Please yer honor, I do not remember; or if I do I forgot it now.

A polite young gentleman wishing to speak to a young lady, stepped up to her and wanted to know if he could turn the wheel of conversation across the axletree of your understanding for a few moments. She said yes.

Lord M——who had a very exalted opinion of himself, said:

I always burst out laughing whenever I say a foolish thing.

Then, my Lord, said Charles Townsend, I envy your happiness: for you must be the merriest man in Europe.

"Can open a penny for me, father?" said a little girl, when she came home from school one day. "Cut open a penny! What do you want me to do that for?" asked the father. "Cause," said the little girl, "our teacher says in every penny there are four farthings, and I want to see them."

How are you, Smith? says Brown.

Smith pretends not to know him, and replies:

Sir, you certainly have got the advantage of me.

Yes, retorted Brown, I suppose everybody has that's got common sense.

Smith looks unhappy.

Abe and Andy—A good song to the universally known tune of "Yankee Doodle," with the following chorus, would be very popular during the campaign:

"Yankee Doodle, keep it up,
Yankee Doodle dandy,
Cheer, lads, cheer, and throw your votes
For honest Abe and Andy!"

A "big Injun" having strayed from the camp, found himself lost on trying to return to it. After looking about, he drew himself up and exclaimed, "Injun lost!" but recovering himself and feeling unwilling to acknowledge such short-sightedness, continued, "No, Injun not lost—wigwam lost;" (striking his breast) "Injun here!"

A curious boy in Lochwinnoch parish, Scotland, asked his mother about the origin of man, &c., and was answered:

"We're all made of clay."

"Are the horses made of clay, too?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "all clay."

"Then, mother, Duncan Donelson has but one leg; has the clay been unso dear, d'ye think, when no gauge wi' a timber ane?"

"My dear Ellen," said an ardent lover to a young lady whose smiles he was seeking, "I have long wished for this opportunity, but I hardly dare trust myself now to speak the deep emotions of my palpitating heart; but I implore to you dear Ellen, that I love you most tenderly; your smiles would shed —would shed—" "Never mind the wood chat!" said Ellen, "go on with that pretty talk."

Bill Smith is a good accountant, but like all men, will sometimes make a mistake; and in one of his bills figured up that "6 times 8 are 88." The debtor was not slow in discovering the mistake, and demanded an explanation. Bill examined the account and saw that he was "done," but did not like to admit it, so putting on a bold face, he said, "That's all right." "How so," was the inquiry. "It's all owing to the inflation of the currency," said Bill, "the multiplication table, like everything else, has gone up."

Rev. Dr. H——, while stopping to address to the children at the Children's Home in New York, asked them how long Methuselah lived? No one was able to tell. Methuselah was 969 years old; and then, having impressed on their minds the length of this period, asked them—

How old do you suppose I am?

Dead silence ensued for the space of a minute, when a bright eyed little fellow sang out—

"About one hundred and fifty years," and the spot appeared with the fresh colour on —About one hundred and fifty years."

Dr. H——enjoyed it greatly, and took another touch.

In consequence of the great stagnation of trade in the manufacturing districts of England through the war having cut off the supply of cotton, a large quantity of Valuable Jewelry, originally intended for the English market, has been sent off for sale in this country, and must be sold at any sacrifice!

Under these circumstances, Armandale & Co., acting as Agents for the principle European Manufacturers, have received upon a great gift distribution, subject to the following regulations:—

☞ Certificates, naming each article and its value, are placed in sealed envelopes, and well mixed. One of these envelopes will be sent by mail to any address, on receipt of 25 cents.

All articles sold at One Dollar each, without regard to value!

On receipt of the Certificate, you will see what you are going to have, and then it is at your option to send the Dollar and take the article or not. Purchasers may thus obtain a Gold Watch, Diamond Ring, or any set of Jewelry in one lot, for One Dollar, and in no case can they get less than One Dollars worth, as there are no blanks. The price of Certificates are as follows:—

One for ..... 25 cents.
Five for $1
Eleven for 2
Thirty for 5
Sixty-five for 10
One hundred for 15

Agents will be allowed ten cents on every Certificate ordered by them, provided their remittance amounts to One Dollar. Agents will collect 25 cents for every Certificate, and remit 15 cents to us, either in cash or postage stamps.

ATTENTION is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

Policies effected on or before 31st January next will participate in full year's bonus over those effected thereafter.

Select Poetry.

THE PRACEFU' HAME.

Oor cosie hame, oor peacefu' hame,
Is a' the warld to me, Annie,
There love keeps lit its glowin' flame—
A flame that ne'er can dee, Annie!
And there thro' a' the live long day,
Like lammies on yon sunny brae,
Oor bonnie bairnies skip an' play,
Their hearts rin o'er wi' glee, Annie!
Near them wha can e'er grow auld?
Near them hearts can ne'er grow cauld,
A glint o' heaven their smiles unfauld.
To lift oor thochts on hie, Annie!

What tho' jostlin on life's road,
Baith greed and pride we see, Annie!
Let's aye be thankfu' it's nae braud.
There's room for you and me, Annie!
Let big Ambition strut and strive,
Alang his weary hirelings drive;
We hae contentment, an can thrive,
Tho' laigh oor lot may be, Annie!
Nane can blight earth's bonnie Bowers,
Veil the sun, or stay the showers;
The birds are free within their bowers,
To sing to you an' me, Annie.

We winna grudge the great their braws,
Nor a' the gear they hae, Annie!
Aff fashion as a canker knaws
Kind nature's heart away, Annie!
Nae wicked wassails shall us pain,
Or taint life's healthy floodin' vein,
Whate'er the deadly bowl may drain
Twill ne'er be your or mine, Annie!
Side by side as trees we'll grow,
Smooth as harmies on we'll row,
Oor lives be a'e lang lovers vow
Until the day we dee, Annie!

REMEMBRANCE.

Each dew-drop on its morning leaves,
Is eloquent as tears.
That whisper, when deep passion grieves
For our beloved star, and weaves
His dream of hope and fear.
Forget me not! F.

Miscellaneous.

THE VALUE OF COLONIES.

In face of the follies and meanness of the Goldwin Smith school in England, and the course pursued by the Times, Mr. Laing, Ex Finance Minister for India, in a recent lecture at Wick, upon the subject of the "Trade and Finance of the British Empire," took occasion to speak thus of the relations of the colonies to the Empire:—

"I proceed to analyze this trade in another very interesting point of view, viz., as to who are our chief customers. In the first place, I observe that our own possessions are by far our chief customers. (Applause.) Together, they furnish very nearly one third of our import trade, and one-half of our export trade. British India stands far the first in the list, giving us nearly £30,000 000 of imports, and taking in return £20,000,000 of exports. For the current year these figures will be considerably exceeded, and the rate of progression is most marked, the imports ten years ago having been only £10,672,000, and the exports £9,920,000. Australia shows a wonderful result, considering its recent settlement and limited population. It sends us, exclusive of gold about £7,000,000 of imports, and takes £13,000,000 of exports. The North American colonies, with a similar British population, gives us $8,000,000 of imports, and take nearly £5,000,000 of imports. The little island of Mauritius, with the advantage of British government and capital, sends us nearly £2,000,000 a year, and takes £800,000. These instances apparently show the advantages of colonies to commerce, and refute the shallow theory which asks us to abandon our distant possessions as useless appendages. (Loud cheers.) It is true that we no longer impose a monopoly, and leave them as free as air to sell in the dearest and buy in the cheapest market; but it is no less true that the tendency of trade is always towards a mother country; and that a given population, whether it be of British origin, as in Australia or Canada, or of foreign race, as in India or Ceylon, will always furnish a larger trade per head with Great Britain, if they form part of the British Empire, than if as in the United States or China, they are subjects of a foreign government."

"This last is a fact which the Goldwin Smithites and the Times studiously withhold from those they essay to teach. Thus in conclusion Mr. Laing speaks of the proper influence of Britain in the world—an influence which in obedience to the teachings of the leading lights of the Manchester school, which she seems desirous just now to give up—shrinking from its exercise as too costly and troublesome—

"I have drawn you a picture of an empire reared by Providence to a great pinnacle of prosperity. With a native population less than that of France, Germany or Russia, it has extended its dominions over the surface of the globe, until upwards of 200,000,000 of human beings are directly subject to the British rule. Wherever this rule extends peace and order prevail, person and property are protected, equal laws are enforced, slavery is extinct, trade is free, wealth accumulates, and progress is the order of the day. (Hear, hear.) Nor is this all. A commerce of unexampled magnitude covers the seas, and penetrates with its silent influence into the remotest regions. The Indian ryot, the Egyptian fellah, the Chinese coolie, count up their savings in English money, and feel the fluctuations of the English market in the remuneration of their humble industry. They are better fed, better clothed, and gradually prepared for a higher civilization and purer forms of religion by increased material prosperity. They are weaned from the apathetic indolence of the orientals, and broken into steady labour by tasting its advantages. They receive a fair day's wages for a fair days work, and learn by practical experience to appreciate the force of the maxim that, 'honesty is the best of policy.' (Loud cheers.) I have seen myself savages of the wild aboriginal tribes of India, working steadily under English inspectors on the railways, their women carrying the earth in baskets on their heads, with their noses, arms and ankles covered with silver rings in which they had invested the wages which to their previous experience seemed like fabulous wealth. At Aden the British flag was placed a few years ago on a barren extinct volcano, where literally not a blade of grass grows, and the only water is stored in cisterns from rain which falls on the average once in two years. Such is the magic of the British flag that in a few years a commerce of nearly £1,000,000 a year has sprung up, and a population of 20,000 souls have been attracted. You may see the wild Somauli from the opposite coast of Africa, black as soot, with his long frizzly hair dyed of a dark red streaming in the wind, working in discharging cargo and coaling steamers as patiently as an Irish laborer in the docks of London or Liverpool. And if, when he has saved a few pounds he invests in wives instead of whiskey, and returns to his native shore to live according to the notions of his race like a gentleman on the labor of two or three better halves whom his English money has enabled him to purchase, it cannot be doubted that he carries with him some tincture of improvement, and is less of an unreclaimed savage than if he had never been brought into contact with civilization. (Cheers.) Our most enlightened missionaries, such as Dr. Duff, will tell you that commerce is the ploughshare by which the earth must be broken up before the seed can be sown with any hope of an abundant return; and that the first step towards Christianising is to educate; the first step towards education is to create a demand for it, by raising men above the level of dull barbarism, abject poverty, and apathetic indolence. (Applause.) I conclude, therefore, that as far as it is possible for us to read the designs of Providence, we may say certainly that Britain has been raised to its present height of commercial and political greatness, not for the sake only of 30,000,000 who inhabit this little Island of the West, but as an instrument for the improvement of the 200,000,000 in India, the 300,000,000 in China, and the 100,000,000 or more in Africa, America and Asia, to whom British rule or British commerce is in one way or other the active power which is fast leavening the whole masses. (Cheers.) In fulfilling this great destiny, I may say with confidence that, on the whole, the past and present generations of native-born Britons have not shown themselves unworthy. (Loud cheers.) Our fathers stood unshaken against the greatest conqueror of modern times, and saved their own liberty and independence, and with them those of Europe, in the most gigantic struggle the world ever witnessed. We, the existing generation of grown-up men, have achieved victories no less signal in the campaign of peace. We have covered the sea and earth with steamers, railways and telegraphs; we have raised up the great fabric of commercial greatness; we have established sound principles of economical policy: we have renovated our political institutions by timely reforms. (Loud cheers.) It rests with you, the rising generation whether this proud fabric of our nation's greatness shall be maintained, and still greater heights attain. As long as we are true to ourselves, as long as the natural spirit remains intact, I have no fear for the result. The star of Britain is still in the ascendant, and if it ever declines it will be from inward decay, not from outward attack. Shall we, with increasing wealth, maintain the hardihood and energy of our old Northerners, and be ready to encounter cheerfully the hardships of a foreign clime and the privations of pioneers of civilization? (Cheers.) And above all, shall we, amidst the influences of growing luxury and the keen competition of wealth, retain the sturdy integrity and truthfulness of character which are at the bottom of our national greatness? (Loud cheers.) These are questions the answer to which depends on young men such as you whom I now address of whom many will find themselves in a few years playing active though subordinate parts in the great work of national commerce which I have endeavored to illustrate. Some of you may be managing tea plantations in India, alone amidst a thousand natives; some may be conducting the business of mercantile houses in China or Japan; some digging gold or feeding sheep in New Zeland or Australia. Recollect that wherever a native-born Briton goes the honor of his country is in his keeping. (Cheers.) Our national greatness depends on our prestige; our prestige depends on our national character; our national character depends mainly on the impression made by individuals. A mean, dishonorable, immoral action at home is mainly prejudical to a man himself; abroad it is alike injurious to his own sterests, but it is more—it is treason to his country and the cause of civilization. (Loud cheers.)

WARNING TO CANADIANS.

It is absolutely unsafe for a young white man to go to Rochester a stranger now, unless he has at least average intelligence, and it is no longer a safe place for a black man, if he is not the smartest of his race. The scalpers will surely gobble up all the able-bodied negroes they find, and just as many white chaps who put themselves in the way. They watch the Charlotte cars and the steamers at the docks for Canadians, and if they cannot induce them to sell themselves as soon as they land they will follow them day and night till they find a chance to steal them. A young Canadian arrived there a day or two ago on a visit to his sister, who is employed as a family. One of them proposed to take him to Lockport, sell him for six hundred dollars, and divide the proceeds—the scalper to have clothes ready for him to put on when it became necessary to desert. The fellow showed the Canadian a huge roll of greenbacks which he was just then going to divide with a fellow who had gone through the machine. The young man refused to have anything to do with the business, and went to see his sister. He was advised by a citizen who desired to protect him not to go near the scalpers; but they somehow got hold of him yesterday, and he is now missing. It is not unlikely that he was sold at Lockport, and is perhaps on his way South.—Rochester Union.

The First Steamer seen on English Waters.

The following narrative was communicated to the Glasgow Herald by a veteran:

In the month of July, 1815, I was sitting on the poop of the Tre Cronen, a Danish 74 which Nelson had taken out of Copenhagen, but which our government had forgotten to restore. She was a large and roomy ship, and was used by our government as a receiving hulk, on board of which the crews of such ships as were in dock were stowed. The day was beautifully fine. All was still on board the fleet, when Mr. Woodhouse exclaimed, "Hallo! what's that?" and addressing the officer of the watch, said, "the whole of the fleet to rendezvous alongside of the flag-ship. Ship on fire, sir." All heads were immediately piped, and the boats manned and dispatched; and, as other ships had done the same, there was presently a flotilla around the Admiral's ship. But what was all the row about? And the answer to the enquiry was—a ship on fire. As we looked towards Spithead, to which our attention was directed, a vessel was accordingly seen, apparently a ten-gun brig, from which a large, thick, and dark stream of smoke was emitted. There could be no doubt, therefore, but what she was on fire, and the fleet of boats was held in readiness to board her when she got into the harbor—to scuttle her, if need be, and at all events to save the crew from the perils that awaited them.

One thing, however, perplexed every onlooker. The burning brig kept on her course steadily, went round the fleet at Spithead, and then coolly bore up for the harbor, where she presently made her appearance, puffing and blowing, but not burning. On she came to the amazement of all who beheld her, and having proceeded some way up the harbor, she returned and very quietly anchored off the Hard. But what was this extraordinary vessel which sailed without sails, went right on against the wind and tide, and did as she listed with these elements, which all men and ships had heretofore implicitly obeyed? Nobody could tell, for nobody had ever seen anything like her before. Jack, who has a tinge of superstition about him, said little, shook his head, chewed his quid, and looked wonderfully wise—for he plainly could not make her out, "in no way what somever." By and by the mysterious craft was boarded, and turned out to be the steamboat Caledonia, from the Clyde, which had come round to show our neighbors at the south what could be done by northern heads and hands; and this little vessel, which was much smaller than our ordinary river boats, was the first steamboat ever seen in English waters.

An incident of this kind was not likely to pass unnoticed—nor did it. On the following day everybody went to see her, and everybody expressed their astonishment at her powers. But about 11 a. m. there was a movement extraordinary on the waters. The Admiral's barge, filled with ladies and gentlemen, pulled alongside, who, after having satisfied their curiosity, went on board the—a ship corvette commanded by Captain Lord Napier, who was afterwards killed in China—where a military band awaited them, together with a large number of expectant visitors. The Caledonia's steam was up. She took the Esk in tow, and, amidst the cheers of the crowds on shore and crowds on shipboard, she steamed bravely out to Spithead, where she left her companion, and returned with what in those days, seemed inconceivable speed, and took the Endymion, 44, Capt. Henry Hope, in hand; and, to the delight of a large body of spectators, dashed out of the harbor with her burden, apparently as easy as a grown man could carry an infant. Thus were the sailing and tugging powers of steamboats first demonstrated to English eyes by a small Clyde steamboat, forty-nine years ago—a fact of which I was an eye-witness, and which may yet come to have some historical value.

Address by Lord Brougham.

At the first general meeting of the National Association for the promotion of Social Science, held lately at York, Lord Brougham delivered an opening address with regard to the American civil war. He said:—"And now what a scene of misery and of crime does their recent history and present condition present to the friends of social science, more horrid than any case known in modern, let us say Christian times! and with this sad peculiarity, that the whole people, instead of merely permitting, as in other cases, the crimes of their rulers, are themselves the active and willing agents in the work of merciless slaughter—of such wholesale bloodshed as never before disgraced the name of man. Some good men have been deceived by the notion that slavery is the cause of the war—duped by the pretext that the North fights to free the slave, whereas their emancipation edict was a mere belligerent measure, and an afterthought, they (as Bishop Wilberforce said) caring no more for the freedom of the black than they do for that of the white. But it has been reserved for the latter act of the tragedy to see that government, when destitute of other troops, drive herds of unhappy negroes to slaughter with no more remorse than sportsmen feel in clearing a preserve. Yet, certain that it be that the North did not make war to free the slave, and this could not have entered into their consideration when they began the contest for preventing the secession, it is no less certain that the maintenance of slavery—their detestable institution—was partly the object of the South in fighting for their independence; and the friend of humanity, although feeling that we are not entitled to require a more sudden emancipation than we ourselves effected in our colonies, may yet earnestly hope that out of this cruel contest and its countless evils the mercy of an all-ruling Providence may draw the good contemplated by neither party, of giving freedom to the slave. But, whatever difference of opinion may prevail regarding the origin of this frightful civil war, there can be none as to the duty imposed on other nations of not taking part with either belligerent; and in this country individuals were properly warned by proclamation against enlisting in either army, the enforcement of the Foreign Enlistment Act being held out as certain. Every British subject is liable to its penalties who enlists, and that which is now a misdemeanor was formerly a felony and at one time punishable with death. All who serve in the army of either party are guilty, and may be prosecuted in the Court of King's Bench as if they had been in an English county. Therefore, the North makes war upon the South by troops composed in part of persons liable to prosecution for the offence of enlisting, and it was one of the graves charges upon George III. that he employed German mercenaries against the independence of America, though these Germans were guilty of no offence in being themselves to the service. The poor Irish who thus sell themselves, break the law of their own country in order to perpetrate in America all the crimes of civil war."

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

A WORD TO MY DYSPEPTIC FRIEND.

You have asked me to prescribe for you. You expect medicine. Perhaps you hope for whisky, just now the rage for chronic maladies. But I shall give you nothing to swallow. You swallow too much already. Of all the maladies, dyspepsia is the most distressing. To get rid of its horrors you would part with your right arm. I believe you. But will you part with a portion of your table luxuries? I fear not. But, presuming you are in earnest, I will prescribe for you.

RULES.

1. Rise early, dress warm, and go out. If strong, walk; if weak, saunter. Drink cold water three times. Of all cold baths this is the best for the dyspeptic. After a half hour or more, come in for breakfast.

2. For breakfast eat a piece of good steak half as large as your hand, a slice of coarse bread, and a baked apple. Eat very slowly. Talk pleasantly with your neighbors. Read the cheerful comments of loyal journals. Avoid Copperheads as you do hot biscuits and strong coffee. Drink nothing.

3. Digest for an hour, and then to your work. I trust it is in the open air. Work hard till noon, and then rest body and mind till dinner. Sleep a little. Drink water.

4. For dinner (two or three o'clock) eat a slice of beef, mutton, or fish, as large as your hand, a potatoe, two or three spoonfuls of other vegetables, and a slice of coarse bread. Avoid tomatoes. For dessert, an apple. Give more than half an hour to this meal. Use no drink.

5. After dinner play anaconda for an hour. Now for the social, for pleasant games—a good time.

6. No supper. A little toast and tea even, for supper, will make your recovery very slow.

7. In a warm room bathe your skin with cold water, hastily, and go to bed in a well-ventilated room, before 9 o'clock.

Follow this prescription for three months and your stomach will so far recover that you can indulge for some time in all sorts of irregular and gluttonous eating.

Or, if you have resolved, in the fear of heaven, to "present your bodies living sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God," and will continue to eat and work like a christian, your distressing malady will soon be forgotten.—Dio Lewis, in the Independent.

Smile When You Can.

The sad of the world need your smiles; and the world itself may be the better for them. They do not cost much, and oftentimes bring their own sweet reward; and none but the Infinite. One cannot estimate the good one little smile may do. For aught that you or I may know, the gentle sympathising smile that you gratuitously bestow upon some unfortunate soul, laboring beneath a weight of doubt and grief, may tell upon countless generations yet unborn. Oh! if people could only realise the inestimable influence that even so little an act as a smile may exert upon one or a thousand of their fellow beings, they would not be so penurious of them as they are often prone to be.

Some people never smile. Selfish beings! Yet, perhaps, if you would accuse these same individuals of selfishness, they would deny the charge with a gusto truly worthy of a better cause. But it is selfish never to smile. By withholding smiles we refuse oftentimes an opportunity of manifesting a thankful and happy spirit for the good we receive from others, and from our God—to say nothing of the opportunities we may loose of cheering and comforting some less fortunate one. How many times have I heard the expression, "I know that she is a good woman, or that he is a good man, for he smiles so sweetly;" and in my opinion, it is even possible for a soul to be brought to Christ through the influence of a holy smile, irradiating the face of a true Christian. I do not love to see a sober faced Christian; one whose visage is always extended to its utmost capacity, and never illuminated by a heaven-lit smile. To such I would say, smile when you can.

An officer on a field day happended to be thrown from his horse, and as he was sprawling on the ground, said to a friend who ran to his assistance—"I thought I had improved in my riding, but I find I have fallen off.

SOMETHING LIKE "SOCIAL SCIENCE."—The public schools of Buffalo offer prizes to the young lady pupils for the best loaves of bread.

A lady said to her husband that she had read the art of love to make herself agreeable to him. "I had rather have your love without the art," he replied.

A man's belief gains infinitely the moment he can convince another mind thereof.

The Conference Scheme Completed.

The Quebec Conference has completed its work, and the delegates have been at Montreal and are now at Toronto, and will visit other places of interest before they return home. We may be ready to wonder how in the short sitting of about two weeks everything could be so easily arranged. Have the Delegates been so determined on confederation that they have, at all hazards, arranged and agreed to a confederation scheme without duly weighing and considering the work they had before them? Or have the principles of Union been so familiar to them that they only needed to meet and adjust them?

Whether or not this haste has produced an imperfect scheme cannot of course be told until details are made public; or perhaps until it is tested by experience. But, perhaps, it might be urged that the work was comparatively easy—that no length of time was necessary—and that if more time had been expended there might in all probability have been nothing more certain or correct than that which has received their assent. The details having not yet been made public, nothing very satisfactory can be given, rumors and hints being all that have yet reached us. These, however, may be taken as nearly correct. The Conference admitted the necessity for union by unanimously passing a resolution to the effect that union was desirable, and would conduce to the interest of the Provinces. The Federal union of the Provinces seems to have been more acceptable than a Legislative one, and thus each Province is left to conduct its own local matters in its Provincial legislature. The whole being in some degree tempered and regulated by the Confederate Legislature. The duration of this legislature is to be five years, an extension of one year to our present system.

The number of members of the Upper House is fixed at 76, distributed as follows: Upper Canada, 24; Lower Canada, 24; Newbrunswick, 10; Nova Scotia, 10; Prince Edward's Island, 4; Newfoundland, 4.

The Lower House to consist of 194 members, as follows: Upper Canada, 82; Lower Canada, 65; Nova Scotia, 19; New Brunswick, 15; Newfoundland, 8; Prince Edward's Island, 5; The qualification of members much as at present. The Upper House to be chosen by the Crown, the Lower House elected by the people. The Governor General to be sent as at present by the Imperial Government, and the Lieutenant Governors to be appointed by the Federal Government, and to hold office at pleasure. But we are yet in the dark as to what powers are to be entrusted to the Head of the Federal Government; what title he shall be designated by; how his cabinet shall be chosen, or whether he shall have any at all, or just be allowed to do as he wills between parliamentary sittings. But perhaps we may infer that the local cabinets or some member from each will be constituted the advisers of the executive head during recesses. All local matters are in the hands of local legislatures, except education, for the present state of things as now possessed by minorities are guaranteed. That is equivalent to fixing absolutely the principle of separate schools upon Upper Canada whether the majority of the people are desirous of it or not. How far this will meet the wishes of Upper Canada remains to be seen. The separate school system is a curse to any people where it obtains. It is a source of religious strife and a ready way of propagating strife to all time to come; and the sooner our statutes are purified from such a blot, the better for the Province and for the people. It is therefore a matter of sincere regret that any provisions should have been made and guaranteed for its continuance, unless what each provincial legislature might hereafter enact. We admit that it may be urged that we ought to suffer a little for the sake of our brethren in Lower Canada, who would be deprived of all chance of getting any education except through a system that they hold to be contrary to religion and reason. For should Upper Canada enact laws against separate schools, Lower Canada would retaliate. But we ask, could they in Lower Canada be worse than they are? Complaints, loud and numerous, reach us almost every day of the abuse of the present system; and if they are not satisfied now, are they likely to be with the continuance of that which causes this discontent? Such provisions, we hesitate not to say, will be a blotch on the new constitution of the proposed confederacy, and so long as they remain they will serve as a monument of the short-sightedness of the Quebec Delegates.

We do not make these remarks in any spirit of opposition to the proposed confederation, but from a feeling of wrong being done to Upper Canada in guaranteeing the continuance of any principle that did not materially concern all, and one too that would have been as safe in the hands of local governments. We are told that an early assembling of Parliament will take place this session to consider and assent to the proposed changes. Some are already asserting that the present House should not decide on this matter, as they were chosen for legislating according to existing principles and not to change constitutions. This is a small matter to us. We have confidence in our representatives, and can trust this matter in their hands, nothing doubting that all will be duly and fairly attended to as far as they are concerned.

THE LATE FIRES.—In our remarks on the late fires, in reference to the burning of Mr. Ward's bake-house we said we supposed it originated from the oven. But after due enquiry, we learn that the portion where the fire originated was not near the oven, and that there had not been any fire, light, stove, or any other known cause in that portion of the building for weeks before the fire. The door, however, of this portion is supposed to have been unsecured, and thus some of those who have no certain abiding places may have entered in, and by accident, smoking or otherwise, caused the fire.

ST. ALBANS AFFAIR.

No news of importance concerning this affair has reached us since our last issue. The prisoners have been removed from St. Johns to Montreal, and are now undergoing trial there. They claim to be Confederate soldiers acting under instructions from the Confederate Government, and as such think they cannot be claimed by the extradition treaty. How they can hope to impose upon the authorities in this matter, we are unable to conjecture. There can be no reasonable doubt but that they are a party of robbers, and ought to be treated as such, no matter whose instructions they were acting under. Any right they have to British protection is merely to see that justice is meted out to them. True, if they can establish the fact that they came direct from the south with the intent of retaliation and only made their escape to Canada while being pursued, they would certainly then come within the terms of the treaty, and be proper objects of protection as much as Mason and Slidel. But if, on the contrary, they have planned the robbery on Canadian soil, and left Canada for the purpose of carrying their plans into effect, they must be considered as robbers, and, to us, worse than robbers, as their act might have been the cause of creating trouble between us and the Northern States. However much the sympathies of our own citizens may be towards the South, these feelings should not urge us into any action: it is as much our duty as British subjects to observe the strictest neutrality as it is the duty of the people of Great Britain. As a portion of that Empire we should remember that our beloved Queen enjoines thy strictest neutrality, and any breach of it is at our own peril. The representatives of the Federal Government may do strange things in order to work the extradition of the prisoners, and resort to means that may arouse strong feelings of resentment in our minds, (although we are not aware that they have yet done so,) yet it is nevertheless the duty of Canadians to aid the United States authorities, in this case we think, to bring these raids for the destruction of private property to an end. Such acts cannot be considered as necessary for any strategic purposes in relation to the engagements that are now being carried on—and even though they could be, Canadians could not wish them to be carried on from this side of the lines. If they undertook them for the purposes of gain they should bear also the losses or consequent disadvantages. Justice demands that they should be delivered up and receive their just recompense of reward. A little delay may not be amiss, as the American mind may, in the mean time, cool down, and thus the prisoners may be saved from undue severity, which in excitement might have been resorted to.

THE LADY'S FRIEND.

We learn from the November number of this New Magazine of Fashion and Literature, that it has already attained a large circulation. The aim of the publishers is to rival the three dollar magazines in the quality of their engravings and contents. This it has given during the present year, in every number, a finely engraved and colored double Fashion Plate, while its other numerous engravings are of the best quality. The long array of the literary contributors to The Lady's Friend, nearly all of whom are ladies, is highly creditable to the Magazine, and also to the country, as showing how large and cultivated a class of lady writers it possesses. Many may wonder how any magazine can be got up in so handsome and lavish a manner as this is, at the low price of $2.50, saying nothing of the reduced rates of clubs. The publishers say that it is only done by having a very large circulation, as money would certainly be lost on a small edition.

We have scarcely left ourselves room to speak of the November number, but we may briefly state that there is a beautiful and touching steel engraving, called "The empty Cradle"—a very handsome Double Colored Fashion Plate—a quantity of other engravings, some of them very pretty, and all very useful to the ladies—a piece of music, and the usual assortment of interesting stories, poetry, &c.

Price $2.50; 2 copies 4.00; 9 copies $16; 21 copies $35.00. Single numbers sent, postage paid, for 25 cents. A Sewing Machine premium is also given on certain terms. Address Deacon & Peterson, 319 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

Now is the time to begin making up Clubs for 1865.

INDIAN CURIOSITIES.—Some interest has been created by the discovery of a number of Indian curiosities in the lands of the English Land Company, township of Dysart, in the rear of Peterborough. The men at work on the company's road accidentally found an Indian Grave, and on opening it found buried therein a number of silver trinkets of excellent workmanship and in capital preservation. There are said to be numbers of these graves throughout the English Company's lands, they having been in former years the neutral ground between the Chippewas and the Mohawks. The company's officers have taken steps to have those graves respected.

George Sanders, a wealthy citizen of Cambridge, Massachusetts, died recently, leaving a fortune of half a million of dollars. After making a bequest of $20,000 to Harvard College, and liberally providing for his relatives, his will goes on to say that the testator believed drunkenness to be a crime and the origin of a large portion of the crime and misery in the community. He, therefore, left $10,000 to his native town Gloucester, Massachusetts, and a like sum to the city of Cambridge, the interest of which sums should be paid as a salary to a temperance missionary in each place, to be constantly employed in reforming old drunkards and preventing young ones from being made.

THE VACANT VICE-CHANCELLORSHIP.—Our information from Quebec leads us to believe that Mr. Mowat has been offered the seat on the Chancery Bench, rendered vacant by the death of Mr. Vice-Chancellor Esten. In connection with this rumor it is stated that Mr. Brown will use his influence to retain Mr. Mowat in the Cabinet; and probably it will be sufficiently strong to effect the purpose.—Leader.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Whither was we to Sing?

Sixty-two and nine penny half-penny is the £, in county currency, and about $1900 of this years estimates yet unprovided for! And this too in the midst of "hard times"—a burn which has built no magnificent roads or railways—no expensive artificial harbor or municipal town halls. A town whose debt compared with some of our neighbors' is a mere bagatelle. Where, you ask, has the money gone? Why are taxes so large and heavy? Jobbery! Jobbery! Jobbery! This is the only answer you get. Ask the same questions in Toronto, Hamilton, Port Hope, or Cobourg, and you get the same answer—dirty jobbing, petty swindling, and unfaithfulness in the cause of our common rule. There was a day when a citizen of Peterborough congratulated himself when he thought of his immunity from taxes; but alas, we are in a fair way of being able to sympathize with our neighbors. Our councillors seek office now only that they may make money out of the badly guarded public purse. Talk about shoddy! We have in our midst men, who, in their small way, and in proportion to their opportunities, are as deserving of the halter as any shoddy gentleman of the neighboring republic. Where has the public money been spent this year? Ans. Opposite the Councillors' lots. Who supplied the rotten lumber for sidewalks? Ask the Councillor (who, although forbidden by law to have any dealings with the Council, yet supplies bad lumber and is paid on demand, no questions being asked.) Whose horses—nags let me say—find constant and remunerative employment? Ans.—another Councillor's. Whose nag is paid to draw broken plank to Mr. Arnot's yard for firewood? Ask the Chief Constable. Maybe you'll get a civil answer.

These few thoughts were first inspired by seeing the little memorandum from the taxgatherer, and again were revived in force when I saw the Mayor to-day amusing himself by poking his walking cane right through and through some of the new planking. Citizens, we complain of our grievances, but complaints won't mend matters. So long as we put in the council a lot of men who will not trouble themselves about the business they go to look after, and another lot of men who wiggle and twist everything to their own advantage, regardless of the public welfare, just so long will we continue to sink deeper and deeper into trouble. Peterborough to-day stands better than any town in the Province Will she continue thus? The matter lies in your own hands Be faithful then, and if those in whom you have placed power have been false to their trust, if dishonesty and extravagance have marked their course instead of faithfulness and economy, then kick them out. Put in new councillors Remember that faithfulness is rare now, when all is well, will keep all well, but dishonesty and looseness will, in a short time, bring you where no exertion on your part can make amends or bring back that which is lost.

TAX-PAYER.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—It may not be generally known by the people of Peterborough that the Municipal Council of Otonabee have, or are being about to dispose of and close up the old travelled road around the hill leading from the Otonabee bridge into the town, being on lots No. 14 and 15, on the line between the 12th and 13th concession of the township of Otonabee, thereby greatly impeding the travel to your beautiful town, especially with heavy loads. The undersigned was the bearer of a petition to the said Council of Otonabee on the 18th inst., which was signed by thirty-nine ratepayers of South Monaghan, praying that the said road round the hill might not be stopped: and, likewise, there was a petition from the freeholders and householders of that part of the township of Otonabee who were interested in the road, setting forth the height and grade of the hill the public will have to climb if the level road is closed. The petition stated that the hill had been carefully levelled, the result of which was as follows, viz., the perpendicular height, 76ft. 9 in.; 150 feet of which rose 1 foot in every five feet nine inches; in 189 feet of said hill the grade was one foot in every seven feet eleven inches. It was shown in vain that the above grade was too steep for an ordinary load to be taken up, especially in wet weather. The facts produced did not so much as call forth a remark from the said Council, who, without any debate, passed a resolution on which to found a by-law for disposing of the old road. Now, if the corporation or people of Peterborough desire to retain the trade of the eastern portion of South Monaghan, they must interfere about the above road. Perhaps it is not too late to get the County Council to assume the road, or take such steps in the matter as to them shall appear most proper.

Confederate Finances.

[From the Richmond Despatch.]

Secretary Tenholm has written a letter to the Commissioners to fix prices for four of the States of the Confederacy, which will be read with interest by some. In this letter he says:

The entire public debt, funded and unfunded, was on the first of July last about $1,250,000,000. The expense from July to December estimated at $325,000,000—total, $1,175,000,000. Should the war continue and its progress add about $500,000,000 more, the total in round numbers would be $2,000,000,000. This would entail an annual interest of 40,000,000, and asks:

Why should our ability to bear this burden be doubted? Before this war it was alleged (and, in my opinion, with great truth) that a sum fully as great as this was annually paid in tribute to the Northern States. Why should it not be paid with equal ease to our own government, by whom it will be returned to us in the payment of interest?

There is one way, however, in which the debt may be made oppressive, as the following transaction will show: The government paid on one occasion $300,000 for certain supplies, and the party who received this sum bought with it, from a foreigner, $15,000 in gold, deliverable in England. With the $300,000 thus obtained the foreigner then bought an equal amount of government bonds bearing seven per cent. per annum interest.

It follows that at the end of this war, for $15,000 thus acquired by the citizen, the government will owe a debt of $300,000.

The citizen will receive annually $1,050 interest; the government will pay annually $21,000. Had he, on the contrary, bought the bonds himself the $21,000 annually paid by the government would have been received by one of its own citizens, and the country, as a whole would have been neither richer nor poorer. I would earnestly press upon your consideration that, when traced through all their various ramifications, this is at last the uniform result of every case in which supplies are sold to the government and property of any description is bought with the money to the exclusion of government securities.

ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE.—One Thomas Gladstone who is putting in a term of imprisonment in Toronto Jail, being brought to the Court House to give evidence in some case, during permission to visit the water-closet, endeavored to make his escape, and did so for a few minutes, but being met by detective McGarry, who knew the fellow, and also that his time was not expired. McGarry after a sharp race succeeded in securing him, and brought him to the Court House, and delivered him up to the Sheriff again.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

Since the victory on the valley there is a quiet. Both parties seem disposed to watch each other and refresh themselves.

Grant is said to have made or is making another move, what he has done we are unable to chronicle.

We publish to-day a Southern account of the Shenandoah victory; last week we gave the Northern,—our readers will thus have a little idea of the difficulties of selecting reliable war news. The South is preparing to arm 300,000 negroes, pay their masters, make them free, and give them grants of 50 acres of land. Price is said to have sufficed a defeat and to be retiring.

The Tribune's despatch from the Army of the James, on the 26th, says of the demonstrations made by Gen. Butler's forces:—

Gen. Terry moved the 10th corps out in advance of our entire right, and began occupying the country along the scene of the fight of the 14th inst., and from that point on the Darby-town road northward to the Charles City road. Considerable desultory firing occurred here during the day, without further effect than to to show the enemy's strength.

The 18th corps meanwhile, accompanied by Kautz's cavalry, moved out towards the Williamsburg road, and there engaged the enemy late in the afternoon, with varying success.

Holman's brigade of coloured troops succeeded in carrying one of the enemy's redoubts, and capturing the guns, while Fairchilds and Hall's brigade were roughly handled while endeavouring to take a strong position held by the enemy, directly on the Williamsburg road, in the neighbourhood of Seven Pines.

Darkness came on too soon to permit us to avail ourselves of the advantage gained by the capture of the redoubt on the enemy's left, and our troops were ordered to retire, which they did at daylight for a fair start again next morning.

The result on the other side of the James however, led Gen. Grant to order the withdrawal of our forces to their original position. Matters have resumed their usual quiet here.

The losses of the 10th army corps will amount to some 300 men or thereabouts, and of the 18th to probably double that. About half of them, however, were captured by the enemy.

Among the latest rebel newspaper extracts is a proclamation of Jeff Davis, naming the 16th of November as a national thanksgiving day in his dominions. In this document, Jeff., while claiming that thanks are due for the many signal victories with which their arms have been crowned, for the fruitfulness with which their land has been blessed, and for the unimpaired energy with which the hearts of the rebels have been inspired, at the same time acknowledges that their sins have merited and received grievous chastisement, for which the soldiers of the Union can vouch, and that the large districts of their country have been swept over and held by the armies of the United States. That the coloured troops are a thorn in Jeff.'s side is shown by his statement that, "with fiendish malignity, the passions of a servile race have been excited by our foes."

The Hamilton Mercury reviews at length the so-called peace theories of A.H. Stephens and the rebel Congressman Boyce. In the course of its criticism, it very frankly admits that the people of rebeldom live under a despotism; that the rebel constitution has been violated by the rebel Congress in the levying of direct taxes, and that the public faith has been forfeited by compelling holders of rebel currency to sacrifice one third of it. Our late military disasters it says, have encouraged the reconstructionists to raise their heads.

The rebel accounts of Grant's late movements are summed up in a terrible Union loss in killed and wounded, while the rebel loss is put at 25 men.

The death of the rebel Gen. Deantig is announced.

Headquarters Army of the Potomac, Oct. 30—Since the army returned to the old quarters on Tuesday, nothing of importance has transpired.

During the day the entire army reached the position occupied previous to the movement being made, when the rebels at once withdrew, and they also returned to their former position.

Our losses will reach about 1,500, as far as can be ascertained at present. The 2nd corps, which did the most of the fighting, had 10 officers killed and 31 wounded. They also lost 77 men killed, 480 wounded, and about 400 missing.

The 5th corps lost about 130 altogether.

The 9th corps lost upwards of 150, mostly belonging to the coloured division.

The casualties in the cavalry division are not known precisely, but are thought to be about 200. Many of those classed as missing will undoubtedly return to camp, as the number of stragglers was large, and they are constantly coming in.

The loss of the enemy some say was more than our own in killed and wounded. We have 828 prisoners and four battle flags, most of which were taken by the 2nd corps, and the highest praise is given by all to the officers and men of the 2nd and 3rd divisions of the 2nd corps for their behaviour during the day. Generals Egan and Mott, who commanded them, and Gen. Smythe and Colonel McAlister, commanding brigades, are particularly praised for the very able manner in which they handled their men.

The charge made by the New Jersey Brigade, under Col. McAllister, on the enemy who had got in the rear of our forces, was one of the finest ever witnessed, and resulted in saving the entire position.

All is now quiet with the exception of picket firing, which is quiet lively at night.

(From the Richmond Examiner, Oct. 25.

We have the stereotype report "all quiet" to make in regard to the north side. Our battery at Howlett's continues to throw heavy shells into the Dutch Gap canal. The latest Yankee papers say we have withdrawn the captured negroes from work on the fortifications, and that Butler has triumphed. As soon as he is officially notified of the withdrawal of the negroes he will release our prisoners from their perilous confinement in the canal. Mr. McRae has been paroled until he shall be regularly exchanged, and is now in the city.

THE SOUTH SIDE.

All quiet at and around Petersburg. An impression prevails that Grant will desist from his butcheries until Lincoln's election has been decided. We trust General Lee does not share any such delusion, and believe he will hold himself in readiness for an attack at any hour of the day or night. It is reported that the entire line of the enemy's works on our extreme left, near the Appomattox, has very recently been levelled to the ground and abandoned, in consequence of the erection, by our working parties, of some very powerful fortifications in close proximity to, and commanding, the abandoned Yankee line. Notwithstanding the heavy shelling of our workmen, this new line has been built with a celerity which seems not only to have astonished, but actually alarmed, the Yankees. Grant is now walled in by four lines of redoubts, redans, and rifle pits, each interior line stronger than the one in front of it. Most of his artillery is posted on the inner line.

LATEST FROM THE SHENANDOAH.

(From the Richmond Sentinel, October 25.)

By an officer from the valley we learned yesterday evening that Sheridan is at Cedar creek, the position he occupied when attacked by Early. Our cavalry occupy Fisher's hill. Our main force is near New Market. We are informed that Sheridan's dispatches are falser than usual; that his "vigorous attack" is a thing of paper; that his force "pursuit" is equally a fabrication; that our total loss is under a thousand; and that the loss of the enemy was fully six thousand. Our loss of artillery and ambulances was due to their being at or near the rear of the column. They were captured by the sudden dash of a comparatively small party.

It required but a small analysis to show that, at the best for the federals the battle was an even one, victory having divided her favors, giving us fruits prisoners to us and cannon to the enemy. The further reports which we now give show the advantage greatly in our favor. Sheridan's victory is manufactured for the election. As little as the Republican party ought to think of it to pay for the powder.

The Lynchburg Republican says, that "in the attack upon Crook's corps, last week, we took one hundred prisoners, and killed and wounded between three and four hundred of the enemy. One loss in the affair, which Yankee claims as a brilliant victory, was about two hundred and fifty from all causes. Among our wounded were Brigadier-General Conner, commanding Kershaw's division, who lost a leg, and Colonel Lockerford, of North Carolina. The prisoners taken in the fight arrived here on Thursday evening."

A New York paper, the "New Nation," says: There are now more than 200,000 deserters. You may listen to the conversation of the men in the New York and Pennsylvania regiments especially; you will hear the soldiers carry contempt of morality and law so far as to boast of having sold themselves from 16 to 18 times; of having deserted each time and received a fresh bounty. We meet them every day in New York who, engaged for three years, have not been six months under the flag; out of forty persons engaged in New York, in a certain circle of workmen, we heard a few days ago that from 30 to 37 had deserted, and from three to ten only were under the flag. The same soldier is paid eight or ten times over, so that in paying 100,000 men we have really 10,000. If we add that in many cases each of these men figures under his different names of engagement in the effective, and receives his rations, &c., we shall see what disorder may exist. Death of the Duke of Newcastle.

The City of Manchester brings tidings of the death of the Duke of Newcastle. The deceased, Henry Pelham Clinton, 5th Duke of Newcastle, was born in London, on the 22nd May, 1811. As Lord Lincoln, he represented South Notts in the House of Commons from 1832 to 1846, and was afterwards member for the Falkirk district of burghs. In 1851 he was succeeded to the dukedom, and entered the House of Lords. He twice held office under Sir Robert Peel—once for a few months in 2834-5, and afterwards for five years from 1841 to 1846. In 1852 he became Colonial Secretary in the Aberdeen Administration, and according to the rule then prevailing, performed the duties of the war department. After the breaking out of the Russian war the duties devolving upon him were divided, and he became Minister of War. As such he received a heavy share of the censure aroused by the mismanagement which left the British army in the Crimea, during the winter of 1854-5, without shelter fuel, proper clothing, and sometimes almost without food. The House of Commons resolved upon an enquiry into the management of the war, and the Duke, after defending himself with great spirit, resigned, as also did his colleagues. He again returned to office in 1859, as Colonial Secretary, under Lord Palmerston, and in that capacity accompanied the Prince of Wales on his visit to these Provinces and the United States in 1860. He resigned that position some months since, on account of the lengthened illness that has ended in his death. The Duke of Newcastle was married, in 1832, to the only daughter of the late Duke of Hamilton, by whom he had several children. He was divorced from her in 1850, on account of her misconduct.—Globe.

CHURCH CONGRESS IN ENGLAND.

SECOND SESSION OPENS, A SERMON.

The Clerical Congress, about which a good deal has been said of late, opened at Bristol on Tuesday, Oct. 11. The Congress was not exclusively clerical, laymen joining in the discussions, which occupied three days—Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The discussions of the first day embraced the general subjects of ecclesiastical organization and extension, those of the second day referring to matters affecting the general and practical work of the Church, and the third day's discussions chiefly relating to education, &c. The Archbishop of Canterbury was the patron of the Congress, and the bishop of the diocese (Gloucester and Bristol) the president.

On the second day while the subject of "collegiate churches in large towns" was under discussion,

THE PRESIDENT (the Bishop of Gloucester and Bristol) announced that the Rev. Mr. Lyne would speak next on this question.

The so-called Brother Ignatius" presented himself on the platform, clad in his peculiar costume—costume on the Benedictine model, and resembling more clearly than anything else a rough inverse cape many sizes too large, with sleeves and hood—his head completely shaven, with the exception of a narrow ring. He was greeted with a storm of disapprobation such as one would hardly believe clerical throats to be capable of, though at the same time there was a large minority which cried out to give him a fair hearing. The ladies certainly did not join in the hisses and cries, but many of them were conspicuously vehement in waving him away, and in encouraging their male friends to compel him to silence. Mr. Lyne faced the storm bravely for several minutes, but, finding it impossible after one or two attempts to make his voice heard, sank down in a chair which Lord Lyttleton vacated for him; and

THE PRESIDENT, who for some time had been vainly endeavouring to calm the storm, when silence was thus restored, said—I hope you will listen to the counsel of your President. A member of the congress—a clergyman of the Church of England—has sent in his name to speak. Let us show that we are Christian men let us hear what he has to say in a christian spirit. I am sure that we shall do wisely, and respect ourselves in so doing. I am certain, also, though I have never had the pleasure of seeing him before, that Mr. Lyne will only say what is proper and comfortable to an occasion like the present. Let us be large-hearted whatever we are. (Cheers.)

MR. LYNE, who speaks with considerable energy and fervour, and with the graceful action of a consummate actor, then stood forward and said,—Fellow-countrymen and fellow-Churchmen,—I appeal to you to give me a few moments' audience, and I hope, with the help of Almighty God, that I shall not abuse your indulgence. The subject under consideration is, how our national Church of England can be enabled to reach the wretched heathen masses of our home population. I have labored in some of the worst districts, among the most degraded masses of our home heathen. I have seen vast misery, as most of my fellow-clergymen, I have seen—and the more I see the more I feel and am convinced—that our present parochial system cannot grapple with the fearful misery around us. If our present Church system is unable to grapple with these evils, the question is, how is she to be put in a position to do it? By the establishment of collegiate churches in our large towns. In this I feel a solemn and deep interest. I don't wish to expand before you to contend for names—to bring anything before you which may be obnoxious — anything which may be considered of a party character. All I long for is that our mother Church of England should be the mother of the people and the nurse of the sick and spiritually dead. (Applause.) The question is, how? It is of no use our meeting together in large numbers, either in congresses or other assemblies, if we only deal with the theoretical part of the question. We must be up and doing, for souls are perishing. This Bristol Congress should begin by establishing some such bodies of men. They must be bodies such as our Church of England can sanction as scriptural. (Hear.) Suppose we got together a certain number of men devoted to heart and soul service of God; it would be impossible that such men could go on without rules. Rules must be laid down which those men would faithfully agree to submit to. If rules are to be laid down, where shall we find them? If you will look for yourselves into the rules of St. Benedict—(loud cries of disapprobation.) I am sure those who cry "Oh!" cannot have read for themselves—you will find that the essence of that rule is the love of Jesus for himself and the love of our fellow-men for his sake. No Christian can dissent from that. This is nothing of Popery in the rule of St. Benedict, for it was framed before the great corruptions of Rome crept in. (Hear, hear.) That is the reason why we—for, however we may be calumniated, we desire to remain members of the Reformed Church of England—have chosen this rule. These collegiate churches ought to be above all suspicion. Do our colleges, I would ask, consist of married men? Would it be compatable with their duties for the young men in our colleges to have their wives and families living with them? ("Oh, oh!") It is necessary, therefore, that these collegiate bodies should be unshackled by the holy ties—for holy I admit them to be—of wives and children. ("Oh, oh!" These collegiate bodies were used by the early Church, and by the mediæval Church, though with many abuses, I admit. Let us have, then, these collegiate bodies of men, ever ready, night and day, to go forth into the houses of misery—ever at the beck and call of the parish clergy. We shall succeed thus in enabling our Church to reach the men whom she has never yet been able to reach. I hope you will prayerfully consider this subject. You know how often such men as Bishops Montague and Thorndyke have sighed for the restoration of monasteries. ("Oh, oh!" and loud cries of "no Popery.") I beg your pardon for inadvertently using the word—not because I am ashamed of it, but because I don't wish to offend. I hope something will be done; we have talk enough, but no work. How can our parish clergymen grapple with the immense mass of work before them? In one parish where I was at work there was a population of 35,000, and no one clergyman could grapple with one tithe of the vast misery. Let us do something. Why not begin at Bristol, since it is here the subject has been brought forward in solemn congress? (Applause.) [The allotted ten minutes having here expired, the Reverend brother's speech was brought to a close, and he at once left the room, having certainly done something to propitiate his audience, the most of whom were willing to give him credit for sincerity of motive, if not for the good taste of his appearance there.]

The Earl of HARROWBY, who was loudly cheered, said,—If it had not been for the startling apparation which has just disappeared, I should not have taken part in this discussion. A few years ago we should as soon have expected to see St. Benedict himself appearing before us. (Laughter.) I am not surprised, however, that anyone who has had so much to do with the masses of vice and misery in our great towns should break out into excrescenes and distortions in the attempt to remedy such great evils, and we can but feel deeply grateful to them for undertaking any kind of experiment. At the same time, whether we attain our object by collegiate churches, or by subdivision of parishes, who is it necessary, in doing so, to offend the feelings of other people? (Cheers) Why is it necessary to raise obstacles in your own way? Cannot a man attempt to do good among the laboring classes without wearing an obnoxious habit, or without shewering his crown? (Loud cheers.) If a man thinks that everything should be done for the spread of the doctrines of the Reformed Church, is it necessary that he should put on an appearance which is connected with the idea of a totally different Church? (Loud cheers.) I hope that these men will re-consider their course, and will reflect whether it is not possible to extract all the good which may be found in the inner principle of the rule of St. Benedict without wearing his garb. (Loud cheers.) In reference to the particular question at issue, Lord Harrowby said that though there was much to be said on both sides of the question, yet he thought on the whole, that subdivision of parishes would be the most advantageous, as most analogous to the genius of English civil law.

After the sensation caused by this incident which, but for the judicious management of the Bishop, and the ready rejoinder of the Earl of Harrowby, might have damaged the success of the Congress, had subsided, the Dean of Ely and other speakers addressed the meeting on the same subject.

A happy couple were lately united in what the negro minstrels call "the bonds of hemlock" at Dewsbury, England. The ages of the pair and their "men mas" united, were two hundred and twenty years. The lovely bride of seventy-two had to be assisted out of the cab to undergo the interesting ceremony by two "youths," aged seventy-four years each.

WELDING IRON BY HYDRAULIC PRESSURE.—A series of experiments have lately been made in Paris by M. Dupuytat, engineer in the workshops of the Western Railway, to ascertain whether iron might be welded by hydraulic pressure instead of by the sledge hammer. The latter indeed has not a sufficient impetus to reach the very core of the metal, while continuous pressure acts indistinctly to any depth. In the experiments alluded to M. Dupuytat caused two iron bars an inch and a half in diameter, and heated to the welding point, to be placed between the piston and the top of an hydraulic press. The bars were welded together by this means with extraordinary ease, the iron being, as it were, kneaded together, and bulged out at the sides under the pressure. The action of the press was suspended when the part welded was brought down to the thickness of the bars. After cooling, the welded part was cut through to examine the inside, which was found perfectly compact. To try it, one of the halves was placed under a large hammer weighing 1,800 kilogrammes, and it was not until the third stroke that the welding was discovered.

A late letter from Cuba contains an account of the carrying off of a boy, eight years old, by a cuttle-fish, which is about an awful affair as we have read of for some time. It seems that several children were playing near the shore, and coming upon the cuttle-fish, a few rods from the water, began to throw sticks and stones at it. The fish at once retreated toward the water, the children followed in great glee, and skipping missles upon the creature, the like of which they had never before seen. As soon as the cuttle-fish had got to the water's edge it threw one of its long arms up in the arm of the boy nearest to it, and, to his and his playfellows' horror, began to drag him into the sea. The poor child struggled to get loose, and screamed agonizingly, and some of the larger boys rushed to his aid, but too late. His body was almost instantly dragged out of sight beneath the foam; and from the well known veracity of the cuttle fish it was, of course, understood that the wretched child was speedily devoured.

DON'T CATCH AND CRY SO, CHILDREN.—Bryan's Pulmonic Waters will relieve you in ten minutes after use, cure your sore throat and hoarseness, give tone and compass to your voice, and leave you in perfect singing order. Procure a box without delay, put a handful in your pocket and then bid farewell to coughs, colds, &c. For sale at every Drug Store. 25 cents a box.

HOPE.—There is yet hope for the dyspeptic! Do not despair, if you have been unable to find relief. Hoofland's German Bitters will cure any and every case of Dyspepsia. It will cure every case of Liver complaint. It will remove the yellow and sallow appearance from the skin and eyes. It will restore the nervous system to its original vigor, and give entire health to the body. For sale by all Druggists and dealers in medicines.

Never be ashamed of confessing your ignorance, for the wisest man upon earth is ignorant of many things, inasmuch that what he knows is a mere nothing in comparison to what he does not know. But we apprehend very few are ignorant of the wonderful effects of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," its a most sure and rapid cure for colds, rheumatism, pleurisy, cholic, cholera morbus, and all summer complaints. Sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cents per bottle.

COL. GATES of the U. S. Army says that during his campaign in Mexico he would rather retire to his couch without his sword than a bottle of "Radway's Ready Relief." It was the only medicine he used during the Mexican campaign. Gen. J. Hobart

Curiosities.

During the late Presidential campaign a negro named Alfred Foster was in North Carolina, and was marched up to the officer of the day to give an account of himself, who gives the following amusing conversation as it took place :—

"What's your name ?"

"My name's Sam."

"Sam what ?"

"No Sah ; not Sam Watt. I'se jis Sam."

"What's your other name ?"

"I se got no oder name, Sah. I'se Sam—dat's all.

"What's your master's name ?"

"I'se got no mass now ; mass resined away—yah! yah! I'se a free nigger now."

"Well, what's your father's and mother's name ?"

"I'se got none, Sah—nebber had none. I'se jist sam—ain't nobody else."

"Haven't you any brothers and sisters ?"

"No, Sah—nebber had none. No brudder, no sister, no fader, no moulder, no mass—nothin' but Sam. When you see Sam you see all der is of us."

Some village traders carrying a pedlar who they thought, was doing trade with their customers, questioned him whether "he had a license to sell." "A license to sell! no, certainly not, quoth cheap John ; whereupon they dragged him, holus bolus, before the worship the justices. On being regularly interrogated whether he was duly licensed, John sang out lustily, "In course I his ; there you are," exhibiting her Majesty's stamp upon his pantaloons accused him of having bedrid fraudulently misled them. "Bosh!" cried the pedlar. "You asked me if I had a license to sell, and I told you the truth when I told you I did not. I do not wish to sell it ; I want it for my own use !"

Human Human.—All the charm of the native is in his simplicity ; as in the case of the tipsy traveller who was harshly condemned by Alderman Porter to six months imprisonment, with the remark that he might pass the time in cursing whisky.

"By dad I will," said the poor fellow, "and in cursing Porter, too."

One of the Irish thief ; three men were ready to swear they had seen him steal the shirt from the hedge, when he said—

"He could bring six men who could swear they hadn't seen him steal it."

Some one was smoking in the presence of the President and complimented him on having no vices—neither drinking nor smoking.

That's a doubtful compliment, said the President. I recollect once being outside a stage in Illinois, and a man sitting by me offered me a cigar. I told him I had no vices. He said nothing, smoked for some time, and then grunted out—

It's my opinion, that folks who have no vices have plaguey few virtues.

Human Drudges.—When a man is patient, and humble, and contented with little, he is almost invariably the butt and the drudge of others. Every one is acquainted with some big-headed, ungainly, meek, easy-tempered human donkey, who runs errands, lends money, amuses children, hangs pictures, sees old maids home, sleeps on the shake-down, goes outside the omnibus in the rain to oblige a lady, and generally does everything he is asked to do by his sharper and more selfish neighbors.

An American paper gives the following rhyme on wedded bliss :—

Heaven bless the wives, they fill our lives
With little bees and honey !
They ease life's shocks, they mend our socks,
But—don't they spend the money.

When we are sick, they heal us quick,
That is, if they do love us ;
If not, we die, and yet they cry,
And raise tombstones above us.

Sage Advice.—Never pay a bill on first presentation—it would look as if you were too ostentatious of honesty. At the second time of presenting you may consider about it, and say, "call again." Third or fourth time you may be either out at home or out of money, and should the creditor call a fifth, you may have fair reason to be offended at his pertinacity, and not pay the bill at all.

An "Idea Modeller" writes :—I was teaching school in a quiet country village. The second morning of the season I found leisure to note my surroundings, and among the scanty furniture I espied a three-legged stool. "Is that the dunce's block ?" I said to a little girl of five. The eyes sparkled, and the curls nodded assent, and the lips rippled out, "I guess so—the teachers always sit on that."

Two lawyers in Lowell, returning from court the other day, one said to the other, "I've a notion to join Rev. Mr.——'s church ; been debating the matter for some time. What do you think of it ?" "Wouldn't do it," said the other. "Well, why ?" "Because it could do you no possible good, while it would be great injury to the church."

A woman in California got married, and in four weeks was a widow. Three weeks after married again, and in two weeks more was again a widow. Two weeks after married her brother-in-law.

Too Many Cooks.—Elwes, the noted miser, used to say, "If you keep one servant, your work is done ; if you keep two, it is half done ; and if you keep three you may do it yourself."

We walked to church on Sunday morning behind "the girl with a hole in the heel of her stocking." She probably knew of it Saturday, but remembered the Sabbath and kept it hole-y.

The following toast was recently proposed at a fireman's dinner :—"The ladies—Their eyes kindle the only flames which we cannot extinguish, and against which there is no insurance.

Douglas Jerrold once said to an ardent young gentleman, who was anxious to see himself in print, "Be advised by me, young' un , don't take down the shutters before there is something in the window."

Some mischievous wag, one night, pulled down a tanner's sign, and put it over a lawyer's door ; in the morning it read, "All sorts of turning and twisting done here."

If the cat had wings, no bird would be left in the air. If every man had what he is wishing, who would have anything ?

Love.—Love is the nature of the burning-glass, which, kept still in one place, fireth, changed often it doeth nothing.

Pack your cares in as small a space as you can, so that you carry them yourself, and not let them annoy others.

It is a popular delusion to believe that powder on a lady's face has the same effect as that in a musket—namely, to go off.

Why is type-setting beneficial to a nervous man ? Because to call tranquil himself.

Why is a compositor like a chain-cable ?

8000	Pieces Silver Tea Spoons	10	to	20 per dozen
5000	Table Spoons and Forks	20	to	40 "

In consequence of the great stagnation of trade in the manufacturing districts of England through the war having cut off the supply of cotton, a large quantity of Valuable Jewelry, originally intended for the English market, has been sent off for sale in this country, and must be sold at any sacrifice !

Under these circumstances, Arrandale & Co., acting as Agents for the principle European Manufacturers, have resolved upon a great gift distribution, subject to the following regulations :—

☞ Certificates, naming each article and its value, are placed in sealed envelopes, and well mixed. One of these envelopes will be sent by mail to any address, on receipt of 25 cents.

All articles sold at One Dollar each, without regard to value !

On receipt of the Certificate, you will see what you are going to have, and then it is at your option to send the Dollar and take the article or not. Purchasers may thus obtain a Gold Watch, Diamond Ring, or any set of Jewelry in our list, for One Dollar, and in no case can they get less than One Dollars worth, as there are no blanks. The price of Certificates are as follows :—

One for	25 cents.
Five for	$1
Eleven for	2
Thirty for	5
Sixty-five for	10
One hundred for	15

Agents will be allowed ten cents on every Certificate ordered by them, provided their remittance amounts to One Dollar. Agents will collect 25 cents for every Certificate, and remit 15 cents to us, either in cash or postage stamps.

Attention is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada ; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

Policies effected on or before 31st January next will receive a full year's bonus over those effected thereafter.

Liquid Cooler & Heater !

PATENTED 1864.

Having obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size

I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.

All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

CHARITY.

When you live with one suspected.
Of some secret deed of shame,
And for this by all rejected
As a thing of evil fame;
Guard thine every look and action,
Speak no word of heartless blame,
For the slanderer's vile distraction
Yet may end thy goodly name.

When you meet with one pursuing
Ways the lost have entered in,
Working out his own undoing
With his recklessness and sin,
Think, if placed in his condition,
Would a kind word be in vain,
Or a look of cold suspicion
Win thee back to right again?

There are spots that bear no flowers—
Not because the soil is bad,
But the summer's genial showers
Never made their bosoms glad.
Better have an act that's kindly
Treated sometimes with disdain,
Than, in judging others blindly
Doom the innocent to pain.

Miscellaneous.

OF WILLS AND INTESTACY.

IMPORTANT TO EVERYBODY.

A will is the instrument by which the owner of property declares the mode in which he desires that property disposed of after death. When a man makes a will he is called a testator; and when a woman makes a will she is called a testatrix. When moveable property is given by will, it is said to be bequeathed, and the property given is called a legacy; on the other hand, when land is given, it is called devised, and the property given is called a devisee. The person taking a legacy is called a legatee; but he to whom land is given is called a devisee. Any person of sound mind may make a will; but the will of a married woman is subject to some restrictions, to be noticed presently. No person under the full age of twenty-one can make a will of lands, but a will of personality may be made by males at the age of fourteen or by females at the age of twelve, if of sufficient discretion. What may amount to sufficient discretion, cannot be defined here; it must remain for the decision of the proper tribunal, whenever a will is impeached on that ground. The right to dispose of landed property by will, was first given by Act of Parliament, called the Statute of Wills, passed in the reign of Henry VIII. —Personal or moveable property was always subject to such disposition, but not to its present extent. Anciently, by the general common law, a man who left a wife and children could not deprive them by his will of more than one equal part of his personal property; if, however, he left a wife and no children, or children and no wife, he was then enabled to dispose of one half, leaving the other half for the wife or for the children. At the present day, however, there is no such limitation. A man may, if sufficiently void of all natural affection, bequeath the whole of his property to strangers, and leave his wife and children penniless. All wills require to be in writing except the wills of soldiers, made when in actual military service, and of seamen, when at sea. A will of land must not only be in writing, but must be signed by the testator or testatrix, in the presence of two witnesses; and these two witnesses must subscribe their names in the presence of each other. A will of moveable or personal property does not require the same formalities although in practice it is usual to observe them. It is neither necessary that the writing should be signed nor as a consequence that it should be witnessed. A writing, however, it must be, though it does not require signing or attesting. If a man should give instructions to a lawyer to prepare his will, and the instructions are in writing, or a draft will prepared for them, it is sufficient. Such a writing operates as a will of moveables, although it may be informally drawn up, and neither signed nor attested. Notwithstanding, however, that such is the case, it is highly desirable that all wills should be signed and attested, if for no other reason, yet for this,—that a will so signed and attested, is more susceptible of easy and satisfactory proof. In every will of personality there should be an appointment of some person or persons as executor or executrix. Any person may be appointed; but if an infant, that is, a person under twenty-one, be appointed, he will not be allowed to exercise his office during his minority; but during this time the administration of the goods of the deceased will be granted to such other person as the surrogate court may think fit. If a married woman should be appointed executrix, she cannot accept the office without the consent of her husband; and having accepted it with his consent, she is unable, without his concurrence, to perform an act of administration which may be to his prejudice; for the general rule of law is that a husband and wife are but as one person,—the power, and, with it the responsibility, being vested in the husband.

There is this difference between a will of land and a will of personal property. Under the former, the devisee, or person to whom the land is given, takes the land direct, without the intervention of any executor; while on the other hand, a legatee of personal property can only get the same through the executor. The moment a testator dies the executor becomes entitled to the possession of the personal property, and is bound to see that all the testator's debts are paid, before he pays a single legacy, or parts with any of the property to the legatee to whom it may be given

Before an executor can act, he must get himself clothed with the necessary authority. This he does by proving the will. Wills must be proved in the surrogate court of the county where the testator had, at the time of his death his fixed place of abode; and if he had no fixed place of abode in or resided out of Upper Canada at the time of his death, then, in the court of any county in which he had personal or landed property. The first thing, then, for an executor to do is, to take the will to the clerk of the surrogate court, who is generally the same individual as the clerk of the county court; there the necessary affidavits and documents will be filled up, and the will proved in due form. A surrogate clerk will be fixed in every county town.

When the will is thus proved, it is the duty of the executor to pay the testator's debts out of the personal estate, to which such executor becomes entitled by virtue of his office. For this purpose the executor has re-posed in him by the law the fullest power of disposition over the personal estate of the deceased, whatever may be the manner in which it was bequeathed by the will. When the debts have been paid, the legacies left by the testator are then to be discharged. In order to give the executor sufficient time to inform himself of the state of the assets and to pay the debts of the deceased, he is allowed a twelve-month from the date of the death of the testator, before he is bound to pay any legacies. Notwithstanding the lapse of a year from the testator's death, the executor is still liable to any creditor of the deceased to the amount of the property which may have come into the executor's hands; and if he should have paid any legacies in ignorance of the claims of the creditor, his only remedy is to apply to the legatees to refund their legacies, which they will be bound to do, in order to satisfy the debt.—From this liability to creditors, an executor cannot be discharged, unless he throw the property into chancery, in which case the court undertakes administration, and the executor is consequently exonerated from all risk. The executor, however, is, of course, not answerable to the testator's creditors beyond the amount of property which has come to his hands, unless he should, for a sufficient consideration, have given a written promise to pay, personally, or should do any act amounting to the admission that he has property of the testator sufficient for the payment of the debts.

After paying the testators debts and legacies, the residue of his personal property must be paid over to the residuary legatee, then to the attest or next of kin.

When a person dies without making a will, he is said to die intestate, and his property is then distributed according to the provisions of the Acts of Parliament passed to regulate such matters. The lands of the person dying intestate descend first to all his children, sons and daughters equally, and if any children be dead, leaving children, these grandchildren will stand in their parent's place, and be entitled to the share that would have fallen to their parent had such parent been alive. Failing children, the land's will go to the intestates father; and if the father be dead, then the mother; and if the mother be dead, then to the brothers and sisters and collateral relatives. It, however, the land come to the intestate in right of his mother, then, upon his death without children, such land will revert to his mother if living, and if dead, to the father for life, and then to the brothers and sisters.

We have not pretended to give the whole law of descent of real property; we have only given the outline of the way in which land of a person dying intestate will go in an ordinary and simple case. It would be useless to do more, and would swell the limits of this work far beyond our design. The law of descent of real property is much too intricate to warrant any attempt to popularize it.

The application of an intestates personal property, after paying off all his debts, is now regulated by the Statutes of the reign of Charles II. and James II., commonly called the Statutes of Distribution, by which Statutes the rights of the relations of the deceased to have been first definitely ascertained and rendered legally available. Under those statutes, if the intestate have a widow and any child or children, the widow shall take a third part of the surplus of his effects. If he leaves no children or descendant of a child, she takes one-half. If the intestate leave children, two-thirds of his effects, if he leave a widow, or the whole if he leaves no widow, shall be divided among his children, or, if but one, to that child. If the intestate leave no children or representatives of them, his father, if living, takes the whole, or if the intestate should have left a widow, then one-half. If the father, be dead, the mother, brothers, and sisters of the intestate, shall take, in equal shares, subject as before, to the widow's right of a moiety only, as before; but a step mother can take nothing. The children of brothers or sisters who are dead, stand in the place of their parents.

If a married woman is possessed of property, real or personal, in her own separate right, she may dispose of the same by her will, to or among her children, and failing children, then to her husband. Such will must be in writing and signed by the testatrix in the presence of two witnesses, neither of whom, however, must be the husband. The separate personal property of a married woman, dying intestate, is to be distributed in the same proportion between her husband and children, as the personal property of a husband, dying intestate, is to be distributed between his wife and children.

When a person dies intestate, any of the next of kin may obtain letters of administration from the surrogate court, which will clothe the parties obtaining such letters with the same authority that an executor has. An administrator's duties and liabilities are precisely the same as those of an executor, so that it is unnecessary to refer to them again.

A codicil is a supplement or addition made to a will, by the testator, to be taken as part of the same,—being intended for its explanation or alteration, or to make some addition to, or subtract from, the former disposition of the testator. It should be executed in the same manner and with the same formality of the original will.

No precise form of words is essential to the validity of a will; but great care should be exercised that the wishes of the testator are clearly expressed in proper terms.

With are revoked by the marriage of the testator or testatrix, and by subsequent wills and codicils, so far as such wills and codicils are inconsistent or incompatible with the original will.—Canadian Domestic Lawyer.

SUNDAY READINGS.

To cultivate a hopeful temper of mind is surely one of the duties growing out of our earthly condition and the deeds of our nature. Even the most keen is not completely hidden from our knowledge that if we think upon it at all we must gather brightness from our hopes or sadness from our fears. When we reflect that so much of the unhappiness of life is made up of fears that are never realized, or of anticipations of evils that are only partially fulfilled, we see the folly, the sin of thus clouding the brightness of the present. From the young actived heart hope springs as naturally as the love which encircles friends and home; but as the years glide on and disappointments come, some portion of youth's buoyancy is lost, some colors fade from the bow that spans the future, doubts mingle with anticipations, and something is lost of which thought scarce takes cognizance.

The decay of hope should be sedulously resisted in the heart, and cheerful looking forward encouraged under adverse circumstances. Through the chequered past an unseen hand has lightened our burdens. A voiceless comforter has soothed our sharpest sorrows. We have been led almost without our acquiescence, in paths that have brought us to loftier heights of virtue, and given us a wider range of vision, and we find ourselves—God grant it be so—humbler, wiser, stronger than ever before; still from want of hope we shrink from the unknown, the future, and permit fear to outweigh trust.

It was well, perhaps, did men live more in the present and less in memory and hope. The past is beyond our control, the future may never exist for us, but the present offers itself to our widest use and consideration, and he who fills the passing hour well has little time for sorrowful forebodings. The sensible use of the present is our first and most solemn duty, and he whose mind has been oppressed by fearful forebodings will find the safest medicine in present exertion.

God gave us the faculty of hope, but not the promise that all hopes shall be realized, and so as our journey of life lengthens, disappointments come, and the brightness of life's sunshine is dimmed, and a closet settles over the morrow that once loomed to us out of the future radiant with all glory; and then we leave distrust, and general melancholy to dim the eye and sadden the voice, and forget that, in all this, God is teaching us lessons for immortality.

We cannot shut out all thoughts of our future even in this world, and we must hope or fear, or experience a mingling of both sensations, but we should cultivate the bright and better portion, and show our love to God and trust in Him by calm content and cheerful submission to the destiny He has appointed.

I will hope continually, says the Psalmist. No grief, or pain, or disappointment shall extinguish the bright spark that lightens the future. Amid the darkness it will prove a guiding ray, amid ruin and desolation it shall whisper of all things strong and imperishable, and it shall still be God's token when of all else I am bereft.

I will praise Him more and more, says the same royal singer; for with all his lofty imaginings, his sublime reachings of thought, he felt his inability to compass Him who was, and is, and shall be from everlasting to everlasting.

Ay, praise Him more and more! For every added day of life, for health, home, friends, for the revolving seasons, each beautiful in its time, for the broad, glorious earth crowded with all loveliness, for the warm sunshine and the tempered winds, for all the blessings that crowd our days, praise Him from the depths of the spirit that can find no solace but in Him.

And while we thank him for all that our eyes behold and our ears drink in of melody, let not His chief gift be unremembered, for without that crowning blessing, the sacrifice of His Son, our feet stumbling along life's perilous way, would go so far astray that even the light of God's countenance would be lost to our benighted vision. We must accept the Savior as our guide to Heaven. He spoke as one having authority. Let us submit ourselves to His commands, study His precepts, obey His wishes. Then neither hope of earth or Heaven will fail us, but its beams will grow brighter with each departing day, till the journey of life being ended, all hopes, prayers, wishes will find fruition in His presence at the right hand of God the Father of us all.—H. J. L. in New England Farmer.

The Hamilton Times gives us the following as the strength of the proposed confederation of the British American Provinces:—At the census taken in 1861, the population of the different Provinces was as follows: Upper Canada, 1,396,091; Lower Canada, 1,111,556; Nova Scotia, 330,857; New Brunswick, 252,048; Newfoundland, 122,635; Prince Edward Island, 80,857—total, 3,294,056. But as four years have nearly elapsed since then, we may calculate that the present population numbers about 3,800,000. The lands held by the Provinces that will compose the confederation are thus distributed:—Upper Canada 17,709,392; Lower Canada, 13,680,000; Nova Scotia 5,748,693; New Brunswick 5,636,329; Newfoundland 100 000; Prince Edward Island 1,260,400. Giving a total to the Confederation of the enormous amount of 45,698,154 acres of land, this quantity, be it understood, being in the hands of private owners. Of this, thirteen million acres are under cultivation, leaving over thirty million acres in private hands for disposal to incoming settlers. If we add to this the enormous quantity yet in the hands of the different Governments there will be a total that seems to render our territory almost illimitable.

Believing but not Understanding.

"I will not believe anything but what I understand," said a self-confident young man to a hotel one day.

"Nor will I," said another.

"Neither will I," chimed in a third.

"Gentlemen," said one well known to me, who was on a journey, and who sat close by—"do I understand you correctly, that you will not believe anything that you don't understand?"

"I will not," said every one of the three.

"Well," said the stranger, "in my ride this morning I saw some geese in a field eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Certainly," said the three unbelievers.

"I also saw the pigs eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Of course," said the three.

"And I also saw sheep and oxen and grass; do you believe that?"

"Of course." It was again replied.

Well, but the grass which they had formerly eaten had, by digestion, turned to feathers on the backs of the geese, to bristles on the backs of the swine, to wool on the sheep, and on the oxen it had turned to hair; do you believe that gentlemen?"

"Certainly," they replied.

"Yes, you believe it," he rejoined, "but do you understand it?"

They were confounded, and silent, and evidently unbelieving, as they well might be.

THE MASON'S GRAVE.

In all ages the bodies of the Masonic dead have been laid in graves facing due East and West, with their faces toward the East. This practice has been borrowed from us, and adopted by others, until it has become nearly universal. It implies that when the Great Day shall come, and He, who is death's conqueror shall give the signal of ineffable light shall first be seen in the East; that from the East he will make his glorious approach; will stand at the Eastern margin of those graves, and with his mighty power—that grasp irresistably strong which shall prevail—will raise the bodies which are slumbering therein. We shall have been long buried long decayed. Friends, relatives, yes, our nearest and dearest, will cease to remember where they have laid us. The broad earth will have undergone wonderful changes, mountains levelled, valleys filled. The seasons will have chased each other in many a fruitful round. Oceans, tossed into fury by the gales of today, will to-morrow have sunk like a spoiled child in their slumber. Broad trees, with brigader roots, will have interlocked them, hard and knobbed as they are, above our ashes, as if to conceal the very fact of our having lived; and then, after centuries of life, they too will have followed our example of mortality, and long struggling with decay, at last will have toppled down to join their remains with ours, thus obliterating the last poor testimony that man has ever lain here. So shall we be lost to human sight. But the eye of God nevertheless, will mark the spot green with the everlasting verdure of faith, and when the trumpet's blast shall shake the hills to their very basis, our astounded bodies will rise, impelled upward by an irresistable impulse, and we shall stand face to face with our Redeemer.

CHARITY.

When you live with one suspected
Of some secret deed of shame,
And for this by all rejected
As a thing of evil fame;
Guard thine every look and action,
Speak no word of heartless blame,
For the slanderer's vile detraction
May end thy goodly name.

When you meet with one pursuing
Ways the lost have entered in,
Working out his own undoing
With his recklessness and sin,
Think, if placed in his condition,
Would a kind word be in vain,
Or a look of cold suspicion
Win thee back to right again?

There are spots that bear no flowers—
Not because the soil is bad,
But the summer's genial showers
Never made their bosoms glad.
Better have an act that's kindly
Treated sometimes with disdain,
Than, in judging others blindly
Doom the innocent to pain.

Miscellaneous.

OF WILLS AND INTESTACY.

IMPORTANT TO EVERYBODY.

A will is the instrument by which the owner of property declares the mode in which he desires that property disposed of after death. When a man makes a will he is called a testator; and when a woman makes a will she is called a testatrix. When moveable property is given by will, it is said to be bequeathed, and the property given is called a legacy; on the other hand, when land is given, it is called devised, and the property given is called a devisee. The person taking a legacy is called a legatee; but he to whom land is given is called a devisee. Any person of sound mind may make a will; but the will of a married woman is subject to some restrictions, to be noticed presently. No person under the full age of twenty-one can make a will of lands, but a will of personality may be made by males at the age of fourteen, or by females at the age of twelve, if of sufficient discretion. What may amount to sufficient discretion, cannot be defined here; it must remain for the decision of the proper tribunal, whenever a will is impeached on that ground. The right to dispose of landed property by will, was first given by Act of Parliament, called the Statute of Wills, passed in the reign of Henry VIII.—Personal or moveable property was always subject to such disposition, but not to its present extent. Anciently, by the general common law, a man who left a wife and children could not deprive them by his will of more than one equal part of his personal property; if, however, he left a wife and no children, or children and no wife, he was then enabled to dispose of one half, leaving the other half for the wife or for the children. At the present day, however, there is no such limitation. A man may, if sufficiently void of all natural affection, bequeath the whole of his property to strangers, and leave his wife and children penniless. All wills require to be in writing except the wills of soldiers, made when in actual military service, and of seamen, when at sea. A will of land must not only be in writing, but must be signed by the testator or testatrix, in the presence of two witnesses; and these two witnesses must subscribe their names in the presence of each other. A will of moveable or personal property does not require the same formalities although in practice it is usual to observe them. It is neither necessary that the writing should be signed nor as a consequence that it should be witnessed. A writing, however, it must be, though it does not require signing or attesting. If a man should give instructions to a lawyer to prepare his will, and the instructions are in writing, or a draft will prepared for them, it is sufficient. Such a writing operates as a will of moveables, although it may be informally drawn up, and neither signed nor attested. Notwithstanding, however, that such is the case, it is highly desirable that all wills should be signed and attested, if for no other reason, yet for this,—that a will so signed and attested, is more susceptible of easy and satisfactory proof. In every will of personality there should be an appointment of some person or persons as executor or executrix. Any person may be appointed; but if an infant, that is, a person under twenty-one, be appointed, he will not be allowed to exercise his office during his minority; but during this time the administration of the goods of the deceased will be granted to such other person as the surrogate court may think fit. If a married woman should be appointed executrix, she cannot accept the office without the consent of her husband; and, having accepted it with his consent, she is unable, without his concurrence, to perform an act of administration which may be to his prejudice; for the general rule of law is that a husband and wife are but as one person,—the power, and, with it the responsibility, being vested in the husband.

There is this difference between a will of land and a will of personal property. Under the former, the devisee, or person to whom the land is given, takes the land direct, without the intervention of any executor; while on the other hand, a legatee of personal property can only get the same through the executor. The moment a testator dies the executor becomes entitled to the possession of the personal property, and is bound to see that all the testator's debts are paid, before he pays a single legacy, or parts with any of the property to the legatee to whom it may be given.

Before an executor can act, he must get himself clothed with the necessary authority. This he does by proving the will. Wills must be proved in the surrogate court of the county where the testator had, at the time of his death his fixed place of abode; and if he had no fixed place of abode in or resided out of Upper Canada at the time of his death, then, in the court of any county in which he had personal or landed property. The first thing, then, for an executor to do is, to take the will to the clerk of the surrogate court, who is generally the same individual as the clerk of the county court; there the necessary affidavits and documents will be filled up, and the will proved in due form. A surrogate clerk will be found in every county town.

When the will is thus proved, it is the duty of the executor to pay the testator's debts out of the personal estate, to which such executor has duly entitled by virtue of his office. For this purpose the executor has re-posed in him by the law the fullest power of disposition over the personal estate of the deceased, whatever may be the manner in which it was bequeathed by the will. When the debts have been paid, the legacies left by the testator are then to be discharged. In order to give the executor sufficient time to inform himself of the state of the assets and to pay the debts of the deceased, he is allowed a twelve-month from the date of the death of the testator, before he is bound to pay any legacies. Notwithstanding the lapse of a year from the testator's death, the executor is still liable to any creditor of the deceased to the amount of the property which may have come into the executor's hands; and if he should have paid any legacies in ignorance of the claims of the creditor, his only remedy is to apply to the legatees to refund their legacies, which they will be bound to do, in order to satisfy the debt.—From this liability to creditors, an executor cannot be discharged, unless he throw the property into chancery, in which case the court undertakes administration, and the executor is consequently exonerated from all risk. The executor, however, is, of course, not answerable to the testator's creditors beyond the amount of property which has come to his hands, unless he should, for a sufficient consideration, have given a written promise to pay, personally, or should do any act amounting to the admission that he has property of the testator sufficient for the payment of the debts.

After paying the testators debts and legacies, the residue of his personal property must be paid over to the residuary legatee, then to the attest or next of kin.

When a person dies without making a will, he is said to die intestate, and his property is then distributed according to the provisions of the Acts of Parliament passed to regulate such matters. The lands of the person dying intestate descend first to all his children, sons and daughters equally, and if any children be dead, leaving children, these grandchildren will stand in their parent's place, and be entitled to the share that would have fallen to their parent had such parent been alive. Failing children, the land's will go to the intestate's father; and if the father be dead, then the mother; and if the mother be dead, then to the brothers and sisters and collateral relatives. If, however, the land come to the intestate in right of his mother, then, upon his death without children, such land will revert to his mother if living, and if dead, to the father for life, and then to the brothers and sisters.

We have not pretended to give the whole law of descent of real property; we have only given the outline of the way in which land of a person dying intestate will go in an ordinary and simple case. It would be useless to do more, and would swell the limits of this work far beyond our design. The law of descent of real property is such too intricate to warrant any attempt to popularize it.

The application of an intestates personal property, after paying off all his debts, is now regulated by the Statutes of the reign of Charles II. and James II., commonly called the Statutes of Distribution, by which Statutes the rights of the relations of the deceased to have been first definitely ascertained and rendered legally available. Under those statutes, if the intestate have a widow and any child or children, the widow shall take a third part of the surplus of his effects. If he leaves no children or descendant of a child, she takes one-half. If the intestate leave children, two-thirds of his effects, if he leave a widow, or the whole if he leaves no widow, shall be divided among his children, or, if but one, to that child. If the intestate leave no children or representatives of them, his father, if living, takes the whole, or if the intestate should have left a widow, then one-half. If the father be dead, the mother, brothers, and sisters of the intestate, shall take, in equal shares, subject as before, to the widow's right of a moiety only, as before; but a step mother can take nothing. The children of brothers or sisters who are dead, stand in the place of their parents.

If a married woman is possessed of property, real or personal, in her own separate right, she may dispose of the same by her will, to or among her children and failing children, then to her husband. Such will must be in writing and signed by the testatrix in the presence of two witnesses, neither of whom, however, must be the husband. The separate personal property of a married woman, dying intestate, is to be distributed in the same proportion between her husband and children, as the personal property of a husband, dying intestate, is to be distributed between his wife and children.

When a person dies intestate, any of the next of kin may obtain letters of administration from the surrogate court, which will clothe the parties obtaining such letters with the same authority that an executor has. An administrator's duties and liabilities are precisely the same as those of an executor, so that it is unnecessary to refer to them again.

A codicil is a supplement or addition made to a will, by the testator, to be taken as part of the same,—being intended for its explanation or alteration, or to make some addition to, or substract from, the former disposition of the testator. It should be executed in the same manner and with the same formality of the original will.

No precise form of words is essential to the validity of a will; but great care should be exercised that the wishes of the testator are clearly expressed in proper terms.

Wills are revoked by the marriage of the testator or testatrix, and by subsequent wills and codicils, so far as such wills and codicils are inconsistent or incompatible with the original will.—Canadian Documents Lawyer.

SUNDAY READINGS.

To cultivate a hopeful temper of mind is surely one of the duties growing out of our earthly condition and the ducks of our future. Even the dimmest hour is not entirely hidden from our knowledge that if we look upon it as all we must gather brightness from our hopes, or sadness from our fears. When we reflect that so much of the unhappiness of life is made up of fears that are never realized, or of anticipations of evils that are only partially fulfilled, we see the folly, the sin of, thus clouding the brightness of the present. From the young actived heart hope springs as naturally as the love which encircles friends and home; but as the years glide on and disappointments come, some portion of youth's buoyancy is lost, some colors fade from the bow that spans the future, doubts mingle with anticipations, and something is lost of which thought scarce takes cognizance.

The decay of hope should be sedulously resisted in the heart, and cheerful looking forward encouraged under adverse circumstances. Through the chequered past an unseen hand has lightened our burdens, a voiceless comforter has soothed our sharpest sorrows. We have been led almost without our acquaintance, in paths that have brought us to loftier heights of virtue, and given us a wider range of vision, and we find ourselves—God grant it be so—humbler, wiser, stronger than ever before; still from want of hope we shrink from the unknown, the future, and permit fear to outweigh trust.

It was well, perhaps, did men live more in the present and less in memory and hope. The past is beyond our control, the future may never exist for us, but the present offers itself to our widest use and consideration, and he who fills the passing hour well has little time for sorrowful forebodings. The sensible one of the present is our first and most solemn duty, and he whose mind has been oppressed by fearful forebodings will find the safest medicine in present exertion.

God gave us the faculty of hope, but not the promise that all hopes shall be realized, and so as our journey of life lengthens, disappointments come, and the brightness of life's antebite is dimmed, and a cloud settles over the morrow that once loomed to us out of the future radiant with all glory; then should come [illegible] and permit melancholy to dim the eye and saddon the voice, and forget that, in all this, God is teaching us lessons for immortality.

We cannot shut out all thoughts of our future even in this world, and we must hope or fear, or experience a mingling of both sensations, but we should cultivate the bright and better portion, and show our love to God and trust in Him by calm contentment and cheerful submission to the destiny He has appointed.

I will hope continually, says the Psalmist. No grief, or pain, or disappointment shall extinguish the bright spark that lightens the future. Amid the darkness it will prove a guiding ray, amid ruin and desolation it shall whisper of all things strong and imperishable, and it shall still be God's token when of all else I am bereft:

I will praise thee more and more, says the same royal singer; for with all his lofty imaginings, his sublime reachings of thought, he felt his inability to compass Him who was, and is, and shall be from everlasting to everlasting.

Ay, praise Him more and more! For every added day of life, for health, home, friends, for the revolving seasons, each beautiful in its time, for the broad, glorious earth crowded with all loveliness, for the warm sunshine and the tempered winds, for all the blessings that crowd our days, praise Him from the depths of the spirit that can find no solace but in Him.

And while we thank him for all that our eyes behold and our ears drink in of melody, let not His chief gift be unremembered, for without that crowning blessing, the sacrifice of His Son, our feet stumbling along life's perilous way, would go on for astray that even the light of God's countenance would be lost to our benighted vision. We must accept the Savior as our guide to Heaven. He spoke as one having authority. Let us submit ourselves to His commands, study His precepts, obey His wishes. Then neither hope of earth or Heaven will fail us, but its beams will grow brighter with each departing day, till the journey of life being ended, all hopes, prayers, wishes will find fruition in His presence at the right hand of God the Father of us all.—H. J. L. in New England Farmer.

The Hamilton Times gives us the following as the strength of the proposed confederation of the British American Provinces:—At the census taken in 1861, the population of the different Provinces was as follows: Upper Canada, 1,396,091; Lower Canada, 1,111,556; Nova Scotia, 330,857; New Brunswick, 252,046; Newfoundland, 122,635; Prince Edward Island, 80,857—total, 3,294,036. But as four years have nearly elapsed since then, we may calculate that the present population numbers about 3,800,000. The lands held by the Provinces that will compose the confederation are thus distributed:—Upper Canada 17,706,832; Lower Canada, 13,890,000; Nova Scotia 5,746,893; New Brunswick 5,836,329; Newfoundland 100,000; Prince Edward Island 1,260,400. Giving a total to the Confederation of the enormous amount of 45,580,354 acres of land, this quantity, be it understood, being in the hands of private owners. Of this, thirteen million acres are under cultivation, leaving over thirty million acres in private hands for disposal to incoming settlers. If we add to this the enormous quantity yet in the hands of the different Governments there will be a total that seems to render our territory almost illimitable.

Believing but not Understanding.

"I will not believe anything but what I understand," said a self-confident young man in a hotel one day.

"Nor will I," said another.

"Nor will I," echoed in a third.

"Gentlemen," said one well known to me, who was on a journey, and who sat close by—"do I understand you correctly, that you will not believe anything that you don't understand?"

All three said they could not think such was the case.

"Well," said the stranger, "to my ride this morning I saw some geese in a field eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Certainly," said the three unbelievers.

"I also saw the pigs eating grass; do you believe that?"

"Of course," said the three.

"And I always sheep and cows and grasp do you believe that?"

"Of course," it was again replied.

Well, but the grass which they had recently eaten had, by digestion, turned to feathers on the backs of the geese, to bristles on the backs of the swine, to wool on the sheep, and on the cows it had turned to hair; do you believe that gentlemen?"

"Certainly," they replied.

"Yes, you believe it," he rejoined, "but do you understand it?"

They were confounded, and silent, and evidently ashamed, as they well might be.

THE MASON'S GRAVE.

In all ages the bodies of the Masonic dead have been laid in graves dug due East and West, with their faces toward the East. This practice has been borrowed from us, and adopted by others, until it has become nearly universal. It implies that when the Great Day shall come, and He, who is death's conqueror shall give the signal of ineffable light shall first be seen in the East; that from the East he will make his glorious approach; will stand at the Eastern margin of these graves, and with his mighty power—that grasp irresistably strong which shall prevail—will raise the bodies which are slumbering therein. We shall have been long buried long decayed. Friends, relatives, you, our nearest and dearest, will cease to remember where they have laid us. The broad earth will have undergone wonderful changes, mountains levelled, valleys filled. The seasons will have closed each other in many a fruitful round. Cycons, hasted into fury by the gales of today, will to-morrow have sunk like a spoiled child in their slumber. Blasted trees, with lifeless roots, will have interlocked them, hard and knobbed as they are, above our ashes, as if to commend the very dust of our buried loved; and there, grim centuries of life, they too will have followed our example of mortality, and long struggling with decay, at last will have toppled down to join their remains with ours, thus obliterating the last poor testimony that man has ever lain here. So shall we be lost to human sight. But the eye of God never closes, will mark the spot green with the everlasting verdure of faith, and when the trumpet's blast shall shake the hills to their very basis, our astounded bodies will rise, impelled upward by an irresistable impulse, and we shall stand face to face with our Redeemer.

"I am astonished, my dear Miss Rose at your sentiments. You make me start."

"Well, sir, I've been wanting to make you start for the last half hour."

"Yes," said little Mary, "for James is coming to-night."

Who James was did not appear, but Rose blushed.

A pretty Irish girl went to the post office a few evenings since, with a letter that had no directions on it, requesting the clerk to send it to her sweetheart.

What is his name? inquired the clerk in the office.

"Ah," replied Bridget, "that's just what I don't want you to know."

The custom of "joining hands in matrimony," is said to be taken from the practice of pugilists shaking hands before they begin to fight.

"What is the best attitude for self-defence?" asked a pupil of a well known pugilist.

"Keep a civil tongue in your head," was the reply.

THE DELEGATES.

Ever since the close of the conference at Quebec, the delegates from the Lower Provinces have been receiving and enjoying the hospitality of Canadians, and viewing Canadian scenery and cities. On the 31st ult. they left Montreal for Ottawa, where they were received by the leading citizens and conducted to the capitol by the Grand Trunk hotel. The Committee took charge of the whole of the delegates and provided for them at the hotels.

NOV. 1ST.

Early this morning the Delegates were conducted to a steamer provided for the purpose, and taken to see the scenery of the Ottawa and Chaudiere falls. Afterward they assembled at the Parliament Buildings, where a Dejeuner was prepared for them by the Contractors, and the buildings were decorated gaily for the occasion. This and the speeches and the views occupied till about half past five, and the whole day's proceedings were completed by a grand ball which is said to have been, as all their proceedings were, very successful.

AT KINGSTON

The party took dinner, and after the health of Mr. Brydges had been drunk and a short reply made by Him, the party left for Toronto, but on the way made a short call at Belleville.

They passed through Belleville on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., and not having time to remain, an address was presented to them at the station by the mayor, this worthy gentleman, however, is reported as having acted in a way that did not meet the approbation of his councillors, as he proceeded almost alone to the station and read the address in the presence of but three or four of them, appearing to ignore the others. Col. Grey, of Prince Edward Island, replied to the address, and after a "transfer" to the Mayor and Corporation of Belleville, and three cheers for the Delegates and Canadian Administration, they moved off.

CONCORD

was the next stopping place, and here the Cobourg people made a grand demonstration in honor of the Delegates. Firemen and torches and an immense crowd of people, accompanied by the Band, greeted them. The Hon. Mr. Cockburn entertained the Provincial guests and fêted them, by supplying the inner man, for the remainder of the journey.

THE DELEGATES AT TORONTO.

The city was decorated very tastefully for the occasion. Their first visit was to Upper Canada College, then to Osgoode Hall and the University, here they were long detained in receiving an address and replying and visiting the interior & grounds, which are said to equal any of the old Universities. They next visited the Normal School, where they were greeted with songs and pieces by the children; but no address. The Dejeuner at 2 o'clock was in every respect a success, and the report of the speeches occupies several columns of the Toronto dailies. Hon. Geo. Brown's alone occupies nearly four columns of the Globe. The inspection of the volunteers and the ball occupied the remainder of the day, and from the number who attended and the hour to which dancing was kept up, we may reasonably conclude that the Torontonians are lovers of fun.

On Friday the Delegates left the Queen City for Niagara Falls. On their way they called at Hamilton, where addresses by the Mayor on behalf of the City Council and confederacy. When the present coalition was formed, as far as the Ministry was concerned there should have been no opposition to their election or re-election. The coalition was a guarantee that old strifes would be forgotten, old watchwords buried, and a hearty union made; and all for the common weal. That political parties did not do so is a sign that they are not prepared to give up their old landmarks, or cease to battle under old parties names, and perhaps it is not to be deplored that they should. But let us rest satisfied for the present that the ministry who really are the choice of the parties, are elected, and trust that they will remove the evils that troubled our fair Province, and establish a system that shall meet with the approbation of all.

MAN KILLED.—On Saturday the 5th inst., a man named James Wright, was killed at the Port Hope Station of the Port Hope Lindsay and Peterboro Railroad, while coupling the cars. We understand that he has left a widowed mother, who depended upon him for support, to dwell his untimely death.

ROCHESTER and Buffalo, and the frontier towns are in an excited state for fear of the Southern raiders from Canada. Soldiers are on their way from eastern towns to be ready for emergencies.

PETERBOROUGH RIFLE MATCH.

As this match has already appeared in our going to press last week, we were unable to give the result. Below will be found the list of successful marksmen.

The Rifle Match came off on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 1st, 2nd and 3rd instant, at the new range recently prepared by Capt. Poole's Company. Considerable trouble and expense was incurred in clearing the range, and, also, in providing a target, which consisted of four pieces of cast iron 3 inches thick, and supported or propped by iron bars. The number of points made by any individual, depended on the place which he struck on the target: if the bull's eye is struck it counts 4, one hitting the centre (a space surrounding the bull's eye,) counts 3, and a ball hitting outside of this space counts 2. The place where the ball strikes is indicated by an individual by means of small flags: these flags differing in color—a bull's eye is indicated by a red and white flag, a centre by a blue flag, and an outer by a white one, a red flag is a signal to cease firing; as individual who is apprised by these flags where the ball strikes, marks accordingly.

Brigade-major Patterson superintended the match, and we learn was highly pleased with the conduct of all.

THE ST. ALBANS AFFAIR.

This little raid has caused more trouble than its magnitude led us to presume. Investigation is still going on, and the prosecution is not through while we write. The most important part of the proceedings is yet to come. The defence they may set up might change the aspect of affairs entirely. The principal things yet proved appear to be the identity of the parties arrested, although in this matter they have been somewhat wrong in one or two instances. There is great liability to run to excess in a state of excitement, and, therefore, some allowance can be made for any little rashness the Volunteers may be guilty of. Any undue leniency on our part towards those already in custody will serve as an incentive to others to undertake similar expeditions, hoping to escape through our sympathy and commiseration. And already there seems to be other great fears excited across the lines, or great activity on this side, as several of the frontier towns are preparing for a continuance of these raids. Our neighbors, however, are easily alarmed. A common business connection of purchasing a steamboat and moving her along the lake to the place of peaceful destination, frightens their wits out and immediately they telegraph for forces.

It is wise to prepare for difficulties, but it is unwise to magnify everything into difficulties. There is no great possibility of anything like any extensive raid being made from our shores; and there is as much to be dreaded from those who may be in their midst as there is from any refugees who may have come to Canada. We think those who have come to us are too great cowards to fight for either home, kindred, country or principles—else why did they not sink or swim with their country. It is evident from their skedaddling that there are many in both North and South who do not believe in the doctrine that "to die for one's country is glorious." We would infer, therefore, from the metal they appear to be made of, that they are more ready to say than do. They are mere apt to act like the celebrated worthy who once led his troops to Gaul and allowed them to look over at Britain, but dared not to venture over. These may look over the lines, but are not likely to go over—as we have said before. In our humble opinion our neighbors may quietly rest in peace, fearing no evil, at least from the north of the "Beautiful Water."

Another Contemplated Raid.

"As we go to press we learn by telegraph that a number of raiders have congregated upon an island in the St. Lawrence near French Creek, intending to pounce on Ogdensburgh the first opportunity."—Lanark Advance.

The above we clip from the North Lanark Advance, and if true, goes in some degree to confirm the reports that have been circulated concerning the intentions of the southern refugees to whom we have afforded an asylum. That they should thus abuse our hospitality may by their acts endanger our peace, or be the means of making this Province the scene of outrages, is very much to be deplored. It may not be amiss to ask ourselves, whence this boldness on their part? Is it because of the sympathy that has been exhibited towards them by a certain portion of our Press? If so, may we not consider ourselves somewhat accountable for the deeds as the aiders and abettors of their deeds? We trust those in authority will not allow them to draw us into trouble with a people with whom we desire to be at peace.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

The [illegible] very meagre this week.

General Grant still [illegible] which, strange circumstance being [illegible] The [illegible] there gradually follows a calm.

Hood and Sherman are the principal actors at present; but even with them nothing of importance has taken place. Gen. Hood is directing his course northward, and Sherman is pursuing. Atlanta is no more the centre of attraction. The Presedential campaign is the all-engrossing topic now, and has been for some time. The result of the election is determined by this time, but its effect on the war is yet a problem. McClellan is the sanguine of those who would form, or rather re-form the State by allowing the South to return with its peculiar institution. Lincoln goes for war until the South is subjugated, slavery abolished, and the old union established as long and as broad and as strong as before the war. We are inclined to think both their schemes are visionary, and think that too much blood has been spilt to admit of reconstruction.

A Step in the Right Direction.

From our exchanges we find that the temperance communities are making efforts to obtain the action of Municipalities in the Temperance Reform. From the Cornwall Freeholder we learn that very soon a vote of Ratepayers of Stormont and its Sister County will be taken, in order to obtain, if possible, a Prohibitory Liquor Law for those Counties. From the Post we learn that, Mariposa also is agitating, and has held a meeting at Oakwood, at which resolutions were carried unanimously in favor of a Prohibitory By law for that Municipality. The meeting was large and respectable, and the people are evidently of the opinion that total abstinence is better than indulgence. We wish they may be successful in obtaining a By-law to give Prohibition a trial. But it is evident that the movement to be successful, or to give a fair trial, should be more extensive. It should embrace the County, as while Mariposa may do her duty in clearing her own skirts of the evil, the fact of being surrounded with other townships and a town that deals in the curse will hinder the inhabitants of Mariposa fully enjoying the blessing of Prohibition. Still it is a step in the right way, it may be the beginning of something better, the little seed sown in Mariposa may bring forth fruit, eventually, all over Victoria county. But what, we may be permitted to ask, are the Temperance organizations of the County of Peterborough doing? Where are the meetings held to find out what the people of this county are ready to do to aid in this work? While we ask, we feel certain that they are not idle but are silently, and we trust surely doing their work; and we feel confident that the County of Peterborough, will be found doing its duty at the proper season. Yet we would recommend that meetings be held in every municipality by the leading members of the societies and the friends of temperance, that these meetings appoint individuals to watch the progress of Temperance principles, with power to call meetings in different localities as circumstances may direct, and thus diffuse light and life among the members and friends of the cause in the various neighborhoods. In this way the strength of the cause may be mustered and numbered, and the first fit opportunity seized for obtaining a Prohibitory Liquor Law for this County. At some future day we will endeavor to lay a synopsis before our readers of the law on these matters.

THE FENIAN SPIRIT IN TORONTO.

McGuire, in whose house the pikes and pike-poles were found, has been brought before the Police Magistrate and the whole affair will no doubt be thoroughly sifted. As the evidence and investigation proceed new facts are coming to light. The pikes were produced in court, and although simple-looking, contain a piece of iron set in one end, and a screw for screwing on the head. When the staves were used they had this end concealed with green ribbons, so as to hide their bloody intentions. One of the police constables who witnessed the midnight procession states that they were armed with double and single barrelled guns, and others with pikes daggers, swords and other weapons. From our Toronto exchanges we learn that several persons are suspected of being engaged in these processions and the authorities are determined to ferret out the matter. The following note sent to the Mayor of Toronto shows the length their folly and fanaticism have carried them, and is an existing proof of their fiendish spirit.

The minutes of Previous meeting were read and confirmed.

The clerk was authorized to write to the Pound Keeper for returns, and also to the individual who has charge of the weigh-scales.

On motion of Councillor Strickland, the Reeve and mover were appointed to take advice to find out whether the Corporation can be compelled to $2 statutes to private dwellings in places where ditches or water courses had been deepened or widened for the purpose of improving the streets.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Several communications and accounts received.

The petition of Joseph Green and thirteen others praying that the Council would order a survey for the purpose of having a monument placed on the 10th Concession, in order to prevent the disputes and difficulties which at present exist—and which appears from an attached certified copy of Messrs. Reid and Stennett, P. L. S., cannot be satisfactorily redressed till said survey is performed, as almost all traces of the governing bound y-line is obliterated or lost,—and that it is therefore necessary for defining the fork lines in the several concessions interested that the said boundary-line should be legally established in compliance with the Act relating to the surveying of lands in Upper Canada.

The third quarterly report of the Inspector of Taxes showed that the taxes on of Messrs. Green and Scott were properly kept.

Orders were granted for the following sums: Angus Davidson, $59 50, for building a bridge on the 13th Con., and $10 additional for extra work, not specified in the contract; Patrick Keefe, $4 50, charity; W. Churton, Esq., $8, insurance for Town Hall; W. Beavis, $3, cordwood for the use of Town Hall.

Moved by Mr. Lockie and seconded by Mr. Leary,—That a majority of the Resident Land Holders of the 16th Con., having petitioned to have a survey made for the purpose of placing a monument on said Con., this Council is of opinion that it should be general and extend to all the Concessions of the Municipality, and that means be taken by those interested to have an expression of the Resident Land Holders of the Township on the subject of having petitions circulated for that purpose.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Collins and seconded by Mr. Lockie,—That Mr. Chamberlin be requested to get one bridge at Law's sand pit repaired, and forward the account to this Council.—Carried.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Fire! Fire! Fire! When such an alarm is given, how promptly every person is at repairing thither, to the place where the devouring element is surely and speedily devastating all before it, such a bustle, every person is more anxious, than another to stay its further progress. But methinks I hear some one whisper, it is well insured, let it go, however we will do, what we possibly can, and how consoling it is, to be connected with such an Institution, as an Insurance Company, Not at all considering, To whom it may concern, and yet all are concerned, who are in any way connected with such.

Then why not investigate the cause, with the most unscrupulous exactness, to detect the fraud, because his honor is imputable, and who is he that could be found, so base, so ungrateful as to say, that his honor practised it, But all is over after a few scatter ed facts of the case are found out, the insurance money is handed over, and the Donor has the pleasure of seeing the name of their Institution handed over in the public Journals for the promptitude in meeting such a call. I say that it is an indisputable fact that such is practised, both in cities, towns, villages, and Rural Districts, at the risk and sacrifice of their fellow citizens, or neighbors, who have no such cloak as an Insurance office to cover them. No not so much often as will cover their nakedness. Then I ask is there not a remedy for this sort of Free will Agency of Incendiarism in consuming sheds and raising splendid edifices more in contact with the fashion of the day

Yes I say there is, let the Directors of an Insurance Company take the initiative, and investigate the matter indiscriminately and unscrupulously, as in a case which have occurred a few days ago amongst ourselves, where to the high honor and credit of the Directors of the Farmers Mutual Stock Insurance Company of Hamilton Canada West, selected from among themselves G. M. Ryckman, Esq., as their representative. A gentleman who is a credit to the Institution and well worthy the honor which they have conferred upon him, from the manner with which he conducted the case here, and brot it to a creditable result. The case was as follows, Three successive fires had occurred in the township of Harvey, the property of one individual, and were insured in said office. The third or last fire occurred about the latter end of August, and a doubt was entertained as to its origin. "The first and second fires the insurance moneys was promptly paid over." Therefore G. M. Ryckman, Esq. commenced a thorough investigation of the three fires; their local agent here accompanied him to every individual far and near who was able to give them any evidence concerning the said fires, and from his upright candid manner with every person, he received such evidence as enabled him to bring the case before a Coroner. Therefore, J. R. Benson, Esq., Coroner, called an Inquest, and witnesses were brought from distances of from five to nearly thirty miles, to state facts before a Jury of their countrymen. The trial lasted nearly two days. The Jury returned a verdict at about half past eleven o'clock, p. m., on the second day, and instead of having to receive any more money from the Insurance Company, he, the individual with whom the fire occurred will have to pay back forthwith to said office three hundred and fifty dollars. This is so much for a proper investigation of incendiarism. I think the company is highly honored in having as the Representative of their Directors such men as G. W. Ryckman Esq., who have appeared among us, at this time, his gentlemanly deportment, and tact in business matters, qualifies him well to fulfil his ardnous, but not less honorable Office. Having such men as him to conduct the investingation of a fire or fires, the work of an incendiary will become cripple'.

IS IT TRUE

That there is no License Inspector in the Town of Peterborough?

That about every grocery in town sells grog by the glass over the counter?

That not more than one third of the open taverns in this town sell by license, and the others selling without license?

As these are questions, the answer to which concerns every man in town, we will, before further touching the subject, give those in whose knowledge the answers lie an opportunity of answering them, after which, we will, if necessary constitute the matter a little, for the good of the town in general and the Councillors in particular.

A SUFFERER.

A CANADIAN SHIP CHARTERED FOR AFRICA.—We learn that Mr. Charles Rae, of St. Thomas, has chartered his splendid clipper Mary Rae, to a Toronto firm to load lumber at Toronto for Natal, South Africa, and return, for $10,000 for the round trip. The vessel is expected to make the trip from Quebec to Natal in 60 days, and be back by May 1st. We wish them a prosperous voyage and a safe return.

FIFTH OF NOVEMBER.

ALMOST A SERIOUS DISTURBANCE.

LARGE BODIES OF MEN RETURNED FOR SERVICE.

(From the Globe.)

Saturday last being the anniversary of the discovery of the "Gunpowder plot," was, as usual, remembered by the Orangemen of this city. Fortunately the celebration of the event was of a quiet and orderly kind, and confined to the lodge-rooms of the Orange Society, otherwise we might this morning have had the painful duty of recording a serious disturbance of the public peace, and perhaps fatal consequences. During the day considerable excitement was caused in various quarters through the city by the circulation of a report that the Orangemen were going to turn out in large numbers and burn effigies of Guy Fawkes, Daniel O'Connell, and the Duke of Newcastle, and that it was the intention of the Roman Catholics to give an armed resistance to the proceedings of the orangemen if any such proceedings were followed out. It was further stated that the Mirror and Freeman offices contained large numbers of revolvers, guns, rifles and other weapons with which the Roman Catholics could arm themselves on a moments notice. His Worship the Mayor being informed of these rumours, instituted enquiries but was unable to have them substantially confirmed, and therefore could not take any action in the matter. He, however, made up his mind that, in case of disturbance of a serious nature, he would at once call on the military authorities to quell it, no matter who might be in fault. The leaders of the Orange party having heard the above rumours, placed no reliance whatever upon them, as they knew there was no truth in the story of their intending to burn the effigies. There was a talk amongst them at one time of burning Guy Fawkes, but the intention was, on re-consideration, abandoned. As for the burning of the effigies of Daniel O'Connell and the Duke of Newcastle, such an idea was never for a moment entertained.

In accordance with the previous arrangement, several of the Orange Lodges supposed in their lodge rooms, but nothing was done publicly that could offend the feelings of any member of the community. At the suppers the usual loyal, party and other toasts were drunk, and the evening was spent pleasantly and properly, each lodge breaking up at eleven o'clock, and its members going to their homes in a peaceable manner. The only out-door affair that occurred was the marching of some few parties through several streets with a drum and fife band, but the procession, if such it could be called, was composed principally of boys, to the number of eighty or a hundred, and had no connection whatever with the orange body. Wellesley was burned, nor any attempt made to burn one. The party composing the procession broke up and retired to their homes at an early hour. The police force were all out, but saw no occasion to make arrests.

Notwithstanding this peaceful state of affairs, it subsequently appeared that the more hot-headed of the Roman Catholic party had organized themselves into a body for the purpose of creating a breach of the peace, had the Orangemen made any demonstration. Shortly after nightfall, members of a Society known as the "Hibernian" began to collect here and there through the city in gangs of two, three, or a dozen, and from their actions it was quite evident that a plan had been laid down which was to be followed up by all. Around the different Roman Catholic chapels they gathered, as also around the houses of certain leading members of the Hibernian Society. They seemed excited and ready for a disturbance, as many of them carried weapons, and the actions of the others indicated that they knew where to find arms if they were required.

Until a late hour not much was to be seen of these men, except that they remained here and there in small groups through the city. At about eleven o'clock, however, they seemed to have assembled according to a preconcerted plan in three different localities, and after being marshalled into companies with military precision, they marched several streets. One party, composed of a couple of hundred was seen coming down the college avenue, armed with weapons of various kinds; another party, numbering about sixty, was seen about half-past twelve o'clock passing down Queen street. They were marching four deep like a company of soldiers, and in turning corners, changing the position of their arms &c., receiving the word of command from some leading man in the party. They were armed with gun-pistols, swords, and weapons of other descriptions. There can be no doubt about the truth of this, as two or three policemen as well as several other parties saw them, tho' none of them could be recognized on account of the disguises they wore. A third party was seen in the east-end of the city, armed as the others and apparently ready for a row. In each case the men moved on with the precision and regularity of a body of soldiers, and it was quite evident to all who saw them that they were drilled, and skilled in company manœuvres. Some time near two o'clock, a few shots were fired in the west end of the city, and a few minutes later the same number of shots were heard in the east-end, apparently in answer to the others. After that all was quiet, and no more was seen or heard of these midnight wanderers. It is quite evident that these men were completely organized and prepared for any emergency, and had the Orangemen turned out there would undoubtedly have been a scene of bloodshed such as Toronto has rarely witnessed.

THE MIDNIGHT PROCESSIONISTS.—DISCOVERY OF A NUMBER OF PIKES.

November 7th.

The city was not a little excited yesterday when it became generally known for a certainty that large bodies of men had paraded the streets during Saturday night and Sunday morning, armed with deadly weapons. It was at a time when nearly all our citizens are expected to be in bed, and people could with difficulty believe that bodies of armed men had marched through the streets in the way stated, but they had been seen by so many—by one person here and another there—that there could be no doubt entertained as to the fact.

The police authorities at once went to work in the matter, and after some few inquiries were led to suspect certain parties as leaders in the affair. Against one of those, a person named McGuire, a warrant was issued, and the police proceeded to execute it without delay. McGuire lives on Queen street west, and keeps a tavern, at which, we are informed, a lodge of Hibernians meets. Sergeant Major McDowell yesterday afternoon, with a posse of police, proceeded to McGuire's, and having in his possession a search warrant demanded permission to carry out the instructions contained therein without molestation. McGuire at first seemed inclined to offer resistance, but finding that useless he at last submitted, and the police proceeded to search the place. They found nothing of a suspicious character till after they had proceeded up stairs, when as they were entering a room they met a woman coming out with a box in her arms. She acted as if she wanted to avoid them, and as she was trying to get away McDowell caught her and demanded the box, which, after some bantering, she gave up. It was opened on the spot, and found to contain some twenty or thirty heavy pikes. They are well made, deadly looking instruments, about eight inches long and shaped like a spear head of the olden time. At the butt end there is a screw which fastens the head to the handle, and the instrument is then ready for its deadly work. A further search through the place brought to light a number of handles for these heads. They are large heavy sticks, composed of the best of wood, and measure about eight feet in length. In the house were found a lot of the fittings up of a Hibernian Lodge room. The pikes—heads and handles—were taken possession of by the police. McGuire was then arrested and taken to No. 3 station, where he was carefully locked up for the night, and will be tried at the Police Court this morning. The police are on the track of some other person against whom it is said there is very strong evidence.

In connection with this affair, another serious circumstance has been brought to light. Some few days ago a German residing in this city proceeded to Buffalo, and after having purchased a large number of pistols was about leaving home when [illegible] in order to clear himself he said that the revolvers had been purchased for a certain party, and that to prove his story telegraphed to Sergeant-Major Cummins of the Toronto police force. What answer Cummins returned we cannot say, but whatever it was, it had the effect of liberating the person arrested in Buffalo, and he returned to Toronto with his revolvers. The authorities here having been informed of what Sergeant-Major Cummins had done, last evening suspended him till such time as the affair is investigated.

It will be seen by our report of the Council proceedings of last night, that this affair for a short time engaged the attention of the Council.

Fifth of November at Hamilton.

On Saturday night last a peculiarly pleasing demonstration, in connection with the celebration of Gunpowder Plot Anniversary, took place at the North American Hotel, corner of John and King William streets—the occasion being marked by a dinner, at which nearly eighty gentlemen were present. The room was decorated in an appropriate and neat style—a beautiful banner, with a portrait of Her Gracious Majesty, and "God save the Queen" in gold letters over it, being suspended on the wall immediately behind the chairman. Other decorative designs were observable, adding much to the success of the proceedings.

After several songs, toasts and speeches, "The health of the County Master, Mr. Armstrong, and prosperity to Orangemen in this County, and success to Orangemen in this Province," was the last toast proposed and honored, after which the company united in singing God save the Queen, which was performed with a will and success bespeaking heartfelt loyalty.

At half past eleven o'clock the wholesouled assemblage separated, mutually gratified with the pleasures of the occasion.—Times.

THE UNITED STATES PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

The Presidential election in the United States yesterday seems—notwithstanding all the bitter language that has been indulged in during the campaign—to have passed off quietly. The despatches which we publish this morning fully indicate that the result has been the re-election of Mr. Lincoln by a large majority, not only in the electoral college, but in the popular vote as well. It is impossible from the figures at hand to say exactly how many States Mr. Lincoln has carried, but there is enough to make the result certain. It seems also to be pretty clear that the Republican victory of yesterday is sufficiently decided to give that party a two-thirds majority in the lower house of Congress, and something to spare. If this be the case, the constitutional amendment abolishing slavery in all the States may be carried through in the new Congress.

The returns from New England are rather meagre, but they indicate large majorities for Mr. Lincoln in Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island and Vermont. The vote in New Hampshire seems exceedingly close, while in Connecticut the margin for Mr. Lincoln is not large. These two States have always been pretty evenly balanced—the Republicans only getting them by small majorities.

From New York we have an abundance of figures. They are by no means so favourable to Mr. Lincoln as were the returns of four years ago, but they, nevertheless, seem quite sufficient to give him the electoral vote of the State, and to defeat Governor Seymour.

The returns from Pennsylvania seem more favourable to the Republicans than were the figures of the election last month. The despatch says it is conceded that Mr. Lincoln has carried the State. It is also claimed that he has carried Delaware.

The four New England States which Mr. Lincoln has carried by large majorities, have twenty-eight electoral votes. New York has 33; Pennsylvania, 26; Ohio, 21; Indiana, 13—making together 121. These are enough to elect Mr. Lincoln without going further. Even as these States, there are at least six or eight more sure for him, so that if it be possible that we are mistaken about New York, he would still be safe enough.—Globe.

Murder of three Children by their Father.

On Sunday the inhabitants of the little village of Old Windsor were horrified by the discovery of a dreadful crime, involving the deaths of four persons, which had been committed in the house of a man named John Cook, a carber, at Old Windsor Green. A man went to Cook's house on Sunday afternoon for the purpose of being shaved; but, on knocking, could not obtain any answer. This attracted the attention of the neighbors, who then recollected that they had not seene anything of Cook or his family during the morning. The assistance of a police constable was obtained, and on the house being entered the evidence of a frightful and cold-blooded murder were revealed. In the front room the bodies of three little girls, aged respectively about four, six, and seven years—children of the man Cook, who had, it is believed, poisoned the little innocents with sulphuric acid or vitrol, diluted with tea, were discovered an dressed and laid out.—These from the appearance of the bodies had been dead several days, probably a week. In the front room up stairs Cook himself was found with his throat cut in two large gashes; he was still alive and undressed, while lying by his side with her throat cut was a little girl, his daughter, eight years of age, also alive. Proceeding to the up stairs back room the party found the eldest daughter, a girl twelve years of age, who had been poisoned with the sulphuric acid, but was still living, while in the down stairs backroom was discovered a pail containing blood over which Cook had evidently held his head while attempting to commit suicide. A messenger was immediately despatched to Windsor for the assistance of Dr. E. Pearl, High street who hurried over and did all that medical science could administer for the surviving sufferers. The girl whose throat had been cut is or was still alive. The oldest girl, who was poisoned, was likewise living.—Cook, who was about thirty-eight, expired about seven o'clock on Sunday evening. Although the three youngest children would appear to have been murdered nearly a week back, it seems that Cook did not attempt to take away the lives of the two eldest children till about Friday last, while the murderer himself was seen out in the village on Saturday, so that it would appear that Cook had hesitated till the last moment before he attempted to commit suicide. The razor with which the miserable man cut his own throat and that of his child, together with a vessel containing a mixture of vitrol tea and treacle, the remainder of the poison which had destroyed the three youngest children, have been found. No motive has as yet been ascertained for the commission of the murder. The house bore signs of poverty, though food—bread and butter—was found. A subscription had, it is understood, been raised in Cook's behalf, which, it is stated, was not exhausted.—Several county court orders and a "notice to quit" were however, discovered, and this, coupled probably with the death of the unfortunate man's wife, which occurred in July may have affected his mind.

THE VICE-CHANCELLORSHIP.—We believe it may safely be assumed that the vacant Vice-Chancellorship which has been offered to the Hon. Mr. Mowatt, will be accepted by that gentleman. Every way qualified for the position, his elevation to it will afford general satisfaction.—Times.

The ship "John Gladstone," lying at New York with a general cargo, took fire in the forward hold on the morning of the 2nd. The fire was not extinguished till a late hour and the vessel was finally pumped full of water and sunk alongside the dock. She is a British vessel and owned in London. Damage to ship and cargo probably about $100,000.

PRAISE FOR RAIN.

We heard a dozen men complain
When Wednesday it began to rain;
Just as before, when it was dry,
They muttered a drought with many a sigh,
And seemed most unthankful to forget
That water generally is wet!
If all men's prayers were heard together
The world would have the queerest weather

"My mill stands still!—O Lord, give rain!"
"My grain is down!—O Lord, refrain!"
"My corn is parched!"—"Ah, Susan's bonnet,
Don't let a drop of water on it!"
"O not to-day, our washing's out!"
"Roll up ye clouds, I go for trout!"
"The hen's come off, the brood is drowned!"
"Ah, let it pour! my boat's aground!"

So, 'said the murmurs of the world,
The clouds, like banners, are unfurled;
The rain descend, the hay is brown,
The sky smiles clear, God's name be blest;
Sweet springs and robins sing together,
And, rain or shine, 'tis pleasant weather;
The sower's hopeful seed is flung,
And harvest songs are always sung.

RHYME AND REASON.

Mary O'Toole, as force us a rule, broke her worthy man's head with a three legged stool; then the chimney and dolf, that stood on the shelf, she hang'd till she made it as crack'd as herself; and then she was caught, though like Hector she fought, and off to the magistrates so handy was brought. "Be this and be that, she half bilt me," said Pat. "You das rved it you baist," cried the dame "and that's flat! but it's always your plan." Then his worship began—"She was drunk, I suppose, when she hit you poor man." "Who was, sir," said Pat. "No the divil of that!" cried Mary, "so Paddy here done wid your chat!" Then said Pat, "I pray your worship will send her away—for she kills an she murthers me six times a day; an she drinks like a fish, and cup, saucer and dish, she breaks on me head—so her bondage I wish." Then said Mary O'Toole, "Now Paddy be cool, till I tell ye why I hate ye, an prove you a fool! See, sir, wadher the rose to the bushes he goes; an faix sepetimes he kisses them right be me nose." "Ha! you're jealous, I see," said his worship, said he. "No, the divil a jealous," said Mary, said she. "Faix no," cried Pat then; "for again and again, shin I kiss the girls, sure she kisses the men." "Tis bet fair, tit 'or tat," then said Mary, at that. "O the divil may tit you an tat you," cried Pat. "Will you send her below?" then asked Pat, "an I'll go." His worship said "No! for Master Pat Toole, I see you're a fool, and deserv'd to be com'd with the three legged stool; so go to your home, and take care not to roam, and Mary will soon give up using her comb." When his worship said that, Paddy looked mighty flat; while Mary ran off closely followed by Pat.

"Why, Sarah, remarked a schoolmaster to a young girl, who had failed to give a satisfactory answer to a question in arithmetic, "when I was your age I could answer any question in arithmetic that was asked me." "If you please, sir, I can give you a question I don't think you can answer." "What is it, Sarah?" "Why, sir suppose one apple caused the destruction of the whole human race, how many such apples would it take to make a barrel of cider?" Schoolmaster fainted.

Two lovers, like the two halves of a divided bank note, however widely seperated, always correspond with each other.

Why is the letter "e" the most charitable letter? Because it is found oftner than any other letter in "doing good."

An English court at Leeds has recently awarded one farthing to a man of fifty-five, who brought a suit for breach of promise against a lady of sixty-nine.

There is an Irishman employed on the Great Eastern Railway, who brags of having a watch that keeps correct time. He was heard to remark, a few mornings since, upon pulling out his watch.

"If the sun ain't over the hill in a minnit and a half, he will be late.

A greenhorn desires to know why crockery ware dealers are unlike all other shopkeepers: and adds, very innocently.—"Because it won't do for them to crack up their goods."

"Come, go to bed, Eddie," said an anxious aunt; "you see the sun has set, and the little chickens all go to roost at that time." "Yes aunty," said Edwin; "but the old hen goes with them."

Suggestive Present.—Some kind friend of the editor has given him a riding-whip. He intimates that nothing but a saddle, bridle, and horse, and the free use of a barn and fodder, is wanted to make him turn-out and his happiness complete.

Adam was fond of his jokes, and when he saw his sons and daughters marrying one another, he drily remarked to Eve, that if there had been no pairing, there would have been no pairing.

A lady who had boasted high at a dinner party of the good manners of her little darling, addressed him thus:

"Charlie, my dear, won't you have some beans?"

"No," was the ill-mannered reply of the petulent cherub.

"No!" exclaimed the astonished mother. "No what?"

"No beans," said the child.

A married lady, who was in the habit of spending most of her time in the society of her neighbors, happened one day to be suddenly taken ill, and sent her husband in great haste for a physician. The husband ran a short distance, but soon returned, anxiously exclaiming, "My dear, where shall I find you when I return?"

A lover wrote thus to his sweetheart: "Delectable darling you are so dulcet that honey would blush in your presence, and green brooks stand appalled."

"Wal, ther," said a Hoosier woman, after listening to the notes of a guitar in the hands of a lady, "I've heered of pianners afore, but that's the first one I have ever seed."

An Irishman who had been asked to furnish proof of his marriage, took off his hat and exhibited a scar on his head. "Here," said he "is me marriage certificate. That's Judy's mark."

A philosopher writes to a tailor, who had failed to get ready his wedding suit. "It was no serious disappointment; only I should have been married if I had received the goods." That man will never be seriously disappointed.

A gentleman bragging of having killed a panther whose tail was three feet long, Brown observed that the animal died reasonably on the tail wasn't long enough not to be continued.

In consequence of the great stagnation of trade in the manufacturing districts of England through the war having cut off the supply of cotton, a large quantity of Valuable Jewelry, originally intended for the English market, has been sent off for sale in this country, and must be sold at any sacrifice!

Under these circumstances, Arrandale & Co., acting as Agents for the principle European Manufacturers, have received upon a great gift distribution, subject to the following regulations:—

☞ Certificates, naming each article and its value, are placed in sealed envelopes, and well mixed. One of these envelopes will be sent by mail to any address, on receipt of 25 cents.

All articles sold at One Dollar each, without regard to value!

On receipt of the Certificate, you will see what you are going to have, and then is at your option to send the Dollar and take the article or not. Purchasers may thus obtain a Gold Watch, Diamond Ring, or any set of Jewelry in our list, for One Dollar, and in no case can they get less than One Dollars worth, as there are no blanks. The price of Certificates are as follows:—

One for	25 cents.
Five for	$1
Eleven for	3
Thirty for	8
Sixty-five for	16
One hundred for	15

Compound
Liquid Cooler & Heater!
PATENTED 1864.

HAVING obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewers of Canada, with a Cooler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer souring. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.
I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.
All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

Select Poetry.

AUTUMN.

The brown leaves in showers are falling,
All nature seems doomed to decay,
And a voice from the tomb is heard calling,
The bright joys of Summer away.

The woodlands all cheerless are growing,
With the nooks we once loved so well;
While the streamlet is silently flowing,
And sad as a funeral knell.

The Easterly winds have bereft us
Of our flow'rets so varied and gay,
And the swift winged swallows have left us
For the lands of the South, far away.

The robin re-visits us daily,
The song-thrush all mournfully sings,
And no more doth the butterfly gaily
Sail on its gossamer wings.

But though the young blossoms are dying,
And Winter comes round in his turn,
We should not be languidly sighing
For things that can never return.

Tho' the sun 'neath the hills may be sinking,
And night her dark mantle may fling
O'er the earth, let us only be thinking
Of joys that the morrow will bring.

And thus let us act as we wander
Through life's ever-varying scene,
For 'tis useless to mournfully ponder
O'er troublesome things that have been.

As to winter, let's welcome him hither,
While we trust that the future will bring
Flowers as fair as the host that now wither,
And birds that as sweetly will sing!

GETTING THROUGH THE CUSTOM HOUSE.

A HUMOROUS SKETCH FROM LIFE.

A truthful saying is it that "men dressed in a little authority," is inclined to play antics, oftentimes excessively annoying to men who may be his betters in character and fortune! Among the bipeds who bask in the sunshine of governmental favor (though there be honorable exceptions), there are many who are prone to put on airs at once. An instance of innocence and imposition occurred not long since in Gotham.

A novel specimen of the genus homo—raw Yankee, by the way—received an intimation by post, in Boston, that an old acquaintance had sent him a present from abroad, in the shape of a jar of sweetmeats. Fully appreciating the kindness of his friend and knowing nothing of the intrinsic value of the preserves, he proceeded at once to claim his property. Having visited the brig which brought the cargo from the Mediterranean, he ascertained that the five days allowed for the removal of the goods from the vessel had expired, and under the general order his preserves were gone, with the rest, into the public store. Repairing thither, he found the officer in charge, to whom he made known his business in his own way.

"Got my preserves 'ere—nahar?"

The official looked very wise, and continued to nip his pen, without offering a reply.

"I want a jug o' preserves, friend."

"You'd better go to the grocery store," said the officer, not inclined to assist the stranger at all.

"Grocery? Why they told me to go to the public store."

"Who?"

"Why—abo'd the vessel."

"What vessel."

"The Yorktown—'ere the letter."

The man looked at the document, at last, and learned that a jar of sweetmeats had arrived in the Yorktown a week before for Peter Spikes.

"You must go to the custom house. Get a permit, pay the duties, and then, come here, and I'll see if I can find 'em."

After divers explanations and instructions the green 'un repaired to the "big stone house" in State Street, and mounting the steps, he soon found his way into the collector's room. That worthy sat in his gelvet easy chair, surrounded by half a-dozen office-seekers, when the stranger bluntly entered with:

"I say, friend—I'm arter a jug b' preserves."

"What, sir?"

"A can o' sweetmeats—'ere's the letter."

The official dignitary vouchsafed a smile, evidently satisfied that the fellow was not an applicant for office, and referred him to his deputy in the next room. By this time half a day had been spent in the search, and the victim had got a little "nervous"—but he pushed on, and presented himself before the desk of the deputy collector, he inquired once more for that "jar o' preserves."

"Where is it, sir?"

"Wal, you're smart! At the grocery—I mean the public store."

"Name, sir?"

"Swit meats—"

"Your name, sir."

"O! beg pard'n—Peter Spikes."

"Foreign?"

"No sir-ee—I'm merikin."

"The preserves I mean."

"Wal, I don't know what sorts; they cum in the Yorktown."

"Yes, I see. Go to the foreign entry clerk—he will give you a permit."

Peter went on to the fifth room, as he was directed, and a permit for the preserves was at length filled out in due form.

"Fifty cents," said the clerk briefly.

"For wot?" asked Peter.

"For the duties and permit."

"Why, the white-headed feller yender said you'd guse me this wot's name."

"Half a dollar, sir. I'm busy—can't be bothered. D'ye think we work for nothing, man?"

"No, you don't—it's for four or five dollars a day, a plaguey site more'n you can airn' anyhow!"

As the clerk was about to throw the permit aside, Peter forked over the half, and inquired with some feeling "what next?"

"No. 8 must endorse it," said a bystander.

The document was taken to desk No. 8, and endorsed.

"Twenty-five cents," said Clerk No. 8.

"Wot for?"

"For the pass."

"Look 'ere—I'm a good-natured man, naturally—"

"So I see."

"—'n I ain't to be gouged, you understand, saber."

"Regular charge, sir."

"Reg'lar? I wont my sixth-cents, I tell you."

"Well, you must attend to your duties first."

"Look you, young master—you mustn't go ter give people non o' your noises, 'tis dev, you'll jes git broke, sure as preachin'. I know all about my duties, without no instructions from sich as you!"

But the difficulty was finally cleared up, and Peter paid the twenty-five cents.

"Whar anow, cap'n?"

"To the storage clerk, No. 12."

Peter and the endorsed permit found their way to desk No. 12, where another quarter for storage, a shilling for truckage, and another for labor—added fifty cents to the bill!

"Fifty cents," said No. 12.

"Fifty dev—I beg pard'n for swearin'—but I tell you I'm going to hev them preserves."

"Not till the charges are paid."

"Wal—take your putty. I've bin to the cap'n, and the public grosery, and the tax-gatherer's, and the clerk o' the wot's-names, and now 'ere-'n I've paid sent a clean dollar'n aff for the blasted sugar-plums a'ready. Will I get em anow?"

"The storekeeper will settle that," continued the last man, disposed to extend the annoyance—and away went Peter in a rage. Arriving at the public store, he ascertained that the goods had been tracked to another place, and a direction was tardily given him to inquire in Commercial Street for Mr. Maber.

Peter misunderstood the officer, who was no more anxious than the rest to right the sufferer, and believing it to be all right, he hurried up to the Mayor's office, City Hall, where he enquired for his honor, who chanced to be at his leisure.

"What is your complaints?" said the city functionary.

"Nuth'n particular jes now, thank you, but last winter I had the pooomatis most orful!"

A broad laugh followed this comical answer to the serious interrogatory of his honor, who supposed he came for legal address

"I want my preserves," said Peter, at length.

"Well, sir, who's got them?"

"W'y a feller down in the public grocery-store, I mean the public store—'s he won't let me her'em. I've paid a dollar-'n aff so far, an' he wants to swizzle me more I s'pose. He sent me to you, and now I want to know what I'll go next—for hev the preserves I will!"

"How came he in possession of your property?"

"W'y, rot his pictur, he went rite daown abo'd the vessel, an' tuk it nout jes as ef it had a bin his'n! I could a bought a jug aout of any store in Bosting for fifty cents."

"I see, sir—they are imported."

"Not very important—but I didn't like to be swizzled, you see. I'v been to five or six on 'em, an' one aex go 'ere, an' another aex go thar; 'n I've spent a hul day, lost day, besides the dollar-'n 'aff, as I said afore—and finally they told me to go to the mayor. Here's the wot's name," and Peter drew forth his endorsed permit."

"You are in error, sir. This is addressed to Mr. Maber, one of the custom house officers, at the lower public store. Go there, and he will inform you what to do next!"

"I shan't go no whar, by grashus, 'cept rite strait to the printin' office," continued Peter, out of patience. And in accordance with his sudden determination, the following advertisement appeared next morning in one of the Boston newspapers:—

TO HOOM IT MAY CONSARN.—Wareas, sum frien has sent the undersine a jug o' pickles, or suthin' o' that sort, thru the public grocery, orl the wa from nobody nose whare, an' wareas tha've cost 3 times maw than there worth, this is to inform the sender that the subskriber aint to be gouged no maw, and the donor ken tuk 'em back agin, by payin' the ballance of the dootie, an' he needn't send no maw, cos tha ken be had a dam site cheaper in Quiney markit, enny da. Yours truly PETER SPIKES.

Peter never called for his preserves, and is now content to luxuriate upon plain domestic apple-sauce. His little experience to the "importing line" has rendered him a wiser, if not a better man.

ECONOMY IN A FAMILY.

There is nothing which goes so far toward placing young people beyond the reach of poverty as economy in the management of household affairs. It matters not whether a man furnishes little or much for his family, if there is a continual leakage in his kitchen or parlor; it runs away, he knows not how and that demon. Waste cries "More!" like the horse leech's daughter, until he that provided has no more to give. It is the husband's duty to bring into the house; and it is the duty of the wife to see that none goes wrongfully out of it. A man gets a wife to look after his affairs, and to assist him in his journey through life; to educate and prepare their children for a proper station in life, and not to dissipate his property.

The husband's interest should be the wife's care, and her greatest ambition to carry her no further than his welfare or happiness, together with that of her children. This should be her sole aim, and the theater of her exploits in the broom of her family, where she may do as much towards making them a fortune as he can in the counting room or work-shop. It is not the money earned that makes a man wealthy; it is what he saves from his earnings. Self-gratification in dress, or indulgence in appetite or mere company thus his purse can well entertain, are equally pernicious.

Rebel Atrocities—Shooting of Six Confederate Prisoners.

From the St. Louis Republican,

In accordance with orders, six Confederate prisoners of war were yesterday executed by shooting, in retaliation for the murder of Major James Wilson and his six comrades, evidence of their summary execution having come to the knowledge of the Provost Marshal General in such shape as to leave no doubt of the fact of their having been shot by the rebels and left in the woods.

The names of the men so led to execution were Gates, Blackburn, Nichols, Minniken, Ladd, and Beach.

About 14 o'clock the procession started from Gratiot street prison, and under escort of a detachment of the 10th Kansas, arrived on the ground of execution about 2½ o'clock. There were, including soldiers and citizens (the former largely predominating,) about 3,000 persons on the ground, with the guards and escort. The firing party consisted of fifty-four men—forty-four of the 10th Kansas, and two of the 41st Missouri—thirty-six being detailed to fire, eighteen being in reserve. When the prisoners arrived on the ground, they were marched promptly to the place fixed for the execution, there being an upright pine posts set in the ground, with square board seats attached for each man to sit upon. They took their places upon their seats, each with appearances of resignation to the dreadful fate that stared at them so immediately. But little emotion was displayed by any of the six, except Nichols and Minniken — the latter commenced prayerful ejaculations in a subdued tone of voice some after being seated, which he kept up until the bandage was tied over his eyes; after that his only remark was, "Boys, when you shoot me, kill me dead." Nichols made no remarks, but kept weeping from the time of taking his seat until the bandage was placed over his eyes. Ladd and Beach exhibited some slight evidences of dejection, but not a word escaped them during the whole scene. Blackburn sat still and stolid upon his seat, and throughout was impertorbed as a statue. No muscle of his face quivered—there was no wildness in his eye—not a movement that denoted the slightest uneasiness in his manner.

Gates, who was only twenty-one years of age, and perfectly beardless, at first manifested a most singular indifference. He had the manner of a young man just the least embarrassed upon the introduction to a company of strangers. Yet, withal, there was no fear of the expression of his features, but rather a manifestation of self-confidence, as of one who had a great and dangerous duty to perform, but who felt himself equal to it. Towards the end, however, he began to manifest emotion, and, speaking to one of the attending physicians who was standing near by, asked, "Don't you think that there is any hope that it will be postponed?" and on being answered in the negative, he moaned occasionally, and at intervals made use of the following expressions: "Oh, Lord have mercy upon me." "Oh, to think of the news that is to go to father and mother." "Well, I ain't the first, and I don't reckon I'll be the last." "Lord have mercy upon me." "To be tied to a stake and shot; I tell you its awful."

After he had been tied to the stake and Chaplain McKim had prayed with him, he said, (addressing the guard) "Boys, I hope, if any of you are ever shot, you won't be shot as innocent as I am."

Chaplain McKim, having said prayers with each prisoner, and bid them good by, Col. Heinrichen read the order of execution, after which he informed the prisoners that if they desired to say anything they could have an opportunity. There was no response except from Minniken, who said, "I would like to say a few words." He then with a firm and distinct voice, and rapid utterance said: "Soldiers, and all who hear me, take warning! I have been a Confederate soldier for four years, and as such have served my country faithfully. And I am taken out now and shot for what men have done that I know nothing about, and for what I had nothing to do with. I never was a guerrilla, and I am very sorry that I have to be shot for the acts of men that I never had anything to do with, and for what I am not guilty of. If I had taken any of you soldiers prisoners, I should have treated you as such; I never would have had you shot. I never would hurt anybody. I hope God may take me to his bosom after I am dead. Oh, Lord be with me."

Each prisoner's eyes were bandaged. When the Sergeant approached Minniken to put the bandage on his eyes, the prisoner said: "Sergeant I don't blame you; I hope I'll meet you in another world; I hope I will meet you all in heaven. Oh, Lord have mercy on my poor soul!" Beach and Blackburn still remained silent, and almost motionless. Minniken said: "Lord have mercy on my poor sinful soul." Gates said: "John Nichols we are going to die. Farewell."

Minniken replied: "Farewell; we will meet in a better world." Gates responded: "Farewell to all the boys."

Nothing further was said, and the command to make ready was given. There was a momentary suspense, and then a further command. "One, two, fire!" and the entire volley was discharged almost as one gun. Instantly the blood spurted from the breast of each prisoner, and, quivering for a moment, their heads fell upon their shoulders, and then their bodies lurched to one side, and fell as near the ground as they could with their arms pinioned to the stakes. In this position the blood streamed forth from their wounds, which were nearly all in the breast, and in one or two places formed little pools upon the ground. The attending physicians examined the bodies as soon as the firing ceased, and found no signs of life in any except Blackburn. To five minutes from the time the volley was discharged they were all dead.

Gates, after he was shot, uttered the exclamation, "Oh," and Minniken cried out, "Kill me quick," but in an instant they were evidently insensible.

After this, the bodies were placed in garden plain coffins, and taken in charge by the government undertaker, Mr. Smithers. Then the crowd dispersed, and the guard returned to their quarters.

Northern Hatred of England.

The tone of Boston society is quiet, cultivated, intellectual, and politeness personified. Mr. Dickens described it to be more than twenty years ago; and yet I sincerely believe that the Yankee people hate us more bitterly and more unrelentingly than does any other section of the American people. New York is a reckless, volatile, kind of place, and its fits of hot and cold are more frequent and as violent as the changes in its climate. For the slow and persistent animosity, the polite and courteous rancour you must go to Boston. Dozens of persons who read those lines will doubtless hold up their hands in astonishment, or indignantly say we may. What! these exceedingly nice people who gave such charming parties, who talked so prettily, so learnedly, who were so very literary and scientific—they hate England! I believe they do hate her, with all their heart, with all their soul, and with all their strength. I have been the nice people, I have heard the charming conversation. I have listened to the pure elegant English, and I repeat that they hate us. I look at deeds and not at words. Who dragged the American colonies into revolution and repudiation of the mother country? Boston. Who parted with us for a pound of tea and a penny stamp? Who first signed the pledge not to use English manufactures, and pilloried traders for importing English goods? Who prepared a grand dinner for Captain Lawrence when he went out to fight the Shannon—a dinner which Captain Lawrence never ate, seeing that the Shannon goes billed him, and captured the Chesapeake? Boston. Who entertained the crazy egotist Wilkes, after he had laid hands on a neutral ship, the Trent, and "arested" and speechified him, unaware that ere many days the Rinaldo would come to Fort Warren to demand Slidell and Mason, and that the demand would be acceded to? Boston. Who had not the wordiest sympathy or God speed to give us during the Crimean war and Indian mutiny? Who threatens now that if Great Britain goes to war with any power, European or Transatlantic, that she will fit out swarms of privateers to sweep her commerce from the ocean? Boston. I think there is a cause for this polished and constant malignity, and that it is very easily discovered. Boston hates us principally because she is not English. She is almost, but not quite. There is the mysterious something—le je ne sais quoi que sais-quoi. She is well descended, but there is just the tiniest flaw in her escutcheon, the minutest blotch in her pedigree. She fancies—erroneously, I trust, that in the feelings with which she is regarded by the mother country there is just the slightest admixture of disdain as though the European critic could discern in all the learning, science, polite conversation, grammatical diction and good breeding of Massachusetts, an infinitesimal something that was a kin to vulgarity. There it is the shoe pinches. Take away the uneasy dread experienced by the well bred Americas that the Englishman does not think him quite as good as himself, and he will love you really like a brother. Our cousins urge in whatsoever we urge about them—is our best humored as in our surliest criticism—there is always unmistakeably present, either in an active or passive form, a sneering and contemptuous tone. They can't stand that. It makes them "mad". Nor is their wrath mitigated when we tell them that it is only so much "chaff;" that we are in the habit of chaffing ourselves and our institutions from Monday morning till Saturday night; and that a nation which cannot endure ridicule, be in good-nature or ill-natured, is not only overweeningly conceited but childish silly.—G. A. Sala on the Daily Telegraph.

EXPANDING THE LUNGS.

Step out into the purest air you can find; stand perfectly erect, with the head and shoulders back, and then fixing the lips as though you were going to whistle, draw the air, not through the nostrils, but through the lips, into the lungs. When the chest is about full, raise the arms, keeping them extended, with the palms of the hands down, as you soak in the air, so as to bring them over the head just as the lungs are quite full. Then drop the thumbs inward, and after gently forcing the arms backward, and the chest open, reverse the process by which you draw your breath, till the lungs are entirely empty. This process should be repeated three or four times during the day. It is almost impossible to describe to one who has never tried it the glorious sense of vigour which follows the exercise. It is the best experiment in the world. We know a gentleman, the measure of whose chest has been increased by this means some three inches during as many months.

A LEARNED ECHO.—Some strangers of distinction were lately induced to visit Rothiemurchus, from the report they heard of an "echo" remarkable for the clear and distinct nature of its reverberations. On reaching the spot whence the trial of its power is usually made, their guide put his hands to the sides of his mouth, and bawled out with the lungs of a Stentor's substantive in Gaelic, which was repeated with a precision that seemed beyond the expectations of the party. One of the gentlemen, by way of trying the strength of his voice, put his hands to the sides of his mouth in the same manner as the guide, and called out "How far are we from home?" These words, much to the astonishment of the conductor, were also repeated. Then poor Donald, with a simplicity that brought a smile over the party, said, "You may talk it strange, gentlemen, but this is the first time I have heard the echo speak English. She must be well instructed."

HORWOOD.

After this week, our Horwood subscribers will receive their papers at the Post Office. We have concluded to do this because of some irregularities that have been reported to us.

RESPONSIBLE INSTITUTIONS.

Once a year we are called upon to choose individuals who shall represent us and have the charge of our public interests, individuals to whom we commit the charge of our general and local concerns, and who have the entire control of the affairs of our country almost without an exception. To these individuals we commit, by law, the management of our social institutions, and in some instances our moral institutions also. The regulating of houses of entertainment, the management of our schools, the control of the Finances, its expenditure and safe keeping. The power committed to our Councillors and Boards of School Trustees are unlimited. They can pull down or they can build up; they can expend or retain the public moneys at pleasure during their term of office, if only they but retain the appearance of doing what they do for the public benefit, while often their aims are to benefit themselves rather than the public. And as it is very difficult to benefit one's self without in some degree benefitting our neighbor, it is easy keeping up the show of "for the public interest" in everything, unless when the sticker is put directly in the pocket. It may be urged that under our institutions there is such a thing as responsibility, which acts as a check on our worthy representatives, and restrains their cupidity and selfishness to such a degree as to keep them in the path of justice in actions and moderation in outlay. But experience teaches us that many retain the idea of responsibility yet never hold themselves responsible; the word is enough for them—they never consider the obligation. These unprincipled men seek office for its honors and profits, seldom caring for anything except these. We, however, by no means insinuate that all men are so, nor would we intimate that we have more of such men than would be likely to be scattered among a population of the same number as ours; but that we are without them we would be as unwilling to admit. The tares are more or less mixed with the wheat, nor are we to expect different during the present state of sublunary things; the best we can do is to make the best of our position. Where does responsibility begin, or where does it end? Does it begin only with the Councillor or Trustee when he is elected, and terminate when he renders up his position to those who bestowed it? The elector is as responsible as the elected. The elector is responsible to his family for the character of the man for whom he casts his vote; he is responsible to the community; he is more so to his country; he is still more so to Him who holds every individual accountable for every action. The elector who gives his vote to put an unprincipled, immoral, or irresponsible person into power, is in no small degree accountable for the consequences that may accrue. Nor should this be a mere theory, but a governing principle in all our actions, so as to restrain us when we would turn aside to the right hand or the left. The season is fast approaching when we will be again called upon to exercise our privilege of choosing officers for the ensuing year. Now where so much must necessarily be intrusted, great care should be taken to select proper persons, to whom we could commit with confidence the management of our affairs. Nor should this be done hastily, but after due consideration. The electors should have their man ready, their strength mustered, and all in readiness to place by large majorities the proper person in the right place. Careful scrutiny of the past should be made in order to see who is worthy or unworthy of renewed confidence, that thus the public institutions may be purified, and the designing and selfish left to follow their private occupations, where their mismanagement would be confined to a narrow compass, and affect but few. We would therefore urge the free and independent electors not to fold their arms in listless indifference to the last moment, but make preparations for returning men who shall be willing and able to discharge the important trusts with which they may be entrusted in faithfulness.

DR. TAYLOR'S LECTURE.

We are sorry to have to chronicle the fact that there was not a large enough attendance to induce the Rev. Lecturer to deliver his intended Lecture. This must certainly be discouraging, and does not speak well for Peterboro. The ability and justly earned popularity of the Dr. ought to have insured him a full house.

More Concerning the Fenians.

During the Toronto investigation, Mayor Medcalf related that he had received from a private but reliable source that the Fenian Brotherhood in Buffalo are contemplating a raid into Canada this winter.—Running from the draft we opine.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

Honest Abe is re-elected with honors; almost the whole North being of the opinion that he is the right man for four years longer.

The Democrats have been defeated with overwhelming majorities against them.

THE VICE CHANCELLORSHIP.

Mr. Mowat has accepted the Vice Chancellorship rendered vacant by the death of Vice Chancellor Mattson. Mr. Hagarland receives Mr. Mowat's seat in the Cabinet.

PARTY PROCESSIONS.

The late midnight processions in Toronto make known to us the startling fact that there are secret societies in the Province whose designs are more than benevolent—whose objects are more than merely to aid the needy.

The Fenian Brotherhood, the Hibernian Society, or the St. Patrick's Benevolent Society could be no cause of alarm to us if the only object of these societies was benevolence; but if under the cloak of benevolence they are found to be clubs whose great object is treasonable, and their secondary, if not their primary, motives are the destruction of those societies and individuals who hold religious opinions differing from them, the sooner such benevolent societies are broken up the better for the Province and, more especially, for the peace of the religious bodies of the Province.

That any society whose liberty, lives or property was not in danger or threatened, should arm themselves with deadly and destructive weapons, and carry these in procession, is an evident token of more than benevolent intentions. That on the mere rumor of intended mock actions, societies should muster in large bodies and show signs of deadly intentions, argues that these societies are dangerous, and require strict surveillance. It is a well known fact that each of the two great opposing factions of this Province claims a necessity for its existence because of the other's either real or supposed opposition to its civil and religious liberty. The Orange Society was first formed as a means of defence against the usurpation of Protestant liberties and privileges, and is not, nor was it ever, offensive in its object or tendencies. And it must be allowed that there were necessities and demanding necessities for such a union when it was formed; and if the causes of its formation had ceased, viz., persecution of Protestantism and interference with conscientious convictions, the evil being removed, the society would have ceased long ere this. And there is no surer or more easily attained method of getting rid of the society than the removal of the necessity for its organization.

The Toronto display is calculated to arouse the feelings and spirit of the opposite party, and will undoubtedly lead to counter arming, and what the end of the matter may be we are unable to predict. We, for this reason, urge that such arming of societies be lawfully suppressed by severely punishing those who may have obtained or concealed any weapon that cannot be useful for other purposes than evil, as, for instance, swords, pikes, revolvers, daggers, or any undue number of fire arms. And where these weapons are found in undue quantities it should be held as strong evidence of criminal intentions, and the parties having these arms or weapons should suffer the severest penalties of the law, as disturbers of public peace and order. Orange societies never arm themselves on their anniversaries unless when they have been threatened by Catholics, and of the individual cases of carrying arms, nothing except a gun and powder is ever permitted unless when there has been threatening; the majority of cases of carrying weapons is contrary to the wishes of the leaders of the society.

Not so, however, with the Fenians; they procure arms of the most deadly sort, with the consent of all, and no doubt out of the common treasury. Their leaders do not deny their own complicity, and bishops and priests justify their conduct. Would such be tolerated in any other society? Would any member of the St. George's Society, or St. Andrew's Society, or any of the other benevolent societies be permitted to make treasonable speeches as one Murphy, a Fenian has been permitted to do in Protestant Toronto without molestation, no one even intimidating him? We assert this would not be permitted. And thus we accord to Roman Catholics what we would not tolerate in any Protestant society, simply because we wish them to see we can be tolerant toward them; but our tolerance affords opportunities for their insolence, and renders them haughty and overbearing rather than grateful.

Was it known or supposed that any of the societies were the sworn enemies of the government, the bitter opponents of religious law and order, and were only awaiting opportunities to make common cause with our enemies for our destruction, would such be permitted to assemble at all? Yet in relation to the Fenians all this is believed to be, and they are borne with and allowed to form assemblies and arm themselves (almost without a complaining word) and all under the guise of benevolence. Bishop Lynch, however, intimates the true cause of the association—destruction to orange societies. The good Bishop says: "The Catholic Church does not pretend to abrogate the law which permits self-defence in individuals and communities when the law cannot or will not protect their rights. As long as the Orange Association is permitted by law to continue, &c., so long shall we be powerless to prevent counter organizations." Now what does this amount to but that until the Orange Association is annihilated we may expect that Roman Catholics will arm and work without a word of protest against it from the priesthood. Now why this hatred to Orangeism? Why this want of power in this case when there is all power in every other case? May we not answer: it is not that the church has not the power, but that she will not exert it. Whenever the teachers of "peace on earth and good will towards men," become the apologists of acts from which good citizens shrink, there is reason to fear for the peaceful disposition of those who are guided by them. And he who can be the advocate of the continuance of one evil because another supposed evil, let us say, as he believes, another evil, exists, becomes the apologists for two evils, and exhibits an absence of principle or logic for which we cannot account, unless it be that all things are lawful for the destruction of Protestantism. Now we, with the good bishop, declare everything that would annoy our fellow countrymen, or cause unhallowed feelings in their minds; but is it not far more to be deplored that one occupying the high position of the Bishop should directly or indirectly inculcate the continuance of those party feuds and displays which are opposed to the peace and truth of the higher law. It might easily be shown that the two societies have not and should not have equality of rights and privileges, but for the present we forbear, as we do not wish to harrow the feelings of any of our countrymen; rather let us hope and labor, that the advancement of the nineteenth century may expel the darkness of the midnight ages, and that, with renewed facilities for improving the intellect, we may learn to improve the dispositions of our nature, forget the deeds of darkness, and vengeance of the past, and try "as much as in us lieth to live at peace with all men."

The County Council will meet in special session on Wednesday, the 30th inst.

We regret to learn that the Hon. Sidney Smith is very ill with pulmonary inflammation.

The report of the St. Andrew's Society has been crowded out, but will appear in full next week.

THE FIRE.

On Friday night the Roman Catholic school-house in this town was consumed by fire. About ten o'clock the alarm was given, but before anything could be done the flames had made such rapid progress that no stop could be put to them, until the building, which was a wooden one, was in ashes. The firemen were on the ground in good time after the alarm, but their labors were of no avail. The fire is said to have originated near the door under a stairway, where some rubbish had been piled away. We were informed that there had been no fire in the stoves during the afternoon, hence the idea that it must have been the work of an incendiary. The building we learn was insured in the Royal for $600, and a small library that was kept in the building, and was also consumed, was insured for $300. The only loss, therefore, in the shutting of the school for a while, as we think the whole was fully covered by insurance.

But the frequency of fires and the apparent carelessness about the destruction of property that is insured should urge Insurance Companies to make searching investigations before they hand over the insurance; and upon whomsoever the blame may rest, we are of opinion that an investigation in the present case might throw some light on the cause of the late fire. That a fire should be placed either in the building or against it, within a few yards of several dwellings and at the end of the house which was on the street, indicates boldness on the part of the incendiary not very common; perhaps an inquest would trace the matter to its origin, and be the means of dragging the culprit to light, and it would have the effect of intimidating others from undertaking similar acts. We hope the matter will not be allowed to pass unnoticed.

SAW MILL BURNED.

The Saw Mill and Shingle Factory in Ashburnham, occupied by Messrs. Craigie & Stephenson's, and owned by the Rev. M. Burnham, was consumed on Wednesday morning by fire. The fire broke out about two o'clock in the morning, in a part of the building where no stoves or fire had been—in the portion of the building occupied by the shingle machine. For some time the Flour Mill beside it appeared in great danger, but the snow that had fallen the day before saved the roof from catching, and we are glad to be able to report little injury done to the flour mill. The saw mill owned by the Rev. Mr. Burnham was not insured, we learn. The shingle machine and other fixings belonged to the Messrs. Craigie & Stephenson's, and were also uninsured. The probable loss of all will be about $2600 to $3,000, besides several men being thrown out of employment for a time. The fire is believed to be the work of some one who either lounged into the mill and placed himself among some shavings and rubbish that were in one corner of it, or of an incendiary. We must not forget to mention that the alarm was no sooner made than the Peterboro' Fire Company appeared at the place with their Engine and Hose and laboured strenuously and effectively to extinguish the flames.

OPS MURDER CASE.

PRISONER SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

At the Assizes just closed in Lindsay, Robert Finnegan, accused of the murder of John Finnegan, on the 17th of June last, has been found guilty of Murder, and consequently has been sentenced to be hanged on the 10th day of January next.

This is another case of the effects of strong drink. The deceased had been drinking during the previous day and night, and the unfortunate man about to endure the penalty of his rash act, was engaged in the traffic, and it is to be feared, was not entirely sober himself at the time he committed the deed. We wish that this may be a warning to others to keep from that which turns man into a demon and unfits him for society among his fellows. Robert and John Finnegan, add two more to the black list brought to an untimely end by the demon alcohol.

FIRE IN OTONABEE.

We regret to learn that the barns of Mr. Geo. McKewen (River Road, Otonabee) were consumed on Monday night by fire. At the time the whole crops of the last season, besides a carriage and other implements, were in the barn and were consumed. The loss must be great as there is only a small amount of insurance on the whole. The cause is not fully known, but some shots of some one hunting were heard near the place late in the evening, and it is supposed that some of these hunters may have gone in to pass the night, and by some means or other may have set fire to the place.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

110 VESSELS WRECKED. 12,000 PEOPLE DROWNED.

New York, Nov. 13.

The steamship Peruvian, from Liverpool, Nov. 1st, via Queenstown 2nd, arrived here to-day. Her advices contain the following additional to the Nova Scotian's report:—

The steamer Sacramento arrived at Cowes on the 31st of October, to transship some invalids on board the Borussia for New York.

English Journals unanimously concur in the verdict against Muller. The execution was fixed for Nov. 14.

Terrific hurricane at Calcutta, October 5. Of two hundred ships in the Hooghly, nineteen were totally lost, and of the remainder only twenty are reported seaworthy. One hundred and fifty were driven from their moorings, stranded and damaged. No serious loss of European lives. It is believed the greater portion of the cargoes will be saved. Much excitement at Lloyds in view of heavy losses. The American ships Loo Choo and Singapore totally wrecked. Dirigo almost wrecked. Red Rose, Southampton, Richard Busteed, Hindostan, Western Star, Empire, Southern Cross, Eastern Bell, Continental, Southern Belle, and Harry Warren, were more or less damaged. The American ship Mandrain was lost off Batavia. No particulars.

The allies silenced the Japanese forts, and forced a passage through the straits of Simonoseaki, with trifling loss. The Japanese sued for peace.

LATEST par PERUVIAN.

The Cork papers of the 2nd contain the following telegram:—

Paris, Nov. 1.

The Paris papers publish a telegram from Calcutta, giving the following details of the destruction caused by the late hurricane at Calcutta:—

One hundred and ten ships were wrecked and 12,000 persons drowned. The total loss was estimated at 200,000,000 francs. A great portion of the city was inundated, and the villages bordering on the river were under water.

The steamship Java, from Quebec, crossed the point in the entrance of the river Mersey at ten o'clock on the morning of the 3rd inst. at high water. As the tide receded she was left high and dry, and parted in the middle. The weather was calm but hazy at the time of the disaster, and the pilot mistook the lights. Efforts are made to float the ship in two pieces and tow her to her dock, only six miles distant. She was uninsured.

FALL ASSIZES, 1864.

The Court of Assize for the County of Peterborough yesterday closed its session. There was comparatively little business before the Court, only twelve records being entered for trial, and four criminal cases.

On the first day the following cases were disposed of:—

Stevenson v. Deacon; Ponton & Falkner for Plaintiff; Eyre for Defendant. Verdict [illegible]

[illegible] for Plaintiff; [illegible]. Verdict for Plaintiff for $312.

The Ontario Bank v. Hemmingway et al.; Ostler for Plaintiff; Totten for Defendant. Verdict for Plaintiff $62,517 85.

ON TUESDAY, THE SECOND DAY.

Greives v. Hilliard; Burnham for Plaintiff; Dennistoun for Defendant. Verdict for Plaintiff $30. This was an action for trespass and the taking of certain trees off a lot in Harvey.

Kingan et al. v. Hall; Dumble for Plaintiff: Smith for Defendant.

This was an action brought against the Sheriff for permitting the escape of Henry Morrow who had been placed in his charge, being arrested at the suit of the Plaintiffs for debt. The escape charged arose from the Sheriff releasing Morrow upon a Bail Bond being given him, which Bail Bond was insufficient. A verdict was ordered for the Plaintiffs for the sum of $204 79, being the amount of the Plaintiffs' debt and costs, subject to the opinion of the Court on the law.

Gannon v. Smith; Smith for Plaintiff; Weller for Defendant. Verdict for Defendant. This was an action of trover brought by the Plaintiff, Michael Gannon, against Mr. Alex. Smith for seizing and selling under color of distress for rent, certain goods and chattels of Plaintiff. The point at issue was whether any rent was really due at the time of the seizure to the Defendant. The Jury found that rent was due and that therefore the seizure was proper and justifiable.

Wilson v. Provincial Insurance Company: C. Patterson for Plaintiff; and M. C. Cameron for Defendant. Verdict for Plff. $50.

This was an action brought by Mr. J. B. Wilson, of Hastings, against the Provincial Insurance Company, to recover indemnity for loss sustained by him on the 29th of April last, by fire which originated in his building occupied by Messrs. Whitehead and Company as a store, in Hastings. The defence was that the Company had repaired the Building and put it in as good a state of repair as it was immediately before the fire took place. It appeared from the evidence that the Company had employed Mr. Toole to repair the building—and the question submitted to the Jury was whether the building was really as good as before the fire occurred.

There were a great number of Witnesses called as to this—ten for Plaintiff; and twelve for Defendant; among whom a great difference of opinion existed as to the condition of the building. This Provincial Insurance Company must be a most unfortunate Institution, taking the statement of its Counsel, Mr. Cameron, as to the state of its affairs, now, and heretofore, as evidence. Mr. Cameron gave as reason why the Plaintiff should not recover, the fact that not one of these stockholders of this company had ever secured one cent of dividend upon the amount of their stock; that, it took all its earnings and capital paid in to pay the employees of the Company, and the losses it was constantly sustaining. Certainly it struck us that this was a new reason why an Insurance Company should not pay such losses as they may sustain. They voluntarily insure people and take such premiums therefor as they see fit, and it is rather too much too expect the sympathy of Jurors upon such ground as this—that they have been unfortunate—and so ought not to be expected to pay fully for such losses as may occur upon policies issued by them. Mr. Cameron also, in his address, sought to prejudice the Jury against Mr. Wilson of claim on the ground that the fire was mysterious, and that some persons sought to compel Insurance Companies to pay unjust claims—and were in the habit of over insuring—and being so over insured were careless—and that so many more fires occurred now than before there were so many Insurance Companies.—We refer to this, and think no honest Company would instruct Counsel to take such a line of argument, unless there was something in the evidence to support it, and, certainly, the evidence in this case does not warrant it, as to the value of the stock insured by Messrs. Whitehead & Co., and of the building, the evidence was clear that they were of much greater value than the amount for which they were insured. We refer to this case fully, because it is important that all persons should fully understand the nature and policy of such Insurance Companies as may seek to do business among us. The Provincial has certainly chosen an unfortunate course in the matter. The building, we are sure, was of brick, and the fire having burned through the floors and roof, and smoked and damaged the painting and plastering, it is easy to understand that it would be a difficult job to place the building in as good a condition as it was before the fire, besides it was proved that some of the walls cracked in consequence of the fire. It would, we think, have been the wisest and cheapest course for the Insurance Company to have paid in cash the reasonable amount of damage sustained, rather than endeavour to save fifty or a hundred dollars by patching up the building, as they have sought to do in this case.

CRIMINAL BUSINESS.

The Queen v. Francis Delan the Elder and Francis Delan the Younger; Larceny. Verdict guilty. The elder Delan was sentenced to three months in gaol, and the younger to two years in the Provincial Penitentiary.

The Queen v. Patrick Murphy; Arson. True Bill. Accused filed an affidavit in support of an application to put off his trial until next assizes, on the ground that witnesses necessary for his defence could not be procured. The Court ordered the trial to be put off.

The Queen v. Joseph Valois: Assault with intent. Verdict guilty. Sentenced to be imprisoned in the common gaol at hard labor for four months.

The following is the presentation of the Grand Jury:—

GRAND JURY ROOM, COURT HOUSE, Peterboro, Nov. 13th, 1864.

The Grand Jurors, on their oath present that they have carefully heard and examined the Witnesses, and disposed of all the cases brought before them.

They have inspected the Jail and found everything neat and orderly; the prisoners say they are well treated and have no complaints to make against the Jailor. Through the instrumentality of the Sheriff a select library has been furnished for the prisoners.

The Grand Jury have great pleasure in stating that the County Council appear to be making large and increased accomodation for the better classification of prisoners, and for additionally securing the Jail Yard.

The improvements in the Park in front of the Court House, made jointly by the Town and County of Peterboro', are deserving of especial commendation, and will, when completed make the Court House site and grounds second to none in the Province for beauty and artistic adornment.

The Grand Jury are happy to state that from the very small number of cases before them, crime seems to be materially decreasing in this County, and they sincerely hope that it will continue so to do.

Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Anniversary Meeting.

From the Montreal Witness.

The first of the three annual Wesleyan Missionary meetings was held last night in the Wesleyan Church, Great St. James street. The attendance was good, considerably exceeding that at the corresponding meeting of last year.

After devotional exercises by Rev. JAMES ELLIOTT,

The Hon. JAMES FERRIER was requested to take the chair. He said that another year of the history of the Montreal branch of the Wesleyan Missionary Society had passed away, another year of missionary labor had been expended, and they were now called together to hear the report. It was pleasing to think that from the first inception of the Methodist Missionary Society, sixty years ago, its course had ever been onward, and now it embraced peoples, nations and tongues, and was still spreading its beneficial influence.

After alluding to the fact that the Rev. Mr. Woolsey would give the meeting some account of missionary work amongst the Indians of the Northwest, the speaker descanted eloquently on the civil and religious liberty enjoyed by Canadians, and the many great and glorious privileges of the pure Gospel which they had preached to them. He concluded by desiring everyone present to ask themselves how much they could do for God and for the Saviour, who had created and redeemed them, and if they should answer the question of God and their conscience, he was sure, there would be no shortcoming in their donations that night.

JAMES A. MATTHEWSON then read an abstract of the report, from which it appeared that there were last year in the various parts of the world 434 principal stations, 4,648 chapels and preaching places, 920 ministers and 1,457 other paid agents, with 17,903 unpaid agents, 142,449 church members, 154,629 scholars, and 8 printing establishments. The total income for the year was £134,258 7s; while the total expenditure amounted to £150,201 13s 0d, showing a deficiency of £25,943 6s 0d. The Canadian Society's Report shows the total number of missions in the Canadas, Hudson's Bay Territory, and on the Pacific, for 1863 64, to be 177; total number of missionaries 219; salaried lay agents 31: total church members 17,736. The total Canadian income for the year was $53,000; from the Parent Society $10,795 54—total $63,795 54. The expenditure amounted to $65,744 76, leaving a deficiency of $1,949 22. The collections in this city from the Central circuit, $461,58; East circuit, $519 58—total, $5,161 85.

Among the resolutions were the following:—

It was then moved by Rev. Chas. LAVELL, A.M., seconded by Rev. Thos. WOOLSEY;

Resolved.—That the command of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; the multiplying capabilities of the Church; the pressing necessities of our perishing fellow-men;—these and other considerations, call for more earnest prayer, zeal and effort, in order that the gracious purposes of Divine mercy concerning mankind, may be speedily accomplished.

The Rev. Mr. LAVELL, from the lateness of the hour, &c., contented himself by merely moving the resolution.

The Rev. Thos. WOOLSEY, a Wesleyan missionary from the Hudson Bay Territory, in seconding the resolution, said he had been a missionary there now for nine years, laboring amongst the Indians of that region, which was larger than the whole of Europe, and one third which was suitable for cultivation. He had labored in the Saskatchewan Valley, which was as large as France, and was the peculiar field of the Wesleyan missions in that direction.

The position of the Wesleyan Missionaries there was greatly due to the Hudson Bay Company, who had invited in 1840 the sending of such out to labor amongst the Indians. Three Wesleyan missions had been established and assistance and encouragement were rendered to them by the factors and officers of the company. The speaker would wish to vindicate members of the company from aspersions which he had heard cast upon them. Many of them were religious men, and the greatest friendliness had been shown by the Bishop of Rupert's Land and his clergy to the missionaries of this society.—These missionaries had to take the gun and line in the tent and wigwam with the Indian. They had given them an alphabet, and translated the Bible into the native language, and taught them to read it. Their language was strictly grammatical, and had no obscene expression. The speaker exhibited a chart of the syllable signs of the Cree language, and also read several touching letters from various chiefs when they supposed he had abandoned them.

After the resolution had been moved and seconded, the doxology was sung and the benediction pronounced, when the meeting seperated.—Witness.

THE AMERICAN WAR.

Nothing particular has occured since our last issue. Great efforts are being made to overwhelm Lee, and sink the Confederate ship.

Grant is reported to be collecting his strength for a grand attack.

The Richmond Examiner has, or pretends to have, a correspondent at Washington, who says that Gen. Butler's canal will soon be completed. Grant will be reinforced by 50,000 men, and then in connection with a fleet of 50 gunboats now assembling on the James river, a grand land and naval attack is to be made on Richmond. This Washington correspondent urges the arming of 300,000 slaves and says that the bare rumor that this proposition was being seriously entertained in the confederate capital sent up gold 20 per cent in one day in Wall street.

General Sheridan has repulsed another attack of the Confederates; he captured some prisoners, 2 cannon and a large quantity of ammunition and horses.

Sherman is said to have burned Atlanta, and is now directing his course for the Carolinas.

Gen. McClellan has resigned his commission.

MULLER FOUND GUILTY.—In the case of Muller, the jury has returned a verdict of guilty, and the judge passed the sentence of death without the slightest hope of reprive.

The schooner Carrier Dove, loaded with 153 tons of coal, foundered on Monday at ten o'clock twelve miles off Long Point. She was abandonded by the crew, who came ashore in her yawl. All hands were saved.

BODY SNATCHING.—A body was found in a sack yesterday near the mountain, Montreal. The students who had been carrying it away from the cemetery had become alarmed and left it behind.

OTTAWA AND PRESCOTT RAILWAY.—Mr. Bridges representing the G. T. Railway, and Mr. Reynolds representing the Ebbw Vale Iron Company, have made propositions for settling the difficulty connected with the above road, which have been accepted, it is said, by the interested parties. The road, therefore, after undergoing repairs, and some changes to suit the gauge of the Grand Trunk, will be reopened.

THE LATE BANK ROBBERY AT NEW YORK.—The Teller of the Mercantile Bank, Chas. Windsor, is supposed to have sailed on Saturday week for Europe or the West Indies. There is a rumor that the bulk of the money $241,000 was taken out of the bank the night before, but antecedent circumstances lead to the belief that the defalcation had been going on for some time, until further concealment became impracticable. Windsor, however, is said to have had the free use of the keys of the vault on the privious Friday afternoon, and may have helped himself to a large additional amount in gold or currency, with the purpose of absconding the next morning.

KNOX COLLEGE.—At a meeting of the Ottawa Presbytery (Canada Presbyterian Church) last week, the Rev. Thomas Wardrope gave notice that at the next ordinary meeting, he would move, seconded by the Rev. S. C. Fraser, that the Rev. W. Ormiston, D.D., Hamilton, be nominated by the Presbytery for the vacant Professorship in Knox College, Toronto.

THE FEDERAL DEBT.—It is now officially admitted that the Federal debt amounts to $3 017,692,515—Two thousand and seventeen million dollars! Only think of it, and the war "scarcely begun"—so the American papers say.

QUEBEC, Nov. 12.—Mr. George Desbarats, Queen's Printer, died this morning in Montreal. With his death the Commission expires, but it is altogether probable that the Hon. Malcom Cameron will be appointed Queen's Printer until the confederation of the Provinces.

On the night of the 4th, the cupola of the New Court House, Napanee, fell, carrying with it a large portion of the roof and part of the front wall; an imperfect arch was the cause. Had the fall taken place two hours before, a number of lives would have been lost, as several men were working in the building.

BEWARE OF THAT DANGER!—Most all of our diseases arise from our own disregard of the the laws of life: a cold becomes a sore throat, hoarseness, difficulty of breathing, cough, &c. Now a single 25 cent box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers will prevent all these serious consequences. Sold by all Druggists.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.—Again rumors reach us that the Treaty is in danger, and we fear there is some foundation for these statements, but we have every faith in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" in cases of rheumatism, neuralgia, burns, bruises, &c. Can be had in every city, town or village at 25 cents per bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—A STARTLING TRUTH.—Those who die with the means of cure at hand commit constructive suicide, and as these wonderful pills eradicate all complaints of the digestive and secretive organs, sufferers from these maladies, who neglect to take them, incur a fearful responsibility.

Sold at the manufactories, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York, and No. 244 Strand, London, and by all druggists. If the reader of this "notice" cannot get a box of Pills or Ointment from the drug store in his place, let him write to me, 80 Maiden Lane, enclosing the amount, and I will mail a box free of expense. Many dealers will not keep my medicines on hand because they cannot make as much profit as on other person's make. 25c., 62½c., and $1 per pot.

The Oxygenated Bitters in Canada.

The following testimony from a well known Editor, is corroborative of the general approval given to Dr. Green's

OXYGENATED BITTERS:

PETERBORO', 12th Jan., 1860.

Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Co.,

Gentlemen—Having used your Oxygenated Bitters at intervals for some time. I with great willingness testify to their excellency as a tonic, in the relief of Dyspepsia and its attendant ennui, arising from sedentary pursuits. No Bitters that I have ever used, has afforded me such speedy relief.

Tobacco should not be chewed but smoked.

If a man is given to liquor, let not liquor be given to him.

How to keep your friends.—Never ask any of them to do you a service.

A New York fellow down South spells Temperance after this fashion—10 a c.

Mrs. Partington makes Shakespeare say "Sweet are the uses of advertisers, etc."

One who is half man, half dog, will bow to the rich and bow-wow to the poor.

New explanation of the "golden mean"—to have gold and be too mean to use it.

Why is a lovely young lady like a binge? Because she is something to adore.

If you visit a sweet girl, and if you are wise and she is wise, then you shall both be one.

Why didn't the lost dollar return to the ark? Because the half million pounds lay remaining.

If you want to kiss a pretty girl, why, kiss her—if you can. If a pretty girl wants to kiss you, let her—like a man.

What is that which is a cat, is like a cat, and you'd think it was a cat, but is not a cat? A kitten.

Water is not a fashionable beverage for drinking your neighbor's health, but it is a capital one for drinking your own.

Believe misfortune quickly. A man is like an egg—the longer he is kept in hot water the harder he is when taken out.

Gone a Fishing.—A young woman, on alighting from a stage, dropped a ribbon from her bonnet in the bottom of the coach "You have left your bow behind you," said a lady passenger. "No I haven't, he's gone a fishing," innocently replied the girl.

When a man presents himself before a public audience, it often happens that his body is inclined to sink while his head swims.

A conscript being told that it was sweet to die for his country, tried to excuse himself on the ground that he never did like sweet things.

Generally, a love quarrel, like the name of a certain big fire-arm, ends in a blaze! And begins, like the same name, in a blunder.

A Poughkeepsie paper states that a bridge was constructed across the Hudson river at that place, by a Mr. J. Frost, in one night.

Thomas Hood died composing a humorous poem. He is said to have remarked that he was dying out of charity to the undertaker, who wished to urn a lively Hood.

A young Minister of the Wesleyan Methodist Church is attracting a good deal of attention in England by his preaching. He is said to be almost as popular as Mr. Spurgeon. He is at present on the Ipswich Circuit.

A schoolboy having good-naturedly assisted another in a difficult ciphering lesson, was angrily asked by the teacher, "Why did you work his lesson?" "To lessen his work," replied the youngster.

An old gentleman, on retiring from business, gave the following sage advice to his son and successor: "Common sense, my son, is valuable in all kinds of business—except love making."

An Irishman being asked whether he did not frequently converse with a friend in Irish, replied no; No, indeed, Jemmy often speaks to me in Irish, but I always answered him in English. Why so? Because you see, I don't want Jemmy to know I understand Irish.

The late Marquis of Waterford, of Ireland, was in the habit of riding in the second-class carriages of the railroad in that vicinity. Such a course very highly disgusted the proprietors, and they resolved to cure the marquis, as they said, of his eccentricity. Accordingly, on one occasion, as he was sitting in a second-class carriage, a sweep, who had previously been in a third-class compartment, was invited out, and placed by the marquis' side. His lordship immediately got out and purchased a first-class ticket. On delivering it to him, the clerk laughed, as if the company had gained a victory. But Lord Waterford quietly returned to the train, gave the first-class ticket to the sweep, and gravely escorted him to his place of honor, and then resumed his own place in the second-class, from which the proprietors never again sought to remove him.

Fashionable Call.—Enter Miss Lucy, nearly out of breath with the exertion of walking from her papa's carriage in the street to the door of her friend.

Lucy.—"O Marie! How do you do? How delighted I am to see you! How have you been since you were at the ball last Thursday evening? O wasn't the appearance of that tall girl in pink perfectly frightful? Is this your shawl on the piano? Beautiful shawl! Father says he is going to send to Paris to get me a shawl in the spring. I can't bear home made shawls! How do like Monsieur Espray? Beautiful man sing, he? Now don't laugh, Marie, for I am sure I don't care anything about him! O, my! I must be going! It's a beautiful day, isn't it? Marie, when are you coming up to see me? O dear! a beautiful pin! That pin was given to you, now I know it was Marie; don't deny it, Harry is coming up to see me this evening, but I hate him—I really; but he has a beautiful moustache, hasn't he Marie? O dear it's very warm. Good morning, Marie! Don't speak of Harry in connection with my name to any one; for I am sure it will never amount to any thing, but I hate him awfully—I'm sure I do Adieu."

Two Yankees were strolling in the woods without any arms in their possession, and observing a bear ascending a tree with its large paws clasped round the trunk, one of them ran forward and caught the bear's paws, one in each hand. He instantly called out to his comrade: "Jonathan, I say, go home and bring me something as fast as you can to kill the varmint. Mind you don't stay, or I'm in a fix."

Jonathan ran off as fast as he could, but was exceedingly long time in returning. During the interval, the bear made several desperate attempts to bite the hand of him who held it. At length Jonathan came back.

"Hello, what in the deuce kept you so long?"

Jonathan replied, "Well, I'll tell you: when I got home, breakfast was ready, and I guessed it would be as well to wait for it."

"Here now, Jonathan, said his comrade, come you and hold it, and I will kill the critter in a jiffy.

Jonathan seized the bear's paws and held the animal until the other should kill it.

"Well, have you hold of him?"

"I guess I have."

"Very well, hold him fast; I am off for dinner."

In consequence of the great stagnation of trade in the manufacturing districts of England through the war having cut off the supply of cotton, a large quantity of Valuable Jewelry, originally intended for the English market, has been sent off for sale in this country, and must be sold at any sacrifice!
Under these circumstance, Arrandale & Co., acting as Agents for the principle European Manufacturers, have resolved upon a great Gift distribution, subject to the following regulations:—
☞ Certificates, naming each article and its value, are placed in sealed envelopes, and well mixed. One of these envelopes will be sent by mail to any address, on receipt of 25 cents.
All articles sold at One Dollar each, without regard to value!
On receipt of the Certificate, you will see what you are going to have, and then it is at your option to send the Dollar and take the article or not. Purchasers may thus obtain a Gold Watch, Diamond Ring, or any set of Jewelry in our list, for One Dollar, and in no case can they get less than One Dollars worth, as there are no blanks. The price of Certificates are as follows:—

One for	25 cents.
Five for	$1
Eleven for	2
Thirty for	5
Sixty-five for	10.
One hundred for	15

Agents will be allowed ten cents on every Certificate ordered by them, provided their remittance amounts to One Dollar. Agents will collect 25 cents for every Certificate, and remit 15 cents to us, either in cash or postage stamps.

Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

A CARD.
To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.
Sir,—I think it my duty to inform the public that, having tried almost every known remedy for the cure of Rheumatism, I was unsuccessful, until I heard of Dr. Morris' Balm, or Poor Man's Friend,—before using half a bottle of which I was perfectly cured. My thanks are due to Dr. Morris for the Medicine.
I am, your obedient servant,
JOHN ARCHER.

H. CALCUTT'S
Compound
Liquid Cooler & Heater!
PATENTED 1864.
Having obtained a Patent for an Upright Corrugated Tubular Cooler and Heater, I am prepared to furnish the Brewery of Canada, with a Cobler capable of cooling Beer directly from the boiler, at the rate of from 5 to 100 gallons per minute, entirely doing away with the old fashioned Wooden Cooler. Brewers by the use of my Cooler are enabled to brew through the hottest weather without the slightest danger of their beer sensing. The apparatus is of so simple a construction and occupies such a small space, that they can be furnished for a very small price, enabling every Brewer to possess one. The price is according to size.
I am also prepared to apply them to Steam Engines as a heater for one fourth the price of any other heater now in use. It will heat double the quantity of water with the exhaust steam that is required to feed the boiler, thereby saving one half the fuel.
All orders addressed to H. Calcutt, Peterboro, will be promptly attended to.

THE CONFERENCE.

RESULT OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

We give the following as a statement of the result of the proceedings of the Conference; for its verbal accuracy we cannot vouch—but, perhaps, it is near the truth:

I. The Conference began very properly with a declaration that the best interests and present and future prosperity of British North America will be promoted by a Federal Union under the Crown of Great Britain.

II. They then proceeded to declare that in the Federation of the British North American Provinces the system of Government best adapted under existing circumstances to protect the diversified interests of the several Provinces, and to secure efficiency, harmony, and promptness in the working of the Union would be a general Government charged with matters of common interest to the whole country, and Local Governments for each of the Canadas, and for the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island and charged with the control of local matters in their respective sections, provision being made for the admission into the Union on equitable terms of Newfoundland, the North-West Territory, British Columbia, and Vancouver.

III. In framing a Constitution for the General Government, the Conference, with a view to the perpetuation of our connection with the Mother country, and to the promotion of the best interests of the people of these Provinces, desire to follow the model of the British Constitution, so far as our circumstances will permit.

THE EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY.

IV. The Executive authority or Government shall be vested in the Sovereign of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and be administered according to the well understood principles of the British Constitution by the Sovereign personally, or by the Representative of the Sovereign duly authorized.

V. The Sovereign or Representative of the Sovereign shall be Commander-in-Chief of the Land and Naval Militia Forces.

CONSTITUTION OF THE PARLIAMENT.

VI. A General Legislature or Parliament is provided for the Federated Provinces, composed of a Legislative Council and a House of Commons.

VII. For the purpose of forming the Legislative Council, the Federated Provinces are to be considered as consisting of three divisions—1st, Upper Canada; 2nd, Lower Canada; 3rd, Acadia, or Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, each division with an equal representation in the Legislative Council.

VIII. Upper Canada is to be represented in the Legislative Council by 24 members, Lower Canada by 24 members, and the three Maritime Provinces by 24 members, of which Nova Scotia shall have 10, New Brunswick 10, and Prince Edward Island 4 members.

IX. The colony of Newfoundland will be entitled to enter the proposed Union, with a representation in the Legislative Council of 4 members.

X. The North-West Territory, British Columbia and Vancouver will be admitted into the Union on such terms and conditions as the Parliament of the Federal Provinces shall deem equitable, and as shall receive the assent of her Majesty; and in the case of the Province of British Columbia or Vancouver, as shall be agreed to by the Legislature of such Province.

XI. The members of the Legislative Council are to be appointed by the Crown under the Great Seal of the General Government, and shall hold office during life; if any Legislative Councillor shall, for two consecutive sessions of Parliament, fail to give his attendance in the said Council, his seat shall thereupon become vacant.

XII. XIII. If any question shall arise as to the qualification of a Legislative Councillor the same is to be determined by the Council.

XIV. The first selection of the members of the Legislative Council to be made from the Legislative Councils of the various Provinces, except as regards Prince Edward Island, so far as a sufficient number be found qualified and willing to serve; such members shall be appointed by the Crown, at the recommendation of the General Executive Government, upon the nomination of the Local Governments, and in such nomination due regard is to be had to the claims of the Members of the Legislative Council of the opposition in each Province, so that all political parties may as nearly as possible be fairly represented.

XV. The Speaker of the Legislative Council (until otherwise provided by Parliament) is to be appointed by the Crown from among the members of the Legislative Council, and to hold office during pleasure, and shall only be entitled to a casting vote on an equality of votes.

New Brunswick	15
Newfoundland	8
and Prince Edward Island	5

XVIII. Until the official census of 1871 has been made up, there will be no change in the number of representatives from the several sections.

XIX. Immediately after every decennial census thereafter, the representation from each section in the House of Commons is to be re-adjusted on the basis of population.

XX. For the purpose of such re-adjustments, Lower Canada will always be assigned sixty-five members, and each of the other sections shall at each re-adjustment receive, for the ten years then next succeeding the number of members to which it will be entitled on the same ratio of representation to population as Lower Canada will enjoy according to the Census then taken by having sixty-five members.

XXI. No reduction is to be made in the number of Members returned by any section, unless its population shall have decreased relatively to the whole population of the Union to the extent of five per centum.

XXII. In computing to each decennial period the number of Members to which each section is entitled, no fractional parts will be considered, unless when exceeding one half the number entitling to a Member, in which case a Member shall be given for such such fractional part.

XXIII. The Legislature of each Province will divide such Province into the proper number of constituencies, and define their boundaries.

XXIV. The number of Members may at any time be increased by the General Parliament,—regard being had to the proportionate rights then existing.

XXV. The Local Legislature of each Province may, from time to time, alter the Electoral Districts for the purpose of Representation in the House of Commons, and distribute the representatives to which the Province is entitled, in any manner such Legislature may think fit.

XXVI. Until provisions are made by the General Parliament, all the Laws which at the time of the Proclamation constituting the Union, are in force in the Provinces respectively, relating to the qualification and disqualification of any person to be elected or to sit or vote as a member of the Assembly in the said Provinces respectively—and relating to the qualification or disqualification of voters, and to the oaths to be taken by voters, and to Returning Officers and their powers and duties,—and relating to the proceedings at Elections,—and to the period during which such Elections may be continued, and relating to the Trial of Contested Elections, and the proceedings incident thereto and relating to the vacant seats of Members and to the issuing and execution of new Writs in case of any seat being vacated otherwise than by a dissolution,—shall respectively apply to Elections of Members to serve in the House of Commons, for places situate in those Provinces respectively.

XXVII. Every House of Commons is to continue for five years from the day of the return of the writs—choosing the same, and no longer, subject nevertheless, to be sooner prorogued or dissolved by the Governor.
